JAPAN SEEKS NO QUARREL WITH U. S.—HIROTA

Foreign Chief Asks for Friendship.

Far East Situation

TOKIO.—The resignation of Lieut. Gen. Sadao Araki as minister of war was regarded as ending the militaristic dictatorship in Japan. Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, a more conservative soldier, succeeds Araki.

MOSCOW.—Communist leaders warn soviet Russia of the danger of war. Japan regarded as threat to peace. Speakers call Great Britain archconspirator against soviet union.

SINGAPORE. — Great Britain strengthens $250,000,000 naval base until it begins to rival Gibraltar. Admirals of the British, Australian, and New Zealand navies meet today to discuss problems of common defense in far east.

TOKIO, Jan. 23.—[Tuesday.]—(AP)—Foreign Minister Koki Hirota told the Japanese diet today that "between Japan and the United States of America there exists no question that is intrinsically difficult of solution."

He asserted that Japan "fervently desires American friendship."

At the same time he said "it is most surprising and regrettable" that soviet Russia should direct "unwarranted criticisms against Japan."

He told the legislators that the Japanese government believed "proper adjustment of the tripartite relationship between Japan, Manchukuo and the soviet union was of paramount importance for the tranquillity of East Asia."

Turns to Relations with U. S.

Then Hirota turned directly to the question of relations with the United States.

"It may be definitely stated that between Japan and the United States of America there exists no question that is intrinsically difficult of solution," the foreign minister said. "Far from having any thought of picking a quarrel with America, Japan fervently desires American friendship. At the same time I am confident that the United States will not fail to appraise correctly Japan's position in East Asia.

"Only for a time following the outbreak of the Manchurian incident, public opinion in America was aroused against Japan, bringing about something like temporary estrangement of the two peoples. It is hardly necessary to reiterate that Japan is actuated by no ulterior motive other than her desire to establish enduring peace in East Asia.

Sees 'Emotional Tension' Dying.

"Therefore if only America will clearly perceive the actual condition of the orient and realize Japan's rôle as a stabilizing force in East Asia, whatever emotional tension may yet linger between the two peoples is bound to disappear.

"I sincerely hope that the two great nations across the Pacific will, in view of their important relations, commercial and otherwise, continue to join forces in cultivating their historical friendship and good understanding so as to keep the ocean forever true to its name."

Hirota began his speech at 10:30 a. m. in an atmosphere that gave a truer ring to his declaration of Japan's desire for the friendship of neighboring powers.

Bristling Mustache Missing.

The familiar bristling mustache—which had become the symbol of militarism in the minds of the Japanese people—of Gen. Sadao Araki, who resigned yesterday as minister of war—was missing as the cabinet faced the reconvened diet. The consensus of political leaders, as quoted in vernacular newspapers, was that a dynamic and dangerous element had been removed.

Although the newly installed Gen. Senjuro Hayashi—also the wearer of sweeping, upturned mustaches—occupied the war minister's seat and was understood to have told Premier Saito when accepting the portfolio that he would carry on Gen. Araki's policies, the majority opinion was that a more stable period had opened.

Hirota gave the question of Manchukuo, the nation which Japan created in Manchuria, first place in his address. He referred at once to the withdrawal of Japan from the league of nations last year, giving as his reason "that there was no agreement between Japan and the league on the funda-

JURY IN HACKETT CASE ACTS FAST ON 2 ABDUCTORS

Out Only Two Hours; Victim Present.

BY GEORGE WRIGHT.

Frank Souder, Benton, Ill., bootlegger and gambler, and Gail E. Swolley, Peoria saloonkeeper, were found guilty of kidnaping James J. Hackett for ransom after two hours deliberation last night by a jury in Judge Thomas J. Lynch's Criminal court.

The jury fixed the punishment of each defendant at life imprisonment, which means they must serve at least 20 years in the penitentiary before they are eligible to apply for parole.

Victim Hears Verdict.

Hackett, Blue Island gambler, who twice was the victim of the downstate gang of kidnapers, was in court to hear the verdict rendered by the jury. He was first kidnaped in May, 1931, and paid $75,000 ransom. The second kidnaping occurred May 27, 1933, at 127th street and Cicero avenue, in Alsip, and that time Hackett paid $1,500 of a promised $10,000 ransom.

Assistant State's Attorneys Mal Coghlan and Emmett Moynihan, who had demanded a death verdict as an example to kidnapers, said they were satisfied with the verdict of the jury. Only three of the jurors wanted to inflict the death penalty.

Return Verdict in 2 Hours.

The jury retired to deliberate on a verdict shortly before 5 o'clock. Two hours later the jurors knocked at the door, signifying a verdict was reached. The courtroom was heavily guarded.

Capt. Daniel Gilbert, acting on the orders of Judge Lynch, ordered the courtroom cleared. The spectators were subjected to a search before they were allowed to reënter the courtroom and hear the verdict read. This caused a delay of fifteen minutes.

In the meantime the defendants were brought into court and placed in their usual chairs beside the counsel table. Souder, a tall, well built man, sat next to the table. He seemed not the least bit nervous as he stared through his gold rimmed glasses at the jury room door, waiting for the twelve men who held his fate to be led into the jury box.

Swolley, also a comparatively tall man but much stouter than his companion in the kidnaping racket, was obviously nervous. He pulled his handkerchief from his pocket and mopped his face several times. Finally he folded his hands together and allowed them to rest in his lap as he waited for the verdict to be read.

Unmoved by Verdict.

When the jury was led back into the room Judge Lynch addressed the foreman, Leo Wolins, 2040 North Springfield avenue, and inquired if a verdict had been reached. The verdicts were then handed to the clerk. He read the one for Souder first and the man, whom state witnesses have portrayed as a ruthless gunman despite his appearance of a successful business man, showed not the slightest emotion. Swolley flushed when it came his turn to hear the life sentence.

The good looking wives of the two defendants, who have been constant spectators at the trial, were not present at the time the verdicts were read. They apparently had been warned by the defense attorneys to "look for a severe verdict." Attorney James M. Burke earlier had privately admitted in Judge Lynch's chambers that he "did not have a limb to hang his hat on" and that he was only fighting to win for his clients escape from the electric chair.

Hackett Under Guard.

Hackett, who braved gang vengeance to testify against the kidnapers, was seated along the side of the courtroom under heavy police guard. His wife was next to him. It was learned that she had urged him to go through with the prosecution. Prosecutor Coghlan congratulated her for so doing.

Hackett said he was satisfied with the verdict.

"This is a splendid victory," said Prosecutor Coghlan. "It will serve notice that State's Attorney Courtney will not stand for this kidnaping racket. We are satisfied with the life verdict."

Judge Lynch ordered the defense attorneys to make any motions for a new trial in writing. He will decide on the motions on Jan. 26.

The jurors, who took four ballots, they said, were escorted from the Criminal Court building under heavy police guard. They said on the first ballot two men stood out against con-

Myrtle Admits Kisses, Love Notes at Trial

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge, former collector of internal revenue, a vivacious witness on the stand in Superior court yesterday in the first day of the trial in which she is the defendant in a $100,000 suit for alienation of affections, admitted that she kissed Policeman Norman E. Nottingham, Grand Crossing station patrol wagon driver.

She admitted the kisses, which she described as "not platonic kisses, nor burning kisses, but just kisses"; and she admitted having held frequent rendezvous with Nottingham in the past. She admitted that she and Nottingham met in a south side apartment as recently as Sunday night and discussed the forthcoming trial. And she admitted—all with a smile—writing love letters to the policeman, whom she affectionately called "Denny."

First Witness in Case.

Mrs. Blacklidge was the first witness in the suit brought against her by the policeman's wife, Mrs. Susanne Nottingham, 8453 Vernon avenue. The case is being heard by a jury before Judge Irving C. Weaver of Sterling, who is sitting in Superior court here.

Attorney Murphy O. Tate, counsel for Mrs. Nottingham, was able to call the defendant for cross-examination with[illegible]ound by her testimony, under [illegible]avil practice act which became effective Jan. 1. She was on the witness stand for more than an hour, after which two additional witnesses for the plaintiff testified. Court was adjourned until 10 a. m. today, when Mrs. Nottingham is expected to testify in her own behalf. Tate said he expected to complete his case by noon.

Snaps Out Replies.

Facing the jury as she assumed the witness stand, smartly dressed in a gown of black satin and black dull crepe, with tailored black hat, Mrs. Blacklidge snapped out her replies to Attorney Tate's questions with such readiness that her three attorneys often were unable to voice an objection until her answer had been given.

Tate was suave and unruffled, but he mopped his brow at the completion of the examination. Mrs. Blacklidge, calm and defiant, stepped down from the witness chair and even smiled a little at the jury.

Throughout her testimony Mrs.

Harry I. Star, owner of a drug store at 1365 East Marquette road, shot and killed one of four Negro bandits during a robbery in his store last night. His clerk, Leroy Knudtson, 1321 East Marquette road, was slightly wounded in the left arm by a robber bullet.

Star and a customer, Edward J. Meyers, 6642 Woodlawn avenue, were in the pharmacy when the Negroes entered. Star was robbed of $70 and Meyers of $5.50. Then both were put into a rear room.

A minute later Star crept out, grabbed a revolver he had hidden under a counter, and opened fire on the nearest robber. He shot the man in the head and body. The gunman fired two shots at Star, then staggered outside of the store, where he collapsed and died. Meanwhile Knudtson, the clerk, entered the store, and the three other bandits fired at him. They fled in a car containing two other men, leaving their slain confederate behind. He was later identified through fingerprint records as William Alexander, 28 years old, an ex-convict who served terms at Joliet prison and Pontiac reformatory.

CALLS NEW P. O. SO POROUS TIDES RISE IN CELLAR

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Saul Haas, collector of customs for the Seattle district, told federal officials today that leakage in the new $3,000,000 federal building there "is so bad that the tides of Puget sound rise and fall in the basement."

Haas also is custodian of the federal office building, a reinforced concrete structure, completed about two years ago.

"I have taken a brick out of the building with my penknife," Haas said he told the supervising architect here.

Haas said he had told Senator Bone [Dem., Wash.] that the least earth shock, comparable with those experienced on the Pacific coast during the last two or three years, would "leave the building a naked skeleton."

Robbers Slug Woman in Home; Rob Her of $217

Mrs. Lillian Olsen, 35 years old, caretaker in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Eklund at 6942 Stony Island avenue, was slugged by two bandits in the Eklund home last night and robbed of $217 belonging to her employers. Eklund, a merchant, and his wife are in Florida. The robbers, after hitting Mrs. Olsen, then ransacked the house and found the money.

Long Croons Vote Plea in New Orleans

New Orleans, La., Jan. 22.—(AP)—In an atmosphere thick with charges and counter charges of bribery, graft, corruption, and reputed plots for trickery at the polls, candidates for New Orleans municipal posts for the next four years tonight rested their cases with the voters.

U. S. Senator Huey P. Long became a radio crooner in his final plea for the ticket he supports. After charging one of his opponents with maintaining unnumbered relatives in public jobs, he sang "The Whole Dam Family," followed by "anti-Long, little bogey, anti-Long, little bogey, anti-L-o-o-n-g." This was a parody on the cowboy song: "Roll along little doggies, roll along, roll a-l-o-n-g-."

Special Citizen Guard.

Under protection of a band of 300 volunteer citizens, sworn in as special officers with super-police powers, the city hoped for a peaceful election tomorrow in contrast with the gale of vituperation and recriminations which has marked the progress of the campaign since the Christmas holidays.

Threats from the state administration on one hand to call out the National Guard for the primary, and from the city hall on the other to swear in 10,000 extra police if that was done, inspired the "special guard of 300."

Victory in tomorrow's Democratic primary is tantamount to election, but the New Orleans Socialist party today made a strident appeal for the voters to remain away from the polls and participate instead in the April general election, "when issues may be voted upon." Walter Smith is the Socialist nominee for the April election.

Long, after breaking up an alliance with the city hall, put a ticket in the field. He boasted he slept about two hours out of every 24.

Who's Who at Polls.

Four factional slates will be submitted to the Democratic voters. These are headed by the mayoralty candidates of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, old regular chieftain, seeking reëlection on a pledge that he has "broken with Long forever"; Francis Williams, state public service commissioner, an independent who promises "to eliminate Long from public life"; John Klorer, resigned levee board engineer backed by the Long faction, who has told the voters he will not be dominated by Long in spite of the Long machine support, and Herbert B. Holmes, a business man and independent, who has merely placed his name and slate in the field without an active campaign.

Oxygen Tent Used in Fight on Pneumonia

BULLETIN.

At 3 o'clock this morning the doctors attending Mr. Traylor reported that his condition was unchanged, except for an increase in his pulse beat. They said they felt optimistic over the progress he had made since yesterday. Mr. Traylor himself kept up a cheery front, they added, thereby aiding his own battle.

Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National bank, rallied encouragingly last evening from the relapse in his fight against pneumonia which earlier yesterday had caused grave fear to be expressed for his life.

Mr. Traylor was kept under an oxygen tent in his home at 426 Barry avenue, with a physician in constant attendance. It was explained, however, that this was done to give his body every possible aid in fighting off the new infection which suddenly appeared yesterday morning. The five physicians consulting on the case believed the crisis of the illness passed.

Dr. Cubbins Optimistic.

At 11:30 p. m. Dr. William R. Cubbins, family physician and spokesman for the consultants in the case, announced that the patient was "very much easier" and that the physicians were "greatly encouraged."

"There has been considerable improvement in Mr. Traylor's condition tonight over that of the early morning," Dr. Cubbins said. "His appearance is much improved. Mr. Traylor, however, is still a very sick man. We expect to keep him in the oxygen tent for three or four days."

Dr. Cubbins said that Mr. Traylor's temperature had dropped to 103 from an earlier high of 104. His respiration rate had gone down to 36 a minute from an earlier 50, and his pulse rate was 120 beats a minute.

Three Specialists Consulting.

Consulting with Dr. Cubbins in the case are Dr. Robert B. Preble, Dr. N. Clarke Gilbert, and Dr. Joseph A. Capps, all heart and lung specialists. Dr. Carl Johnson of the Northwestern university medical faculty remained constantly to administer the oxygen.

Dr. Gilbert, it was learned, assured Mrs. Traylor and her daughter, Nancy, that Mr. Traylor would recover. Earlier, the son of the family, Melvin Jr., had been summoned from his classes at Leland Stanford university. He boarded a plane at San Francisco last night and was expected this morning.

Nine Days of Pneumonia.

Mr. Traylor developed pneumonia nine days ago after he had been taken ill with influenza. His condition was regarded at no time as particularly dangerous and on Sunday he was regarded as definitely on the road to improvement.

About 4:30 a. m. yesterday, however, he had a sudden and critical relapse.

Mr. Traylor was placed under the oxygen tent at 10:30 a. m. He suffered little pain and, despite his high fever, was fully conscious and free from delirium most of the time. He was aware of the gravity of his condition and once remarked to his physicians: "Well, this is certainly a battle royal."

His ultimate recovery, physicians said, depended upon the ability of his heart, already weakened by pneumonia, to withstand the new strain. Mr. Traylor is 55 years old.

DR. WYNEKOOP'S TRIAL STOPPED BY JUDGE DAVID

Life in Peril Under Stress, He Decides.

BY WALTER FITZMAURICE.

The Wynekoop murder case, in its eighth day on trial before Judge Joseph B. David, came to an abrupt, inconclusive, and almost unprecedented close yesterday.

With the defense attorneys dangling before the court the specter of their invalid client, Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, dropping dead before the jury's eyes if the case went on, Judge David overruled the vehement protest of the state and declared a mistrial.

To comply with the legal formalities a bailiff stepped before the jury and beckoned Juror William A. Grummitt out of the box. Mr. Grummitt, a cartage contractor, stepped down.

Jury Technically Disrupted.

The jury, which Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty had qualified to inflict the death penalty, was thereby technically disrupted, giving the legal basis for a mistrial, and the 63 year old defendant, alleged perpetrator of the operating table murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, gained the respite her attorneys asked on her behalf.

Prosecutor Dougherty promised that the respite would not exceed thirty days. Within that time, he pledged, the state would have Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan of the Criminal court reassign the case to another judge, Judge David having sent it back to the chief justice without prejudice to state or defense.

Dr. Alice Wonders About Bail.

At 9:30 last night Dr. Constantine Theodore, assistant physician in the county jail, examined Dr. Wynekoop and reported that he found her condition still serious. She complained of heart pains, he said. She appeared anxious as to what will happen to her now that a mistrial has been declared, and expressed curiosity over whether she would be freed from jail, Dr. Theodore added.

At the same time her attorneys were discussing the chances of procuring her release on bail, while Prosecutor Dougherty was insisting she must remain in jail until a second trial.

The prosecutor declared he would vigorously oppose bail. He cited the statute, which directs that "in any capital case where strong presumption of guilt exists, bail must be denied." Dougherty argued that if any case held a strong presumption of guilt, "certainly it is this one."

Defendant Not in Court.

Dr. Wynekoop was not in court as Judge David had Juror Grummitt withdrawn and declared a mistrial. But she herself signed the defense petition for a mistrial in spite of her previously professed desire for an immediate verdict and vindication. Her attorneys procured her signature in the county jail infirmary at the insistence of the court, the defendant insisting to the end that she acceded "only for the children's sake."

In announcing his decision Judge David said: "I take this action in the interests of justice, ungoverned by sympathy, clamor or precedent."

Dr. Wynekoop's son, Walker, and her daughter, Dr. Catherine Wynekoop, smiled. Prosecutor Dougherty, about to lose control for the time of the biggest murder case he has ever tried, looked glum.

Judge Invokes Humanity.

"Humanity would dictate that this court should not allow even the remotest possibility of the defendant becoming deceased while her trial is in progress," Judge David continued.

"I have been around the courts for fifty years in one capacity or another, but have never confronted a case like this," the judge sollioquized. "It is important that crime be punished, yes—but it is equally important that defendants have their full faculties at the time of trial. To bring a person into court in a semi-helpless condition to be tried for her life would be obnoxious to ordinary decency."

Defendant's Son Jubilant.

Walker Wynekoop leaned to whisper jubilantly to his sister. "It's a victory," he exclaimed.

"Yes, but it's not vindication," Dr. Catherine retorted, including the reporters in her reply. "It's a delay the family wanted—not mother. Once she gets her strength, she'll go to trial once more."

But notwithstanding the daughter's declaration and Prosecutor Dougherty's avowal of starting anew within a month, there were indications last night that the death of Rheta Wynekoop may forever remain the mystery the defense sought to make it, and that Dr. Wynekoop may never again be tried.

Plea of the Prosecutor.

Dougherty had hinted his own fear of such a termination in urging the court to refuse a mistrial. The prosecutor was forced to one concession after a medical commission of three physicians, approved by the court, had found the defendant seriously ill and had recommended that she be allowed the ease of a reclining chair if the trial went on.

"To the end that justice be served, we will agree to the medical commission's suggestion that the defendant be permitted to recline on an invalid's chair in the presence of the jury," Prosecutor Dougherty conceded.

"But that's as far as we will go. We agree with the defense that the summoning of the defendant to her Maker in the presence of this court would be a sorry spectacle. But we maintain it would be a sorrier spectacle if the murder for which she was indicted should go unpunished.

"For, your honor," Dougherty here shook an admonishing finger at the court, "if this woman is not tried now she may never be tried."

Prosecutor Has His Say.

For the first time since the case opened, Judge David seemed disposed to hear both sides of the argument on mistrial without an interruption. Prosecutor Dougherty continued:

"The only trouble in this case was that this defendant has been extended courtesies to which she was not wholly entitled, and which the state allowed to occur with only mild objections.

"It seems to me that if Dr. Wynekoop were truly animated by anxiety for her health she would be the first to demand a speedy vindication and the last to ask delay."

Again Dougherty raised an admonishing finger.

"We have no desire to persecute, but we believe the evidence demands the issue be tried to a conclusion now. We won't take long to do it, and your honor must consider that a declaration of mistrial may be establishing a dangerous precedent, which may be followed repeatedly hereafter by defendants lacking the moral courage to face the issue of their guilt."

Dr. Catherine Angered.

Dr. Catherine whispered to her brother and directed a wrathful glance at the prosecutor as he finished. Her face brightened a moment later as the chief of her mother's counsel, W. W. Smith, began a plea for mistrial and delay.

"This woman is utterly helpless," Smith began with vehemence.

He recalled the eight collapses his client suffered in and out of court since the case began. His voice dropped to a quaver and the gum chewing housewives who have packed the court every day strained forward to hear.

"Your honor," Smith implored, "I thought the breath had left that poor lady's body last Thursday night when she collapsed in court. I thought she was dying.'

Judge Stretches His Arms.

The housewives ceased chewing their gum. Dr. Catherine dabbed her moistening eyes. Judge David stretched his arms, then passed a reflective hand across his brow. Prosecutor Dougherty studied the floor.

"I ask your honor to reflect what a dreadful spectacle it would be were this helpless defendant to pass away with her cause on trial," Smith climaxed his argument.

"We of defense counsel are unwilling to accept the responsibility—we can only beseech your honor to withdraw a juror and declare this case a mistrial," he concluded with outstretched, imploring arms.

Judge David communed in silence with himself for a full three minutes, while Dr. Wynekoop's relatives, her lawyers, and the spectators waited tensely.

Judge Begins His Ruling.

Then for eight or ten minutes the judge extolled the diligence of prosecution and defense, recalled old incidents of his own fifty years in the law, and at last came to the point of his ruling. He revealed that he had been "bombarded" with mail on the case, but averred that none of the letters had swayed his judgment the slightest.

"It would be extremely unfortunate if the state were without a remedy in this issue," he declared in the first indication of the trend his mind was taking. "But if the state is without such remedy, that is not the fault of the court."

From the dejection of Prosecutor Dougherty's drooping shoulders more than from the judge's carefully balanced sentences the crowd began to sense their coming disappointment. Within ten minutes the judge had finished, the jury had been summoned to hear his brief explanation of the origin of the mistrial, and Juror Grummitt had been withdrawn from the box.

Matrons Are Disappointed.

It was over—for the time at least and the big bosomed matrons who had been awaiting the supreme sensation of seeing Dr. Wynekoop die in court appeared quite enraged.

"Ain't it a shame?" one ample woman cried as she charged towards the door. "I've neglected my bridge nearly two weeks to see her get the chair and this had to happen. I'm going home."

In explaining his decision to the jury, Judge David indicated he was governed largely by the opinion of his own nominee, Dr. Arthur Byfield, who with Dr. William D. McNally for the state and Dr. Frank Chauvet for the defense comprised the medical commission delegated to determine the defendant's ability to withstand further testimony.

Quoting from Dr. Byfield's report, the judge laid particular stress on the last paragraph, which said:

"It is my opinion, everything considered, that to subject Dr. Wynekoop at this time to the ordeals of the remainder of the trial constitutes a very real danger to her life."

Opinions of Five Physicians Contribute to Ending of Wynekoop Case in Mistrial

The opinions of five physicians—expressed in writing and in testimony before Judge Joseph B. David—were among the chief contributing factors to the sudden conclusion of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop's trial yesterday.

Though four of the doctors agreed that it would be possible to continue the trial without fatal results for Dr. Wynekoop, their opinions as to the special conditions which would be necessary to guard the strength of the defendant apparently contributed to the court's decision against going ahead with the case.

These four physicians were Dr. Francis W. McNamara, county jail physician who has been attending the defendant in the jail infirmary; Dr. Chauncey Maher, heart specialist summoned by the defense; Dr. Frank Chauvet, appointed by the defense as its member of a board of three physicians ordered by the court to examine Dr. Wynekoop, and Dr. William D. McNally, who represented the prosecution on the board of three.

One Sees Real Danger.

The fifth physician was Dr. Arthur Byfield, a heart specialist appointed by Judge David to make a special examination of Dr. Wynekoop's physical condition. He was the only one who said definitely that "everything considered, to subject her at this time to the ordeals of the remainder of the trial constitutes a very real danger to her life."

The others had agreed quite readily that if the defendant were allowed to be brought into court on an invalid chair and to remain throughout the hearings in a "semi-recumbent position" she would be able to attend all the proceedings.

Doctors Enter the Case.

The opinions of the doctors had begun to assume weight in the trial after Dr. Wynekoop's collapse at the close of court last Thursday. On that day she had heard the state's witnesses tell the jury of the statement she had made to the police in which she described the death of her daughter-in-law Rheta, wife of her younger son, Earle.

She had also heard Dr. Harry R. Hoffman, director of the Criminal court behavior clinic, tell of her "confession" to him in which he testified that she had told him she caused Rheta's death "to save the poor dear."

That evening Dr. Wynekoop collapsed across the counsel table before the judge's bench immediately after the jury had withdrawn from the courtroom. She was quickly given a tablet of digitalis and a small dose of nitroglycerin to sustain her heart. When she was taken to the jail she was examined by Dr. McNamara, and later that same evening by Dr. Maher.

On the following day, Friday, Dr. Wynekoop was taken to Judge David's courtroom for the last time. She arrived from the jail in a wheel chair at 9:50 a. m., about ten minutes before the day's session was scheduled to begin. She had hardly been lifted into her chair at the counsel table before she informed her attendants that weakness had overcome her and she would be unable to remain.

She was moved back to the jail and placed in bed. When court finally convened that day Judge David formally postponed the trial until yesterday and appointed Dr. Byfield to make an examination of the prisoner. Dr. Chauvet, who had been a state witness, was chosen as a defense representative, and the state selected Dr. McNally to accompany the other two examiners.

The examination was completed an hour later, but the doctors refused to divulge their findings until 10 o'clock yesterday morning when they submitted written reports.

Five Doctors in Court.

All three of these doctors were in court yesterday. They were flanked by Dr. McNamara and by Dr. Maher. Without ado Defense Attorney W. W. Smith asked Judge David to declare a mistrial. Prosecutor Charles S. Dougherty opposed the motion and Judge David ordered the defense to present evidence of the defendant's condition.

The judge then read into the record the findings in the doctors' written reports. All of these agreed as to the general physical condition of Dr. Wynekoop. Each doctor traced in his report her physical condition for the last ten years as she disclosed it in answers to their questions.

These revealed that while a young woman Dr. Wynekoop had been treated for tuberculosis. She has had two operations of a minor nature, and four years ago discovered that she suffered from high blood pressure. The reports recited that in November, 1933, she suffered chest pains associated with angina pectoris. More lately, the doctors agreed, she had suffered from dizziness, fatigue, weakness, and a considerable loss of weight.

The Physicians' Conclusions.

Dr. McNally related these things in great detail, Dr. Chauvet wrote of them briefly, and Dr. Byfield at somewhat more length. Dr. McNally concluded his report with the assertion that, after considering the defendant's general condition, "it is my opinion that the patient is sufficiently strong to withstand the tension and ordeal of the trial."

Dr. Chauvet's report concluded with the following paragraph:

"It is my opinion from the history obtained and from the present physical finding, that she should be able to proceed with her trial provided that she could be in a semi-reclined position."

Dr. Byfield said: "This is a case of angina pectoris. No physician of experience can deny that this is a treacherous disease nor that it is most difficult to predict the outcome, so far as life expectancy goes. The individual suffering from this condition may, in surroundings free from physical and mental strain, live for many years. On the contrary, if he is subjected to stress of mind or body he may at any time suffer the attack which proves fatal.

Points to "Double Hazard."

"Dr. Wynekoop labors under a double hazard: The first, that to which any one afflicted with angina pectoris is liable, even under the most propitious conditions, and a second one, peculiar to her, and made up of extreme mental anguish, excitement, and all the other emotional stimulus incident to her trial.

"Dr. Wynekoop is genuinely ill. Under favorable conditions she may live for many more years. She may, in a semi-recumbent condition and with frequent recesses, be able to withstand the further ordeal of the trial. It is more likely, however, that she will repeatedly go into a state of collapse with alarming heart weakness; while the possibility of the occurrence of anginal attacks is always present and their outcome cannot be foreseen.

"It is my opinion, everything considered, that to subject Dr. Wynekoop at this time to the ordeals of the remainder of the trial constitutes a very real danger to her life."

Two Other Doctors Testify.

The other two physicians, Dr. Maher and Dr. McNamara, also gave testimony. Dr. Maher declared that his objective findings were exactly similar to those of Dr. Byfield. Under questioning by Judge David, however, he said he felt that Dr. Wynekoop could go to trial if she were allowed to sit in an invalid chair, "her head lowered and her feet up."

Then Dr. McNamara, who has been the Cook county jail physician for 30 years, was summoned to the witness stand. He told the judge that he had believed before the trial began that Dr. Wynekoop would be able to stand the strain and that he had not changed his opinion. He then suggested that he be allowed to make a new "official" examination with two other physicians of his own appointment. His suggestion was rejected.

Defense Attorney Smith informed Judge David at this time that he had present in court several other physicians whom he wished to put on the witness stand. The judge waved him into silence and announced that he had "heard plenty of doctors already." This ended the taking of medical testimony.

MOST OF WYNEKOOP JURY UNDECIDED ON GUILT, POLL SHOWS

A poll of the Wynekoop jury after it had been dismissed disclosed eight of its members to be noncommittal or undecided on the question of Dr. Wynekoop's guilt, two who admitted that the state had presented a strong case, one who stood "fifty-fifty" on the question, and one who believed that the jury's verdict, had the trial proceeded, would have been a unanimous one of guilt. The comments of the jurors were as follows:

CHARLES H. GRAIR—"No opinion, but I think the state had a strong case."

WILLIAM WALSH—"I had not made up my mind one way or another."

SAMUEL H. DEMPSEY—"The state had a strong case, but I had no opinion."

PATRICK MALLOY—"No opinion."

THOMAS FLEMING—"The state had a strong case. I think it would have been unanimously guilty."

EDWIN J. HEALY—"I formed no opinion."

ARCHIE F. BENNETT—"I hadn't made up my mind."

ARNOLD H. MACHOLL—"No opinion."

CHARLES W. SCHMITKE—"Nothing to say."

FRED MARSH—"No opinion."

AUSTIN FLINT—"No opinion."

WILLIAM A. GRUMMITT—"I am fifty-fifty."

Mr. Grummitt was the juror whose withdrawal by the court gave the technical ground for declaration of a mistrial.

Second Visit to Jail.

Notwithstanding the general agreement of the doctors that the defendant's condition was poor, state and defense got into such a pother over the medical reports that a second visit to the jail was decreed. The physicians' first examination of Dr. Wynekoop took place on Friday.

Yesterday, with the defense still claiming that Dr. Wynekoop wanted to go on and might not even be deterred by the opinion of the commission, Judge David first called for Dr. Catherine's opinion, then directed the court stenographer to accompany the commission to the defendant's cell for the second visit.

"How does your mother feel about this?" the court demanded testily of Dr. Catherine.

"She wants to go on—if she can; she wants to be vindicated," the young woman replied.

Q.—I didn't ask you whether she wants to be vindicated. Does she know her own condition? A.—I don't think so.

The judge sent Catherine back to her chair beside Walker. He called the lawyers and doctors before the bar and directed them to get Dr. Wynekoop's views from the defendant direct, with the court reporter present. The interrogation occupied the entire noon recess. The group returned at 2 o'clock, the reporter reading notes which indicated Dr. Wynekoop was not quite so insistent on continuing the trial as had been represented.

Questioning of Dr. Wynekoop.

The proceeding at the defendant's bedside, as represented by the court reporter, went as follows:

"W. W. SMITH—The physicians who examined you have given their opinion to the court, and we have now returned on instruction of the court to get your own opinion as to whether you can go on.

"DR. WYNEKOOP—My opinion? What is my opinion? I don't understand. I have said all the time I don't think I can go ahead. The children should be consulted.

"MR. SMITH—They have been, but the court wants your own opinion.

"DR. WYNEKOOP—I am anxious for vindication. I have no anxiety—I have felt all along that the state would protect me and so I coöperated—you know I told the police about the chloroform bottle—

"PROSECUTOR DOUGHERTY—I don't think the chloroform has anything to do with this question.

"MR. SMITH—No, doctor. In the last analysis it must be your own opinion. You are the defendant.

She Consents to Mistrial.

"DR. WYNEKOOP—I imagine even the state would be none too pleased if I died in court next week.

"SEVERAL VOICES—No, indeed.

"MR. SMITH—Are we authorized to tell the court you want a juror withdrawn?

"DR. WYNEKOOP [to Dr. Catherine]—What will I say, Kit?

"DR. CATHERINE—Tell them yes."

So a petition was drawn up setting forth the defendant's condition, recounting her several collapes, and asking that the juror be withdrawn.

Chicagoan Gets 15-25 Years in Michigan Bank Robbery

Bay City, Mich., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Frank J. Drobitsch, 27 years old, Chicago, was sentenced today to serve 15 to 25 years in the Michigan state prison at Jackson on plea of guilty in the robbery of the National bank of Bay City Dec. 12.

DR. WYNEKOOP'S CHILDREN HAPPY AS TRIAL CLOSES

'A Victory,' Says Walker; Catherine Smiles.

Both Walker and Catherine Wynekoop were jubilant yesterday when Judge Joseph B. David stopped the trial of their mother, Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop. For the first time since the trial began on Jan. 11 the two talked to reporters.

"It's a victory," declared Walker. "Or it's just about as good as a victory."

"The state hadn't shown anything to indicate that my mother was guilty," asserted Dr. Catherine. "I think the state will be as glad as we are to get the trial called off. I don't believe that they could have produced any proof.

"Furthermore, I believe that with hospital care my mother will get well enough to endure trial. She wants to go to trial to vindicate herself and us, and I believe that she will be able to do it."

Others of Family Absent.

Walker and Dr. Catherine were the only members of the Wynekoop family in the courtroom when the case was declared a mistrial.

Dr. Catherine, clad in a new brown felt hat and a modishly cut brown tweed suit with puffed sleeves, was sitting in the chair at the counsel table usually occupied by her mother. Walker was seated a few feet away amid a group of plump matrons.

Dr. Catherine's lips quivered into a smile and she turned toward Walker as Judge David announced his decision. They exchanged a long glance and Walker heaved a sigh, obviously of relief. Then they sat impassively while Judge David thanked the jury for its service.

"Let my sister do the talking," directed Walker when he was interviewed.

She's Glad It's Over.

"I never had any anxiety about the trial, but I am glad that it is over for the time being," said Dr. Catherine. "Mother can get some real rest and hospital care.

"I'm told that the judge might not let her leave the jail hospital, but we could have our own physicians and our own food and she would not have to anticipate the strain of going to trial every morning.

"Surely I believe that she will get well enough to go to trial again. I know that she will eventually be vindicated."

After the interview Dr. Catherine and Walker went to the jail to inform their mother of the judge's decision. They said that later they would celebrate with their brother, Earle, husband of the slain Rheta. Earle, a defense witness, has been in seclusion since the trial began and has never appeared in the courtroom.

PARENTS CITED FOR DISPUTE ON 'FOUNDLING' BABY

Frank Kloiber, husband of Mrs. Mary Kloiber, the young mother who Sunday pretended her own baby was a foundling, was taken into custody yesterday in his home at 1907 Lowell street and arraigned in the Court of Domestic relations. Both husband and wife were brought before Judge Gibson E. Gorman and charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Saturday, Mrs. Kloiber, who is 18 years old, told St. Luke's hospital authorities that she had "found" a baby in Grant park, at Monroe street. Under police questioning at the Central police station, she broke down and confessed she had invented the story for the purpose of leaving her husband, whom she charged with cruelty. She said she intended to "adopt" the 10 months old baby after she had found a job.

Kloiber denied he had mistreated his wife. He declared that his wife's addiction to movies and movie heroes was the fundamental reason for the trouble.

Kloiber operates a laundry at 4318 Armitage avenue. He said he would seek to have the baby legally turned over to his brother, whose name he would not reveal.

U. S. Will Recognize Cuba; Action Due in Day or Two

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt will extend American recognition to the Cuban régime of President Carlos Mendieta tomorrow or Wednesday.

Calling a unique gathing of all South and Central American diplomatic representatives in Washington, President Roosevelt announced to them as they met in his White House study that he intends to recognize the present Cuban government.

The meeting, unprecedented in diplomatic history, was a part of the President's program of informing and consulting other American nations before acting in Cuba. He made it clear, however, that the United States recognition of the Mendieta régime would go through whether Latin-American countries agreed or not.

Hull Tells of Plans.

Cordell Hull, secretary of state, on leaving the White House, said:

"I believe the recognition of Cuba by the United States may very well come within a day or two. The President told the representatives of the Central and South American countries that the disposition of the United States government is to recognize the Cuban government in view of our belief that it has the substantial support of the Cuban people and is entirely capable of maintaining law and order."

Secretary Hull had talked with Jefferson Caffrey, President Roosevelt's personal representative in Cuba, who is slated to be the ambassador there after recognition, over long distance telephone, just before the White House conference. The conversation merely set forth existing conditions in Cuba.

That President Roosevelt made a bid today for recognition of the Mendieta provisional government by South and Central American countries was generally conceded. It is also understood here that these recognitions will be extended promptly.

Mexico and Chile Act.

Secretary Hull at his press conference announced that Colombia and Mexico had already recognized Mendieta and that Chile was about ready to do so.

Recognition is merely the first in a series of steps which President Roosevelt plans to take in building up the Mendieta régime into one popular with the Cuban people and one strong enough to keep the island in peace.

Soon after formal recognition is completed, the President is expected to junk the Platt amendment to the Cuban constitution. The amendment gives the United States the right to intervene in Cuba to maintain law and order, and it has been a thorn in the side of patriotic Cubans since the island was wrested from Spain.

Next the President will ask congress to give Cuba a big preferential reduction in the American sugar tariff. Sugar raising, the island's chief industry, has suffered a severe slump for the last five years, and the economic unrest which has grown out of the depressed sugar trade underlies much of the recent political eruptions.

Plans Sugar Tariff Cut.

By lowering the American tariff to Cuba, thus giving the island producers entrance to the world's richest market, President Roosevelt hopes to restore prosperity, contentment and popularity for the Mendieta régime.

The present tariff on Cuban sugar is $2 per hundredweight, and the report is that the President will ask congress to cut this to $1 or will attempt to do so through his executive authority over tariffs. In this move he will face the united opposition of senators from southern and western sugar states.

More immediate action will be the withdrawal of American warships which have hung about in Cuban waters ever since ex-President Ramon Grau San Martin, whom President Roosevelt steadily refused to recognize, overthrew Dr. Mauel De Cespedes. The De Cespedes government, which the United States did recognize, succeeded the dictatorship of Gerardo Machado.

CUBANS ARE JUBILANT.

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 22.—Cuba received with enthusiasm today the news that recognition by the United States will be forthcoming within the next two days.

"Recognition is the greatest gift the United States can grant Cuba," commented President Carlos Mendieta. "It means that political stabilization in the island will be furthered and that a real start can be made with the coöperation of the United States toward economic rehabilitation.

"President Roosevelt may rest assured that I have personally assumed responsibility for foreign life and property, especially America's 2 billion dollar investments here."

Martinez Saenz, secretary of the treasury, said that negotiations would begin immediately for a $25,000,000 loan, a substantial tariff reduction on major Cuban exports, especially sugar, and a 2,000,000 ton annual sugar allotment.

GROWTH OF LOOP RESULTING FROM TERMINAL SEEN

The erection of a lake front consolidated passenger terminal at Randolph street will solve many local railroad problems and permit development of the loop southward, Edward J. Noonan, consulting engineer for the city council committee on railway terminals, declared yesterday. He spoke before the public affairs round table at the Union League club.

"With the elimination of the Dearborn, La Salle and Grand Central stations south of the loop," explained Noonan, "and the removal of the tracks streets could be extended through this area and the property developed. If this is not done the streets will have to be extended by viaducts, which would mean the expenditure of $41,000,000."

Noonan asserted that the eighteen railroads served by the three stations to the south and the Illinois Central station would benefit by the consolidation of facilities. The station itself would cost approximately $15,000,000 and would be a low building, according to Noonan. Ready access to the loop and other transportation facilities would be afforded, he said.

GIRL DIES; HOLD WOMAN DOCTOR AS ABORTIONIST

Dr. Wilhelmina O. McEachern, 60 years old, 8245 Harper avenue, a field officer for the Chicago board of health, was arrested a month ago on the charge of performing an abortion, it was disclosed yesterday following the death of the patient on whom she is alleged to have operated.

The patient, Miss Sophia Middleton, 30 years old, 6531 Harvard avenue, died yesterday in the German Deaconess hospital, where she was admitted Dec. 21. Burnside police arrested the woman physician the same day, and she was released on her own bond.

A coroner's inquest into Miss Middleton's death was continued yesterday, to be resumed Thursday in the county morgue. Police said that all of their testimony in the case was not available.

LINDBERGHS FLY FROM NEWARK TO UNNAMED POINT

Newark, N. J., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh went aloft in a plane today for the first time since their return from their recent trans-Atlantic jaunt.

Motoring to Newark airport from their Englewood home, the couple chartered an Eastern Aeronautical company plane and sailed away without announcing their destination.

Col. Lindbergh told reporters he would be gone three days. He declined, however, to name his destination. The Lindberghs apparently plan to return to Newark airport, for they left their automobile in a hangar.

KILLS SELF DAY AFTER HUSBAND ENDED HIS LIFE

Mrs. Mary Suchy, 45 years old, 1906 South East avenue, Berwyn, whose husband committed suicide Sunday, joined him in death yesterday by swallowing poison in her home. A coroner's jury held that the husband, Edward, 46 years old, had ended his life while despondent over ill health and unemployment. He was said to have been laid off by the civil works administration Friday. A note found near Mrs. Suchy's body read: "Bury us together, Ed and me. Be good to the boy. I can't help it. Forgive me." The 9 year old son of the couple, Edwin, was asleep at the time.

CANADIAN COURT FLAYS DEALS OF MARTIN INSULL

Appeal on Extradition Stirs Chief Justices.

BY GEORGE SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TORONTO, Jan. 22.—A hearing on an appeal by Martin J. Insull, fugitive Chicago utilities operator, against an order committing him into custody for extradition to the United States was adjourned this evening by the Ontario Court of Appeals until tomorrow morning.

The session lasted all day. At its conclusion, Insull was taken into custody by the sheriff. Instead of spending the night in a cell, the former wealthy Chicagoan was permitted to stay at Toronto's best hotel.

Insull's extradition to the United States is sought to bring him to trial on charges of embezzlement, larceny and theft by bailee.

Hostile to Insull's Argument.

Today's hearing was enlivened by frequent comments and questions hurled at Insull's lawyers by members of the court, which is presided over by Chief Justice Sir William Mulock. Others on the bench are Justices Masten, Middleton, Fisher and MacDonnell. The judges were frankly hostile to the line of argument presented by I. F. Hellmuth and J. C. McRuer, attorneys for Insull.

McRuer addressed the court chiefly on the two charges of theft leveled against Insull. They involve loans of $66,000 from the Middle West Utilities company and $104,000 from the Mississippi Valley Utilities Investment company.

Defending the loans made to Insull by the companies of which he was the head, McRuer argued that they were well secured. He added that the loaning of money to employés had been "a habit" of the concerns. At this point Justice Fisher cut in.

"If Insull developed the habit of lending money to a few favorites to speculate in Wall street, a shareholder would have the right to bring a criminal action against him for stealing the money," he exclaimed. "It would be astounding if they can say, 'Oh, we developed the habit.'"

Chief Justice Indignant.

Insull's lawyer argued that the loans to Insull were set out in the records and that there was ample collateral. This time Chief Justice Mulock exploded with the question:

"Then why was there a loss?"

He accompanied this query by throwing his handkerchief forcibly down on the table.

The chief justice also indicated impatience with McRuer's statement that Insull had no knowledge of the transactions.

"When a man makes a discovery of nice sums of $104,000 and $66,000 to his credit in the bank, would he not naturally inform himself about who had been kind enough to put it there?" he asked.

Still later the chief justice commented concerning the money:

"It was put there so people from whom he stole it could not get it back."

The chief justice asked Insull's lawyer to place before him a "concrete case" in which a president in charge of the company strong box takes out money for his own use.

Suggest It's Case for Jury.

"Is not that a case for a jury to decide?" he interjected.

On another occasion, when the approval of Samuel Insull in connection with the transaction was expressed, the chief justice exclaimed:

"Does it at all affect the morality or legality that Martin Insull, instead of doing it off his own bat, happens to do it with the assistance of somebody else? His brother's intervention does not legalize it. A loan to an employé is a different thing from a loan to the manager himself. Who is looking after the interests of the company when the company makes a loan to the manager?"

"The two Insulls are pretty nearly interchangeable," Justice Middleton commented. "One is president and the other is supervisor."

When I. F. Hellmuth, Insull's senior counsel, argued there was a "color of right" to these transactions, Justice MacDonnell interjected:

"A color of right must be something else than a disguise. The question here is whether this was a color of right or a disguise."

Judge Flings Reply.

"If this company had not gone to the wall there would not have been a word said about it," Hellmuth replied.

"If the company had not failed, the theft, if it was theft, would not have been discovered," the justice countered.

"There is not the slightest evidence of theft in any shape or form on any one of the three charges," Hellmuth said. "It is not enough to say, 'well, it is not theft in Canada, but it is not a nice thing to have done in Canada.' That won't do. You have to show the criminality of the act."

Hellmuth stressed his contention of Insull's innocence in the matter of the charge involving $344,000 of Middle West money which was paid to a Chicago broker who was pressing him for collateral. For this money the Middle West secured Insull securities. Hellmuth argued the deal showed good faith and that the destination of the money was of no concern.

"He took $344,000 to transact his own business," Justice Middleton cried.

Asks About Other Charges.

As Hellmuth completed his argument on one charge and announced his intention of proceeding with the second and third charges, Justice Middleton inquired smilingly:

"Are they any stronger in your favor than this one?"

"I do not like to answer that question because I think they are all equally strong," the lawyer replied.

"Are there any worse against you?" Chief Justice Mulock added.

"Martin Insull's brother knew about it, therefore he didn't steal it," Justice Middleton exclaimed, sarcastically.

"They could dip out every dollar," Justice Fisher interjected. "All Samuel and the other man had to do was to issue checks and drain the company of every dollar they had."

"No, they put up security," Hellmuth said.

"The securities might not be worth one-third," Justice Fisher returned.

Picked as Three of the "Ten Best Dressed Women" in Country by Style Creator

ONLY TWO ARE ACTRESSES

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Orry-Kelly, style creator for a Hollywood studio, today nominated his list of "ten best dressed" women in the country, including Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin of Chicago as one of the ten, and only two film actresses, Kay Francis and Bette Davis, for both of whom, because of their employment at his studio, Orry-Kelly designs gowns.

The other seven best dressed, in Orry-Kelly's opinion, are Doris Duke, Mrs. Whitney Bourne, and Mrs. Harrison Williams of New York; Miss Charlotte Dorrance, Philadelphia; Miss Betty Edwards, Dallas; Miss Marigaley Hopkins, New Orleans, and Mrs. James Garrett Eddy, Seattle.

New York, Jan. 22.—Special.]—Rudy Vallee promised sensational revelations at the reopening today of legal proceedings before Justice McGeehan in Supreme court. But his mascara eyed wife, Fay Webb Vallee, snatched the microphone away from him by sudden discontinuance of her suit, brought to restrain the crooner and band leader from suing her for divorce outside New York state.

This was the suit which sought also to set aside a separation agreement made by the couple.

Calling off the suit startled Samuel Gottlieb, Vallee's lawyer. He appeared before Justice McGeehan with Benjamin Hartstein, Mrs. Vallee's attorney, to argue a motion made by the crooner to restrain Fay from proceeding with her California suit for separate maintenance and $7,450 a month support.

Gottlieb obtained from Justice McGeehan an order requiring Mrs. Vallee's attorney to show cause why Supreme Court Justice Lydon's approval of the suit discontinuance should not be set aside. Hartstein obtained an adjournment until Monday.

A bandit vaulted a railing around her desk and threatened to shoot her if she moved, but she ran and only screamed the louder. The bandits stood undecided and confused for a moment and then fled without touching the cash drawer.

TWO MEN PERISH, SEVERAL HURT IN JUNK SHOP FIRE

Two unidentified men were burned to death and several others were injured early today in a fire which swept through a three story building used as a junk shop in the rear of 1114-16 West Adams street. Two of those who were hurt leaped from the third floor.

Fifteen men were asleep in the place when the fire broke out. It is believed to have started in a third floor room occupied by a man known only as Mike, a Rumanian. He was one of the two men fatally burned. The other one was found dead on a lower floor. Both were burned beyond recognition.

Michael Gaddmen, 58 years old, who discovered the fire, dashed through the flames from the third floor to safety. His hair was singed. Two other men on the third floor leaped. They were Dan Mikituk, 48, and Theodore Jakubowicz, 50. Mikituk's spine was fractured in the jump and Jakubowicz's right leg was broken. Both men were severely burned.

Firemen under Chief Joseph Sullivan of the Fifteenth battalion put out the fire, but not before it had destroyed the interior of the building. The fire spread rapidly, firemen said. Sam and Abe Blitstin, brothers and owners of the junk shop, said the men sleeping in the place were employés.

Tammany holdovers are expected to oppose the inquiry.

INSULL HAS HEART ATTACK ON EVE OF GREEK COUNCIL RULING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Jan. 22.—While consideration of Samuel Insull's appeal against expulsion from Greece was under adjournment in the council of state today, the fugitive utilities operator was reported to be gravely ill with a heart attack. Two physicians are attending him. They have left orders the patient must see no one.

One of the opposition newspapers greeted the announcement of Insull's illness with the wry remark that he is beginning to play his last card. The government afternoon paper, however, states that humanitarian motives might induce the cabinet to extend Insull's residence permit if it were proved that he was too ill to leave on Jan. 31, this is the date set for his departure.

The council of state decided to give the Insull case a rest today. It is indicated another attempt to reach a decision will be made tomorrow. Reliable reports still persist that the council decided against Insull. There were rumors this afternoon, however, that if the nine councillors are unable to reach a unanimous verdict, they may refuse to return any decision, on the ground that they are constitutionally restrained from interfering with governmental acts.

PROSECUTOR OF INSULL BACK IN U. S. FROM GREECE

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Forest Harness, assistant United States attorney general, returned on the President Harding of the United States lines today. He had been in Greece since last August in connection with the Samuel Insull extradition proceedings.

Expressing amazement that the Greek courts should have sustained Insull, Harness rejoiced in the Greek government's intervening order, commanding that the former public utilities magnate leave before Jan. 31.

"The judges of the Greek Supreme court," Harness said, "told me frankly that if Insull had done in Greece the things he did in America he would have been in jail long ago."

"They wrote a 20 page opinion refusing to grant extradition and for 19 pages they wrote that what he had done was not only a crime in America and in Greece, but also in any country of the civilized world.

"They agreed that he had defrauded investors and then, on the twentieth page, they stated that he had given people cheaper electricity. For that reason they refused the extradition request. It's beyond me."

400 IDLE SCOTS START HUNGER MARCH TO LONDON

GLASGOW, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Four hundred unemployed Scotsmen, headed by Jock McGovern, the member of parliament who heckled King George when the sovereign opened the first session of the year, started for London today on a "hunger march." The national unemployed workers movement, which is a branch of the British communist party, organized the march and claimed it would be joined by contingents from all England. These, said the organization, would converge on Hyde Park Feb. 25 for a demonstration of 20,000 persons.

RAIN ENDS WARM SPRING WEATHER; BELOW 38 TODAY

Rain yesterday ended the springlike weather that Chicago has been enjoying for several days. Forecaster C. A. Donnel said today is scheduled to have temperatures below 38 degrees.

At noon yesterday the official temperature reading was 51 degrees. The all time record here is 59 degrees, established in 1909. The parks, which were thronged with mothers and children in the morning, emptied when the rain started.

WISCONSIN BABY DIES AFTER RACE OF 1,000 MILES

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—After racing 1,000 miles by train from Racine, Wis., to Johns Hopkins hospital here in order that "Billy," their 6 month old baby, might undergo an operation for hydrocephalus [water on the brain], Mr. and Mrs. Paul Koecher learned yesterday their dash had been in vain, despite science's efforts to save his life.

The airplane dash from Texas to Baltimore of Baby Sue Tramwell, 5 month old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Tramwell of Houston, Tex., prompted Mr. and Mrs. Koecher to board a fast train at Racine, arriving here Jan. 6.

Dr. Walter E. Dandy operated the next day, but pneumonia developed. A blood transfusion failed.

YOUNG PLEADS FOR LIMITS ON MONEY PROGRAM

Asks Senate to Prevent Gold Seizure.

BY JOHN HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.] — Strict limiting amendments were demanded for President Roosevelt's monetary bill as it made its appearance in the senate today in the face of the sweeping 360 to 40 victory in the house of representatives.

Appearing before the senate banking and currency committee, Owen D. Young voiced an earnest appeal that the bill be restricted to the period of the emergency, that a check be put on the proposed grant of new and extraordinary powers to the secretary of the treasury, and that seizure of the federal reserve system's gold by the government be stricken from the measure.

The chairman of the General Electric company, deputy chairman of the New York federal reserve board, chief author of the Young plan for reparations, and leader in Democratic councils, was as usual an impressive witness. And if the attentive questioning of the senators who heard him was a guide, the strong senate sentiment in favor of restrictive changes gained new support through his testimony.

Open Hearings Concluded.

Today's session concluded open hearings by the committee. Executive sessions will begin tomorrow. Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher [Dem., Fla.] hoped that the bill might be ready to report to the senate tomorrow night, but he was far from positive.

Behind the committee room's closed doors a bitter fight is bound to take place, with advocates of the bill admitting they may be forced to make concessions in the form of amendments. Senate Democratic leaders remained confident, however, that once the measure gets to the floor and into the hands of a Democratic majority, whose loyalty to the administration surpasses its knowledge of finances and monetary policy, it can be pushed through in any form the President demands.

One of the tests which the bill will have to pass when it reaches the senate is a silver amendment announced by Senator Burton K. Wheeler [Dem., Mont.] following a White House visit this afternoon. The senator refused to say just what form the proposed rider will take, but he professed himself pleased at the President's reaction to it.

Mr. Young's appearance before the committee provided an effective counterbalance to the testimony given by George F. Warren of Cornell university and James Harvey Rogers of Yale university, the professorial pair whose studies in a hidden commerce building office and whose mysterious flittings in and out of the White House back door are held responsible for the revolutionary monetary theories embodied in the bill.

Young's Answers Opposed.

Mr. Young had answers to some of those questions diametrically at variance with the replies of the professors.

"The first question I asked myself when I began to study the bill," Mr. Young told the senators, "was whether this was a temporary measure for the emergency only or whether it signified a permanent change in the monetary system of the country."

"If it was the first," he went on, "one would not be anxious to criticize what the President and his aides believe is necessary to rescue us.

"But if we are to have a permanent change then I should be most sorry to see any legislation of that significance passed under the pressure of an emergency demand. It seems to me highly important to restrict this bill to emergency measures. If it is necessary, later, to modify our monetary program ample time should be provided.

"This bill should be specifically designated as emergency legislation and a time limit fixed. Since it is difficult to fix a calendar limit, I suggest that the President himself be empowered to declare when the emergency is over."

Mr. Young said he assumed that devaluation of the dollar must take place. He did not wish to say how far devaluation should go, but a later statement placed him among those who fear that the bill would result in stabilization at too low a point. He welcomed the proposal finally to fix the dollar's gold content.

"Certainty," he said, "is perhaps ever more important than content," then added: "Provided the content is not too far below the present market."

Asks Halt to Seizure.

He strongly urged revocation of the proposal that the treasury take title to the 3 billions 600 millions of federal reserve gold, paying for it in gold certificates which will be irredeemable, except to settle international trade balances, or for other purposes approved by the secretary of the treasury.

"In a sensitive time like this when we are trying to rebuild confidence," he said, "we should try to accomplish our objective with the least impairment of confidence possible. I am even more concerned about the character of the gold certificates. They should be made redeemable at the option of the reserve banks. I agree that currency ought not to be redeemable in gold coin, but it ought ultimately to be redeemable in bullion."

Would Abolish All Funds.

Then he came to the stabilization fund. He agreed that the United States should have one. But like preparedness for peace advocates he urged that America and her fund should enter into an immediate agreement with foreign nations to abolish all such funds.

"The use of such funds in the hands of political treasuries," said Mr. Young, "constitutes a menace to business, a menace to economic welfare, and if carried far enough a menace to peace."

He pointed to the danger inherent in the use of the fund. Except for the single purpose of buying government securities now held by the federal reserve banks, he explained, it could not be spent in any fashion without expanding the already swollen member bank reserves to a point where they might become the basis for 30 to 40 billion dollars of new credit, difficult to control.

The bill would "practically abolish the federal reserve system, which, if it remained at all, would become only an administrative agency of the treasury," Mr. Young asserted.

Then he turned to a discussion of the buying and selling of government bonds, for which the secretary of the treasury would be empowered to use the stabilization fund, provided the President approved. Mrs. Morgenthau, wife of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, was sitting close behind the witness chair, busily taking notes. Suavely, Mr. Young explained that references he might make did not refer to "the" secretary of the treasury, but to some future one.

"I believe it extremely unfortunate," said Mr. Young, "to have the secretary of the treasury operate in the government bond market, as contemplated here. His chief interest, especially under present conditions, should be the maintenance of prices for government bonds. The interest of the federal reserve, on the other hand, is the regulation of credit. The bill seeks to invest the secretary with both these powers and duties.

"The time might well come when conditions demanded a contraction of credit for the good of the country, yet he would hesitate to sell for fear of depressing government security prices. It could very well create a situation that would be uncontrollable."

Any such use of the stabilization fund, said Mr. Young, should be delegated to a board composed of the secretary of the treasury, the governor of the federal reserve, and a third member appointed by the President.

Walter Stewart, former adviser to the Bank of England, agreed with Mr. Young.

"The bill," he said, "represents the abstract theory of men whose integrity is beyond question but who lack understanding of the practical problems of credit administration."

Prof. Warren a Witness.

As foremost of the theorists, Prof. Warren was star witness for the bill. Armed with tables, rolling out statistics, he denied that he had drafted the measure but admitted a part in the conferences behind it.

He explained some of the intricacies of his gold price level theory.

"The price of manufactured goods," he said, "does not rise for perhaps several years when a price rise follows a fall. When an upturn comes the rise is fastest in those things that went down fastest; prices which have not yet fallen are relieved of the necessity of falling and therefore do not show much change."

He maintained that the cost of living need not rise in a parallel degree to a cut in the gold value of the dollar since, he said, living costs included many things which have not fallen or have only partially fallen—things, therefore, which will not rise to any considerable degree.

Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], most vehement of the bill's opponents, broke in. He suggested that production and demand might be price factors.

Grants Their Effect.

"Of course, prices are made up of many things," the witness conceded with studious calm. "Supply and demand naturally affect the prices of individual products. But when all essential commodities are put into one index individual differences are pretty well ironed out."

Senator William G. McAdoo [Dem., Cal.], another critic of the bill, suggested that cutting the dollar meant that "the man with a fixed income gets it in the neck."

"That depends," qualified Dr. Warren. "Any person who did not receive a cut in wages or salary or whose securities are still paying dividends still is faring better than he did in 1929, but, of course, not as well as he did last February."

"But nobody but railroad presidents are getting the same salary," barked Senator Glass.

Senator Thomas P. Gore [Dem., Okla.], another enemy of the bill, objected that the labor bureau commodity price index did not bear out the professor's theory. Compared with a 56 per cent advance for gold since last March, it showed only an 18 per cent advance.

"It could not rise with gold since it had only incompletely declined," Prof. Warren made answer.

"Is the philosophy of this bill based on a commodity dollar?" was Senator Gore's next question.

"No," was the professor's somewhat unexpected answer, but he quickly went on to point to the necessity for permitting some latitude in the level at which a devalued dollar is to be fixed.

"The world is in a state of economic chaos," he declared. "To stabilize now might not suit some future time."

Quotes Rival's Article.

Senator Frederic C. Walcott [Rep., Conn.], stung the witness' professional pride when he quoted from a rival economist's article questioning the Warren theory. Despite periodic departures from one another, the curves of gold and prices over a long period always traveled together, he said.

"From 1915 to 1929," said Prof. Warren, "due to countries off the gold standard, Europe discontinued bidding for gold and prices in terms of gold rose. When the world attempted to return to gold, the demand for the metal became so great that prices collapsed and the crash followed."

"Those persons who now challenge the gold theory," he went on, "are the same ones that thought post war prices would remain up, whereas I began forecasting the collapse as far back as 1918."

Senator Walcott feared an extreme inflation from use of the stabilization fund, but Dr. Warren replied:

"Extreme inflation historically has been preceded by government bankruptcy and usually by revolution."

"Violent revolution?" asked Chairman Fletcher.

"With lead," the professor assented.

Glass Hits Gold Bidding.

Senator Glass again began fulminating—this time about going off gold, and bidding for gold when we had 63 per cent of the world's supply.

"The turning point for us," answered Prof. Warren, "came when deflation had proceeded so far that we could not collect on foreclosures. So we, too, had to leave gold."

He admitted the huge stock of gold held in the country, but asserted that had the United States held to the gold standard much longer America's own citizens would have started shipping gold abroad and hoarding in dangerous amounts.

The effect of devaluing the dollar, Prof. Warren maintained, would be to relieve debtors, benefit holders of life insurance by increasing the solvency of their companies, push up stock values. It would be of benefit, too, he said, to creditors.

Creditors Without Collections.

"What good is it to be a creditor," he demanded, "if you can't collect?"

"Maybe he'd like to explain the Einstein theory to us," grumbled Senator Glass.

Prof. Rogers foresaw and welcomed an inflation of from 7 to 17½ billions of credit resulting from use of the stabilization fund. He believed the incentive to immediate buying could not be resisted and that an upturn in business therefore was bound to follow.

Summarizing, he said the bill would accomplish:

1. A low gold value of the dollar, once devaluation is accomplished.
2. Increased definiteness as to the range of fluctuations in the future gold value of the devalued dollar.
3. A large gold profit, with potential inflationary influence, once devaluation is accomplished.
4. Ample control over the use of this profit so that any resulting inflation can be restricted.

SMALL BUSINESS FIRMS PROTEST EFFECTS OF NRA

Monopolies Are Fostered, They Charge.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—A veritable storm of protest by little business concerns against the alleged domination of the NRA by big business is being loosed upon the administration.

Since charging the NRA with fostering monopoly, Senators William E. Borah [Rad. Rep., Idaho] and Gerald P. Nye [Rad. Rep., N. D.] have been snowed under with letters from thousands of small manufacturers describing the manner in which they are being squeezed out of business by the provisions of NRA codes framed by the big combines and accepted by Gen. Hugh Johnson, NRA administrator, and President Roosevelt.

In an attempt to quiet some of the small business protests, Gen. Johnson today ordered NRA Division Administrator A. D. Whiteside to study the credit needs of small business men operating under codes. He instructed Mr. Whiteside to study also all price and cost aspects of the codes which might be stirring up complaints among small businesses.

Want Identity Concealed.

An impressive feature of the complaints, Senator Nye said today, is the extreme fear manifested by the complainants of being cracked down upon by Gen. Johnson and suffering business persecution at the hands of their big competitors who dominate the code authorities. In almost every case, he said, the little business man begs that his identity be concealed from the powers that be.

All this is the outcome of a single sentence in the legislation creating the NRA which, despite administration denials, is generally interpreted as suspending the anti-trust laws. This sentence follows:

"While this title is in effect [or in the case of a license, while section 4 [a] is in effect] and for sixty days thereafter, any code, agreement or license approved, prescribed, or issued and in effect under this title, and any action complying with the provisions thereof taken during such period, shall be exempt from the provisions of the anti-trust laws of the United States."

Leaders Help Frame Act.

As was reported in the Washington correspondence of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE last spring, the leaders of big business helped to frame the NRA legislation and supported it because of the exemption from the anti-trust laws it provided.

The revolt of little business against the NRA has produced a situation so embarrassing to the administration that the President called in Gen. Johnson to see what can be done to still the storm. The President sought to allay protest on Saturday with his executive order allowing complainants an appeal from the NRA to the federal trade commission. Senator Nye pointed out that after being delayed interminably at the NRA a complainant could get no relief from the trade commission except an airing of his grievances and perhaps a reference of his case to the department of justice for proceedings under anti-trust laws that have been suspended.

In any event, the little fellow would be squeezed out of business before he could get relief by this process. Senator Nye thought the executive order had been framed by Gen. Johnson in his own interest. Gen. Johnson admitted he framed it, for when leaving the White House he was asked if the executive order were satisfactory to him and he replied: "I wrote it; I ought to like it."

President, Johnson Discuss It.

Gen. Johnson said he and the President had discussed what to do about small enterprises under the NRA act.

"The question is whether the act should be amended," he said. "We don't want to do it. We want to try out the act as it is now. There may be some slight amendments, but no basic changes."

Gen. Johnson said the whole question will be reviewed next month when every code authority will come to Washington to consider the matter of revision of codes. He thought that every possible measure of relief was afforded by the access of complainants to the compliance division, "which is separate from the code authorities and thus removed from any business dominance."

Later in the day Senator Nye in a senate speech accused Gen. Johnson of playing the game of big business by delaying action on complaints.

"Is the NRA afraid of big business or is the NRA big business itself?" asked Senator Nye.

"Departed from Truth."

Answering Gen. Johnson's New York speech, Senator Nye said the administrator had "departed from the actual truth" when he accused the senator of refusing to serve on a board to correct the evil he complained of. The senator said Gen. Johnson had offered him a place on a board to serve as a go-between for the NRA and congress and he had deferred a decision until congress had passed on the proposition.

Senator Nye said that the General Electric company's agents wrote the code of the National Electric Manufacturers' association, known as NEMA, and that when the independents "awakened to what had been done to them they drafted a supplemental code to wipe out the injustices the General Electric company had forced into the code." They sought consideration of the supplemental code by the NRA in September.

"The NRA authorities," said Senator Nye, "assured me they would give heed to the supplemental code that was being asked for. And lo and behold in December there came word that NRA had finally decided that they could not consider the supplemental; that the only form in which they could consider it would be in that form which would prevail if the supplemental code were to be submitted to the NRA by the code authorities which had been appointed to administer the electrical manufacturers' code. In other words, if the General Electric company would say to NRA, 'We wish you would consider this code,' then NRA said, in effect, 'We will consider a supplement, but until then our hands are tied; we are helpless: we cannot do a thing.'

"The report of these various companies not only in the electrical line but in many other lines where the large concerns were in control of the code," interjected Senator L. J. Dickinson [Rep., Ia.], "bears out the contention of the senator that they are in control; they know why they are there and they are there for the selfish purpose of making profits and not of employing more labor or relieving suffering among the working men."

Has Letters from Johnson.

Senator Nye said he had letters from Gen. Johnson and Donald R. Richberg, general counsel for the NRA, denying that NRA encouraged monopoly, but admitting that the charges regarding the code were justified.

"There was every reason to believe," said Senator Nye, "there would be a reopening of that code and the insertion of provisions that would be a defense to the independents, that would curb the monopolistic tendencies of the General Electric company itself.

"But lo and behold, after two days of those hearings and in the face of the frightful information that was there placed before them, instead of taking action they postponed the hearing until Jan. 29. Since I have taken the floor word comes to me that NRA has today postponed the hearing from Jan. 29 to Feb. 8. How many more times they will postpone it heaven alone knows."

WILLIAM H. MALONE IS NOW IN SPAIN "FOR HIS HEALTH"

W. H. MALONE.

William H. Malone, chairman of the Illinois state tax commission under Governors Small and Emmerson, who is under indictment for income tax evasion, has left Germany, where he has remained since the indictment was returned last October, and is now in Spain. William McKee, mayor of Park Ridge and manager of Malone's business property, confirmed the report last night.

"I haven't heard from Mr. Malone for two weeks," he said, "but at that time he was in Spain. I believe he went to Spain for his health, Germany being too damp for his neuritis. He no doubt will return to Germany shortly, and will return to the United States to fight the income tax charges as soon as he finishes certain litigation in which he is interested in Germany.

Malone was indicted Oct. 13 on charges of defrauding the government of $59,080 in taxes for 1929 and 1930. He was in Germany at the time and said he would return to Chicago within "a short time." The offense charged is not extraditable, but there is no statute of limitation.

HINT RFC HEAD DODGED WRIT BY CAPT. HAWKS' AID

Jones Hit in Fort Worth Receivership Suit.

Fort Worth, Tex., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Plaintiffs in a receivership suit against a Fort Worth concern sought to ascertain today whether Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, tried to dodge service of a subpoena last Oct. 19 by flying from here to Houston in the baggage compartment of a speed plane.

One of the questions asked was whether the Houston capitalist rode the 300 miles in a "cramped and uncomfortable position" in the single seated ship of Capt. Frank Hawks. Jones was here in October with a large party of Democrats, headed by James A. Farley, postmaster general, and Vice President John N. Garner.

The matter came up in federal court with the filing of motions seeking to have legal penalties imposed on Jones and the RFC for failure to answer questions in the receivership suit brought against the Fort Worth Properties corporation by Mrs. Selma Sternberg of St. Louis.

No action on the motions was taken immediately. A date for hearing likely will be set soon.

One of the moves sought to strike out a motion Jones filed to vacate a default judgment against him for failure to answer the suit. He was represented as holding an interest in the Fort Worth corporation, of which Mrs. Sternberg is a bondholder.

Another motion asked that pleas and motions of the RFC be stricken because of its failure to answer questions. Jones was asserted to have refused to answer concerning his connection with the Bankers Mortgage company of Houston, recipient of an RFC loan.

The Sternberg suit set forth that the collateral on which the loan was based were bonds against another Jones enterprise here, and alleged the loan was void because of statutory provisions against a loan to a concern in which one of its members is interested.

A delegation of distressed home owners will drive to Springfield in several hundred automobiles today to present a petition signed by 25,000 home owners, asking the governor to call a special session of the legislature to grant relief from mortgage foreclosures. The motorists will meet at the state armory in Springfield, according to Martin Powroznik, director of the United Home Owners of Illinois, an organization back of the project.

Bolivians Resist Fierce Onslaught in Gran Chaco

THEATER FETE TO HEAD PARTIES FOR ROOSEVELT

Chicago's celebration of President Roosevelt's fifty-second birthday will reach its climax in the program to be staged at the Auditorium theater Jan. 30. Stars of the opera, stage, and radio will be featured, it was announced yesterday at the central committee headquarters in Hotel Sherman.

More than 50,000 citizens of Chicago, through clubs and church groups, are expected to hold smaller celebrations during the evening. Edward McGinnis is helping to organize patriotic observances at all Legion posts.

Sixty hotels have arranged for parties and entertainment programs. Many organizations on the west and north sides are planning celebrations, among them a grand ball and card party given by Wilmette citizens at the Shawnee Country club.

Money raised by the parties will be added to the national fund for the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation, an institution devoted to the cure of infantile paralysis sufferers.

Carter Harrison and Andrew Rebori are directing the celebration in Chicago, with a committee composed of Mrs. Ernest R. Graham, John H. McMahon, John W. Root, Ernest Byfield, Kellogg Patterson, Laurence Armour, and Roy Hall.

PREPARE SOULS FOR NEW DEAL, IN CHURCH PLEA

The annual conference of executive officers and the directors of the national boards of the Congregational Christian united church convened yesterday at the First Congregational church, Evanston. Sessions will continue through Thursday.

At the opening session Dr. Ernest M. Halliday of New York, chairman of the national boards, declared that the NRA, AAA, "and all the rest of the assorted alphabetical bureaus" can only be successful in reorganizing American national life on a better plane if "the dispositions of the hearts of the people" are right.

Dr. Halliday called on the leaders of his united denomination "to reassert their leadership in American life" and thus aid in evolving a religious foundation capable of making the "new deal" successful.

If you catch a cold—don't take chances with "cold killers" and nostrums. A cold may be dangerous to take chances on.

The method pictured above is the way doctors throughout the world now treat colds.

This is recognized as the QUICKEST, safest, surest way to treat a cold. For it often checks an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it. Do this:

1. Take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets.
2. Drink Full Glass of Water. Repeat treatment in 2 Hours.
3. If throat is sore, crush and dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in a half glass of water and gargle. This eases the soreness in your throat almost instantly.

Your cold should be relieved quickly when you do this because the real BAYER Aspirin embodies certain medical qualities that strike at the base of a cold almost INSTANTLY.

You can combat nearly any cold you get simply by taking BAYER Aspirin as directed. Sore throat can be eased by gargling this way in two or three minutes.

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, see that you get the real BAYER Aspirin. It dissolves almost instantly. And thus works almost instantly you take it internally. And for a gargle, it dissolves completely enough for this purpose. Get a box of 12 tablets or bottle of 24 or 100 at any drugstore.

PICTURES TERROR OF RACKET ERA AT TRIAL OF 18

Prosecutor Outlines Long Story of Violence.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

A picture of racketeering in Chicago, from the beginning of the Capone era down to the present time, was painted by the prosecution yesterday in the courtroom of Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan. In an opening statement the state outlined evidence it will present against eighteen men charged with conspiracy to stifle trade by bombing, strikes, sluggings, and other terrorist methods.

Among the defendants are Ald. Oscar Nelson of the 46th ward, Dr. Benjamin F. Squires, economist and former czar of the cleaning and dyeing industry in Chicago; Aaron Sapiro, New York attorney and trade organizer, and the officials of a number of trade associations and labor unions.

Capone's Name Called.

The names of Al Capone and Murray Humphries, his reputed successor, were called by the clerk at the opening of the morning, when the names of the defendants were read. Capone is in the federal penitentiary and Humphries is a fugitive, but their names were mentioned frequently by Special Prosecutor Edwin J. Raber in his statement to the jury.

Prosecutor Raber detailed the testimony to be presented by more than 300 witnesses who have been summoned to appear for the state. Many weeks are expected to be consumed in the taking of evidence at this first attempt by law enforcing agencies of Chicago to break the combination of politicians, racketeers, labor leaders, and gangsters preying upon legitimate business.

It was a startling design of violence which the prosecutor drew for the jury. His frequent references to bombings, acid throwing, plate glass window breaking, slugging, and other forms of intimidation said to have been resorted to by many of the defendants drew protests from the seven defense attorneys, among whom are some of the leading legal lights of the city.

Ald. Nelson Objects.

His references to Ald. Nelson's participation in the alleged activities of one of the unions involved drew an objection from the alderman, who sat with the defendants and who was not scheduled to take an active part in the trial, although he is an attorney.

Hampered by the frequent objections of the defense lawyers, Prosecutor Raber continued doggedly at his task of outlining the many angled story which the state will present. Raber spent more than three months in an investigation of the system of rackets in Chicago and his story at times was involved as he described the devious means by which the defendants were supposed to have mulcted business men of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

On one occasion, after the protests of the defense lawyers became particularly loud, the judge sent the jury from the room and instructed the prosecutor to be more specific in his utterances if possible.

"I hope the jury understands the case thus far better than I do after listening to the statement," the judge remarked.

Gangsters Force Tribute.

But Raber was clear enough in pounding home the story of the scores of small business men who, he said, will relate from the witness stand their struggles to make a living despite the harassment of gangsters who forced tribute from them in the form of dues and fees.

He told how Capone entered the cleaning and dyeing racket at the instance of the cleaner and dyer, Morris Becker, who paid union wages and used union employés, but who was constantly in trouble with the union and association organizers because he charged lower prices than his competitors.

"Becker finally decided to avoid all the troubles that pestered any one in the cleaning and dyeing business by hiring Capone as an assistant in his business," Raber said. "Capone took no part in the business. Only his name was used, but that was enough. Becker didn't have any more trouble."

Hoodlums See Profits.

As soon as the hoodlums of the city saw the profits in the business racket game they joined up with many of the defendants in the case and branched out, Raber said. He described a meeting between Capone, Becker, James P. Gorman, president of the Retail Cleaners and Dyers' union; Walter Crowley, president of the City Dye works, and Humphries in the Lexington hotel in 1928.

"Capone wanted Becker to join the Cleaners' and Dyers' association," Raber said. "Becker refused, saying it would cost him too much money to hand over 2 per cent of his gross proceeds, as was the rule. He said he would lose $30,000 a year if he had to join."

"But we want you," Capone and the others present told Becker, according to the prosecutor. "If you come in a lot of these other little fellows will follow you. We'll pay you $15,000 a year to do it and you won't have to pay the 2 per cent of your proceeds."

Declines to Be Decoy.

Becker agreed for a while to this agreement, the prosecutor declared, and actually received about $4,000, but finally withdrew, saying he didn't want to be a "decoy" for other men in the business.

The name of Dr. Squires was mentioned often by Raber in his statement. He asserted that Squires knew of all that was going on and was familiar with the terrorist activities of the union agents and gangsters.

"Squires was brought in because of his connection with the University of Chicago as a cover-up for these other fellows," he declared.

Morris I. Kaplan, Chicago attorney, was named by Raber as affiliated with Humphries in the racket. When Raber referred to Kaplan as a former law associate of Ald. Nelson the latter leaped to his feet and said:

"I want the record to show that Kaplan left my office six years before I ever heard that he was associated with any of these organizations."

The suicide last Saturday of Edward J. Brundage, former attorney general of Illinois, who was to have been a witness for the state, also was mentioned at the session.

Interview with Brundage.

"Nelson went to the office of Brundage—" began Raber when Floyd E. Thompson, Nelson's attorney, interrupted.

"Counsel knows he won't be able to prove that," he declared.

"Is evidence going to be presented concerning that interview?" the court inquired.

"We will prove that Nelson was in Brundage's office with Capone," responded Raber. "We will not now be able to show what took place there."

Raber recited what he said would be testimony of many tailors who were victimized by the racketeers for their failure to pay tribute to the various unions and trade organizations.

"A little tailor, unable to pay the fees demanded, would first get a stench bomb in his shop or his windows would be broken," he said.

"If he persisted in his refusal, the clothing in his place would be sprayed with acid. Emery powder would be sprinkled in the crank case of his truck or automobile. The final argument would be a bomb which would completely wreck his place of business."

To show that the defendants, Gorman and his affiliates, were responsible for these acts of violence, the state will put on the stand witnesses, he said, who will testify that they were no longer bothered after they had joined the organizations and paid "fees" which often ranged as high as $5,000.

Slingshot Is Used.

He described an incident when Charles Goldstein, business agent of the Laundry and Dye House Drivers union, and Al Boris, secretary and business agent of the Retail Cleaners' union, were picked up in an automobile shortly after the plate glass windows of a north side tailor shop had been shattered by a steel ball bearing from a slingshot. Several of the steel balls and the slingshot were found in the automobile, he said.

Several times, when Raber mentioned witnesses for the state without giving their names, Defense Attorney William E. Rodriguez demanded the names.

"I'm not giving the names just now," Raber told the court, meaningly.

Sapiro, the New York lawyer, entered the picture in 1932, the prosecutor declared, being hired here for a salary of $25,000 a year to advise the union men. He asserted that the lawyer approved a contract drawn up whereby $1 would be collected weekly from the owners of every laundry truck in the city; a contract, he said, which had previously been branded by lawyers, including former Chief Justice of the Municipal Court Harry Olson and Edward R. Litsinger as having criminal aspects.

Accuses Dr. Squires.

Dr. Squires, said Raber, at first an arbitrator, later joined wholeheartedly in the conspiracy with the union officials and other defendants. He told of the organization of the Cleaners and Dyers' institute by Squires and his fixing of prices and wages for the industry. Squires took 2 per cent of the gross proceeds of every cleaning plant, he declared, and received a salary of $25,000 a year for "services of small consequence."

"He was brought in because of his connection with the University of Chicago as a cover-up for the conspiracy," Raber asserted. "And he went along with these fellows in their illegal acts."

Squires, neatly clad, ruddy faced, youthful looking, sat among the other defendants. He did not appear embarrassed at the statements of Raber.

The prosecutor had not finished when court adjourned until today. He has still, he said, much to tell about what the state will prove regarding racketeering in the laundry, cleaning and dyeing, carbonated beverage, and linen and supply businesses.

TENNESSEE UTILITY OFFERS TO SELL ITS PLANT TO KNOXVILLE

Knoxville, Tenn., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—In an attempt to avoid competition between city-owned and private power distribution systems, the Tennessee Public Service company, Electric Bond and Share subsidiary operating in Knoxville, today offered to sell or lease with option to buy its facilities to the city of Knoxville.

The company also suggested to the city that Knoxville voters who approved Nov. 25 a $3,225,000 bond issue for municipal ownership were primarily interested in immediate rate reductions. It offered to cut its rates to the structure suggested by the city's engineers who drew plans for the proposed municipal power plant provided the city would not enter into competition.

"Any of these plans would, of course, involve considerable sacrifice on the part of the investors in the property but would make available promptly to all the people of Knoxville the results desired by them," Tennessee Public Service company's proposal said.

"Any one of these plans also would avoid placing the city in competition for the business to be had and provide an opportunity, free from all competitive and other difficulties, for the working out of the objectives of the government as we understand them."

JUDGE RELEASES ONE INSURANCE CASE DEFENDANT

Judge Benjamin P. Epstein in the Criminal court yesterday sustained a motion for a directed verdict of not guilty in a conspiracy case against Dr. John W. Seids of Moline. It was shown that, although Dr. Seids had been on trial for three weeks, it was not the doctor but his father, John W. Seids Sr., who was indicted with six other men on charges of conspiring to defraud two insurance companies of $1,702,000.

After the state rested its case, the court was informed that the wrong man had been on trial for conspiracy to loot the treasuries of the Security Life Insurance company and its affiliate, the Northern States Life Insurance company. Seids Jr., was merely an employé of the Northern States company and not an official, his attorney said, but he answered the indictment because it failed to state whether it was for the junior or senior member of his family.

Attorney John H. S. Lee, member of the law firm of former Senator Charles S. Deneen, and one of the defendants on trial, personally argued a motion for a directed verdict of not guilty in his own behalf. The court took his plea under advisement, but denied similar motions made in behalf of Machir Dorsey, one time wealthy insurance promoter, and C. Edwin Johnson, two other defendants.

JUNIOR A. OF C. AWARD IS GIVEN W. J. CROWLEY

Wilbert J. Crowley, first assistant state's attorney of Cook county, received the distinguished service award presented annually by the Junior Association of Commerce at a banquet last night in the Knickerbocker hotel. The award was based on his achievements while working with State's Attorney Courtney in the drive against crime.

The chief address was given by Frank J. Loesch, president of the Chicago crime commission, who described the difficulties encountered in the office of state's attorney.

Others at the speakers' table introduced by the president, William L. Timbers, were State's Attorney Courtney, Benjamin Bachrach, Admiral Watt T. Cluverius, Silas H. Strawn, George W. Rossetter, Benjamin E. Sunny, Judge Phillip Finnegan, and Peter Crowley, father of Wilbert Crowley.

$10,370,000 Insurance Due for Lost Ship, Court Holds

PARIS, Jan. 22.—(AP)—The luxury liner Atlantique, which was destroyed by fire in the English channel, Jan. 4, 1933, today was declared a complete loss by a court decision. That British and American insurers were ordered to pay total insurance of 170,000,000 francs [approximately $10,370,000], plus costs of numerous hearings. The vessel was owned by the Sudatlantique company. New York companies held 12,000,000 francs [approximately $732,000] of the insurance.

CONSUMERS HEAR ADVANTAGES OF VISIBLE SALES TAX

The advantages of collecting the 2 per cent state tax on sales as a separate item added to the retail price were told to representatives of the organized consumers of Chicago and Illinois yesterday in a meeting at the Electric club. The meeting was sponsored by the mercantile division of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce.

The following organizations were represented: Illinois League of Women Voters, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, Illinois Congress of Parent-Teachers, Women's City club, and Catholic Women's league. The speakers at the meeting included D. F. Kelly and Mrs. B. F. Langworthy of the Illinois League of Women Voters.

"We have repeatedly endeavored to show the advantages of paying the occupational sales tax as a separate item of cost instead of merging it in the retail price," said Mr. Kelly. "This would eliminate the possibility of paying several times the 2 per cent fixed by the state such as is now happening in some stores. No matter how the tax is collected the consumer should know the exact amount that is collected."

PACT STRENGTH NAVY IS BACKED BY PRESIDENT

Vinson to Offer Bill for 380 Million Program.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Definite assurance that the administration desires passage of legislation to bring the United States fleet to full treaty strength today sent the house of representatives on its biggest big navy rampage of recent years.

Chairman Carl Vinson [Dem., Ga.] of the naval affairs committee climaxed the developments with an announcement that his committee will bring a bill authorizing a 380 million dollar five year ship construction program before the house within the next few days.

Mr. Vinson's announcement followed the statement of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry Latrobe Roosevelt that President Roosevelt will throw the full weight of the administration behind treaty limit legislation. The assistant navy secretary appeared as a witness before the naval affairs committee to urge immediate action on the so-called Vinson bill.

Budget Is Increased.

The house, meanwhile, had under consideration a 1935 navy department appropriation bill in which big navy advocates saw more than one cause for rejoicing. Most important to them was the addition of $1,200,000 over the budget bureau estimates for the purpose of beginning construction of three six inch gun cruisers, completion of which will bring the fleet to treaty strength except for over-age and replacement tonnage.

For the maintenance and operation of the navy estimated during the coming fiscal year the appropriation bill carries a grand total of $293,833,000, including permanent and indirect appropriations. The 1934 supply bill carried $322,609,744, indicating a reduction this year of $28,766,704.

Taking into consideration the administrative limitations placed upon cash withdrawals of departmental funds as a part of the economy program in 1934, however, the figures were not so simple. From the standpoint of money actually to be withdrawn from the treasury for use by the navy, the committee reported, this year's appropriation bill will provide some 30 millions more than was expended last year.

Would Halt Restrictions.

At the same time the committee delivered a tacit demand that the administration cease its economy practice of establishing restrictions by executive order on the amount of its annual appropriation which each navy bureau may use. Members of the committee declared they saw no use in spending months of work determining the minimum upon which bureaus could be expected to operate efficiently if the amounts finally decided upon were to be altered by the executive branch.

"Obviously, the low 1934 cash withdrawal figure results from drastic action occasioned by an economic condition that necessitates resort to measures even hurtful in their application," said the committee in the report.

"The navy could not continue to live without markedly retrogressing upon such a restricted expenditure program, and an advance is logical, necessary and not unexpected."

Navy Building 34 Ships.

The bill carries $41,130,000 for the continuation of construction on 22 warships now being built with regular annual funds. In addition to these ships, the committee pointed out, the navy is now building 34 ships with 238 million dollars earmarked for ship construction in the public works bill passed last session.

The Vinson bill, which is similar to that introduced recently by Representative Fred A. Britten [Rep., Ill.], provides for a continuing ship construction program contemplating the expenditure of approximately 76 million dollars a year. At the end of 1939, when the program would conclude, the United States fleet would be at full treaty strength.

Under the terms of the measure, which is virtually certain of passage, President Roosevelt would be authorized to proceed with the construction of one aircraft carrier of 15,000 tons, 99,200 tons of destroyers to replace over-age ships, and 35,000 tons of submarines to take the place of obsolete underwater craft.

Britten Praises Program.

Voicing the support of the navy for Mr. Vinson's program, Assistant Navy Secretary Roosevelt told the naval affairs committee that it "furnished a foundation for an orderly building program consistent with the financial position of the government." On the floor of the house a few moments later Representative Britten, ranking Republican member of the committee, declared "that Franklin Roosevelt has done more for the navy with a scratch of the pen than has been done by all the rest of our Presidents in the last fourteen years."

Committee Votes $376,000 to Reopen Lake Navy Base

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Overriding the expressed wishes of the navy department and the budget bureau, the house appropriations committee today recommended a fund of $376,000 for restoring the Great Lakes Naval station to its former status as the navy's major interior training post.

The station was closed by executive order months ago as an economy move, and the $230,000 appropriated last year for its maintenance credited to the savings accomplished by executive limitations on cash withdrawals of naval funds. In its estimates for the coming fiscal year the bureau of the budget asked $42,000 for keeping the post at a bare maintenance level.

Reporting the 1935 naval supply bill, however, the house subcommittee on navy appropriations declared today:

26 Millions Invested.

"The training station at Great Lakes was established in 1904. Up to this fiscal year it has been continuously operated. It is the only naval establishment in the interior of the country. It affords the only naval contact for a very considerable portion of our citizenry far from either seaboard.

"The committee doubts the wisdom of keeping the Great Lakes station closed. Aside from the foregoing considerations, there is an investment in buildings, improvements, and machinery of more than 26 million dollars. For the upkeep of this investment the budget bureau includes $25,818. For less than 1½ per cent of this investment the station may be reopened, decently maintained and resume the training of recruits."

Representative John Buckbee [Rep., Ill.], serving his first year as a member of the naval appropriations subcommittee, was credited generally with having convinced the house group that the navy's drastic curtailment of the Great Lakes station was false economy.

Declares Facilities Excessive.

The opposition of the navy department to the reopening of the station was expressed during hearings on the supply bill by Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson, who declared:

"I believe that the training stations at Great Lakes and Newport should remain closed for reasons of economy. If these stations a placed in commission the navy department will have an excess in training capacity and the increased expenses will be far out of proportion to the useful benefit to the service."

Chairman William A. Ayres [Dem., Kas.] of the appropriations subcommittee took issue with the secretary, however.

"I seriously question, Mr. Secretary, if there will be any real saving from keeping this station closed after all," he said.

"I am disposed, if we should find an overestimate in any of the items touching pay and allowances of personnel, to increase the amount for Great Lakes in order that you would be free to reopen the station if, upon further reflection, you should deem that to be the wiser course."

DISCOVERS WIFE IS OPERA SINGER; ASKS ALIMONY

Alphone De Martel, 1915 Emerson street, a building manager who at present is unemployed, attended a performance of the opera "Turandot" ten days ago. He discovered that Mrs. Jennie De Martel, who obtained a separate maintenance decree against him in October, 1932, was singing a minor part under the name of Jennie De Meester.

Yesterday De Martel and his attorney, Norman Becker, appeared before Judge Rudolph F. Desort in the Superior court and informed the judge that an investigation by De Martel had disclosed that his wife is earning $100 a week in opera.

De Martel asked that the separate maintenance decree granted his wife, under which he has been paying her $8 a week, be set aside, and that he be granted a divorce. He will ask for $35 a week alimony, Attorney Becker said. Judge Desort ordered that Mrs. De Martel appear before him for a hearing today.

DIAMOND SHOP BLAST HURTS 2 9 FLOORS BELOW

The explosion of a gas meter yesterday in a jewelry shop on the ninth floor at 32 South State street injured a workman and sent fragments of glass flying to the street below, where two pedestrians were cut.

The shop was that of Rocca & Rizzo, jewelers. Angelo De Soto, 1134 Fullerton avenue, a diamond setter, was engaged in setting a ring when the explosion took place. He said that he turned on a gas jet, that it failed to light, and that when he turned it on again the meter in the room exploded. He was burned and cut.

In the street below Mrs. Margaret Maseman, 70 years old, of Kilbourne, Ill., and her nephew, Fred Clark, 40 years old, 1827 Sycamore road, Homewood, were cut by fragments of the window in the shop, which was shattered by the explosion. De Soto's employers said that a few small diamonds, valued at $500, may have been blown out the window by the explosion.

Internal Revenue Lawyer Enters Private Practice

William J. Duiker yesterday announced his resignation as an assistant solicitor of the internal revenue department in charge of civil income tax litigation, a post he filled for the last four years. He will be associated with the law firm of Johnson & Swanstrom, headed by former United States District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson.

3 GUNMEN TAKE $4,090 IN CWA PAY ROLL CHECKS

Three bandits late yesterday took $4,090 in indorsed CWA checks and $18 in cash from Jack Miller, 2106 North Spaulding avenue, cashier for the H. Piper company, bakers, 1610 North Wells street, who was on his way to a loop bank to deposit the checks. One of the robbers flourished a sawedoff shutgun as they curbed Miller's car in front of 1300 North Wells street and forced the cashier into their own car. They then drove to an alley near La Salle and Goethe streets, where they dumped him out, after robbing him.

SINCLAIRS DENY GUILT IN TULSA BANK'S LOSSES

Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Harry F. Sinclair, oil operator, pleaded not guilty in court today to a charge of embezzling sums ranging from $500 to $6,650 from the Exchange Trust company, of which he is a director.

With Sinclair was a brother, E. W. Sinclair, a director of the Consolidated Oil corporation, which the former heads.

They signed bonds of $4,000 each and were released to appear at preliminary trial Feb. 5 with 23 others.

James W. Sloan, independent oil producer, and Grant R. McCullough, insurance man, who was one of the founders of the First National, largest Tulsa bank, signed Sinclair's bond. E. W. Sinclair's bond was signed by George Bole, one of the accused, and Henry N. Greis, receiver for the Deep Rock Oil corporation.

Sinclair was reported to have poured more than $4,000,000 into the Exchange National bank and its subsidiaries, the Exchange National Bank and Trust company, to prevent their collapse. When the bank was renamed the National Bank of Tulsa and reorganized with RFC aid last spring, the two subsidiaries closed their doors.

Monetary Bill, Etc., Delay St. Lawrence Seaway Pact

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Chairman Pittman of the senate foreign relations committee announced after a talk with President Roosevelt today that the St. Lawrence waterways treaty would be laid aside in the senate in favor of emergency measures, including the monetary bill. He predicted final action on the seaway treaty at this session, however.

MYRTLE ADMITS KISSES AND LOVE NOTES ON STAND

Smiles, Replies Tartly in $100,000 Suit.

Blackridge maintained a matter of fact composure. When Tate asked her if the apartment she admitted occupying a part of the time at 219 East 71st street was not in reality used for rendezvous with Mr. Nottingham, she agreed with a nod of the head.

"Sometimes I meet him there. It might be called that."

"As a matter of fact, you were there last night with the husband of the plaintiff until 1 o'clock, weren't you?" Tate asked with heightened color.

"Yes," said Mrs. Blackridge, looking him squarely in the eye, her blue eyes snapping. "I was there. He was there, too."

"Are you willing to admit you've had illicit relations with him [Nottingham]?" asked Tate. Before her attorney could voice an objection—which was overruled—she answered: "Certainly not."

Admits Her 42 Years.

During the first part of Attorney Tate's questioning he brought out the hitherto unrevealed age of the defendant as 42 years. Later he asked her the age of Policeman Nottingham, known familiarly at the Grand Crossing station as "Denny." "Thirty-five," she answered.

"And you're 42, I believe you said?" he asked her.

"Forty-two," Mrs. Blackridge said cheerily, looking at the jury and smiling slightly.

The examination continued as follows:

Q.—You are the same Myrtle Tanner Blackridge who was collector of internal revenue? A.—Yes, from 1929 to 1931.

Q.—Where do you now live? A.—At 5639 South Marshfield avenue.

Admits Using Assumed Name.

Q.—Do you live there under your own name or an assumed name? A.—My own name. I live in my son-in-law's apartment.

Q.—Have you ever used the assumed name of Ella Gray? A.—Yes, I did, when I lived with a woman by that name.

Q.—Was there any reason for your taking that name? A. (with vigor)—Absolutely. When I use my own name the press and everybody else is at my heels.

Q.—Where was it that you went under that name? A.—At 219 East 79th street.

In her abrupt staccato sentences Mrs. Blackridge explained that she met the Policeman Nottingham 20 years ago when he was a delivery boy for a grocery store and that their acquaintance was renewed when Nottingham asked her to help him get a job on the police force. She became friendly with him in July, 1931, she said. Asked if she knew he was married and had a child then, she replied she didn't know until January, 1932.

Admits Letters to Denny.

She admitted writing four letters introduced in a preliminary hearing of the suit, addressed to "Denny," which, she said in reply to a question, was her pet name for Nottingham. She wrote them from Flora, Ill., where she was living in her sister's home, in June, 1932, she said.

ATTORNEY TATE: You did carry on a correspondence after you found out he was the father of a 7 year old child? A.—Yes, I did.

Q.—Did you write him burning love letters? [Objection here sustained.]

Q.—Did you write him business letters or love letters? A.—Well, I'd say they were love letters.

"Denny" Was "Best Friend."

Q.—You fell in love with Mr. Nottingham? [Objection overruled]. A.—Well, he was a friend, and when all other friends are gone—

ATTORNEY TATE—I object, your honor. She is not answering the question.

JUDGE WEAVER—Answer the question. A.—Well, I liked him better than any man I knew.

ATTORNEY TATE—Did you use efforts to alienate his affections? A.—I wouldn't say efforts—no.

Q.—You suggested to him that he get rid of his wife so he could marry you? A.—He suggested the same thing to me—must I answer [to Judge Weaver, who says she must]? Yes, I have.

Love Letters Quoted.

Mrs. Blackridge smiled as Attorney Tate, reading from her letters to Nottingham, read such phrases as "that old so-and-so," and the playful term she used in addressing Nottingham, "you son of a sea-cook." Her smile broadened at the recital of the termination of one letter, which read, "O, how I need a kiss. Bye-bye, darling, your Myrtle."

Q.—You say here, 'Sweetheart, take me and my belongings away from here.' You were inviting him to desert his wife and child, were you not? A.—He'd already invited himself.

Q.—That's what you wanted, though, wasn't it? A.—I might have then.

Q.—You don't want him now? A.—Not now.

Q.—But this affair's been going on right up to last night? A.—We were talking about this case last night.

Q.—But you saw him there at the 71st street apartment twice last week? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ever register with him at the Crest hotel? A.—No. I've registered at the Crest hotel as Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Williams, but just because I was buying dresses for a dress shop at the time, and salesmen would come in, and I didn't want to be disturbed.

Q.—When he visited you last night did you turn off all the lights?—A. No, not at any time.

Tells of Rendezvous.

Emory Koonce, private investigator, 1110 East 64th street, testified that he was hired by Attorney Tate to watch the apartment at 219 East 79th street the previous night, Sunday night, and that from his vantage point in the alley and in 79th street and Prairie avenue he saw the lights go out shortly after Nottingham entered the apartment at 11:50 p. m.

On cross-examination by Attorney Eugene P. Meegan, who, with Attorneys John L. Henrick and William R. Crow, is defending Mrs. Blackridge, Koonce admitted that the living room might be lighted without being visible from the street, and that such a light was on at 1 o'clock when he knocked on the door, which was answered by Nottingham.

Describes Home Life.

Miss Stella Brown of 1736 West 51st street, a drapery factory worker who said she had known Mrs. Nottingham for 19 years, testified next.

ATTORNEY TATE—And up to 1932 what was the Nottingham home life like? A.—It was very happy, said Miss Brown.

Q.—And what is the Nottingham home life like now, and what has it been since 1932, when Mrs. Blackridge entered the life of Nottingham? A.—Mr. Nottingham stays away from home often at nights. He is abusive, curses, and shouts at his wife. They occupy different bedrooms.

Tells of "Spying."

She testified that often she had driven with Mrs. Nottingham in a car to the alley behind the 79th street apartment, from which Mrs. Nottingham climbed to the roof of a one story building adjoining the apartment to see if her husband was calling on Mrs. Blackridge.

In a brief opening statement before the jury Attorney Henrick declared that counsel for Mrs. Blackridge hated to "besmirch a woman's character," but hoped to show that Mrs. Nottingham was "not such a good wife," that she herself went out with other men.

A jury made up of 10 "model" husbands and two bachelors who never had been sued for alienation of affections was completed shortly after noon.

The ten husbands exhibited a certain degree of reluctance to answer questions concerning the smooth course of their individual married lives, but the apologetic tone and bearing of the opposing attorneys facilitated the questioning.

Full Jury Sworn.

The full panel was sworn shortly after noontime and the trial of Mrs. Blackridge's alleged theft of the love of the Grand Crossing police wagon driver was ready to proceed.

Attorney Tate apologized to each venireman as he put his questions. To Edwin G. Busse, 8034 St. Lawrence avenue, a railway equipment company employé for 20 years—a married man and father of two children in the twenties—the first juror accepted, Attorney Tate said:

"Now, Mr. Busse, you understand I mean no offense, but I must ask you some personal questions. Were you ever involved in any such litigation as this yourself?"

Mr. Busse, whose thin, careworn face was framed by white hair, twirled his thumbs and, without appearing in the least offended, replied: "No, sir."

"Your own home life, Mr. Busse," Attorney Tate continued in a gentle but inquiring tone, "it has been free from divorce?"

"O, yes," answered Mr. Busse.

Lorenz Wolter, 3443 Lincoln avenue, optometrist and jeweler, before being accepted as a juror by both sides, said he was married and childless. Attorney Tate began: "You've been happily married, Mr. Wolter?"

"For 21 years," Mr. Wolter replied earnestly.

"Perfect" Husbands Abundant.

A woman in the front row of the courtroom whispered: "I never saw so many perfect husbands. Why don't they ask any of them if they ever did any philandering?"

Attorney John L. Henrick, one of Mrs. Blackridge's three attorneys, who sat with her, asked less searching questions of the jurors.

"Merely because a married man goes out with a woman who is not his wife, would that prejudice you against the woman?" he asked Herman Bukman, 7100 South Sangamon street, elderly wholesale produce merchant—married, and father of seven children.

Mr. Bukman hesitated, and Attorney Tate objected to the question.

"Qualify it with the phrase, 'if that is all,'" the court ruled.

Attorney Tate asked Mr. Bukman if he believed in "the right of a good, loyal and true wife to enjoy the love and affections of her spouse without having them stolen by a third party." He did, he replied.

SUNDAY SCHOOL OPENS 'GAMBLING HOUSE'; BIG SHAKEUP OF POLICE

Mount Vernon, N. Y., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—After a secret vigilance committee of a Methodist Bible class had operated an ostensible gambling house here and unearthed conditions described as "open, notorious, and a public scandal," the biggest police shakeup in the city's history took place, it was disclosed today.

Mark D. Stiles, former president of the Mount Vernon Trust company, resigned from the post of commissioner of public safety, which he had held for five years.

Mr. Stiles asserted that Chief Inspector Michael I. Silverstein, Detective William Day, formerly in charge of the local prohibition enforcement squad, and J. O. M. Vantassell, deputy commissioner of public safety and secretary to the commissioner, also were "through."

MERGER SETTLED; INTEREST ON CAR BONDS TO BE PAID

Hold Council Hearing on Franchise Today.

Owners of the $77,000,000 5 per cent first mortgage bond issue of the Chicago Surface Lines will receive their semi-annual interest amounting to $2,000,000 on Feb. 1, the due date. Payment was ordered by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson at a traction hearing yesterday when he was informed by attorney Walter L. Fisher, that the opposing groups of first mortgage bondholders had reached a final agreement on a merger of the two systems.

Both transit systems are in receivership in Judge Wilkerson's court and he had ordered interest withheld until the security holders agreed on reorganization plans, including merger. The bondholders' groups agreed on the chief elements of the reorganization some time ago and for the last few days they have been clearing up the remaining points which stood in the way of complete accord.

An Important Step.

Attorney Fisher was appointed by Judge Wilkerson to coördinate the negotiations for a merger. His report of a final settlement yesterday was considered another important step forward toward a unification of the surface and rapid transit lines. The reorganization plan will now be drafted in detail and will become the basis for putting the city's new transit franchise into effect. The companies are now operating without a franchise.

Judge Wilkerson said in the court hearing yesterday that if the merger plan is not carried to completion, the payment of the next semi-annual interest on the street car bonds, due next Aug. 1, might be suspended.

Council Hearing Today.

This morning the city council local transportation committee opens its public hearings on the extension of the March 3 deadline to July 31 for acceptance by the traction companies of the 1930 unification ordinance. Ald. James B. Bowler is chairman of the committee. At a recent council meeting a number of spokesmen for civic groups criticized the terms of the pending franchise ordinance. They advocated public ownership and operation of the transit systems.

Yesterday a protective committee for the Chicago Railways company participation certificates series 1, headed by Chairman C. H. Wilmerding, demanded that Abel Davis, chairman of the board of the Chicago Title and Trust company, take legal steps as trustee to prevent the acceptance of the 1930 franchise ordinance.

This group of junior security holders charges that the new pending merger plan is a "repudiation by bankers and lawyers of the view upon which the bankers acted in the sale of the securities 25 years ago."

Under the financial revision now agreed to, the voting power of the common stock in the new company will be allocated on the basis of 60 per cent for the surface lines and 40 per cent for the rapid transit interests.

JUDGE'S RULING HITS MDIVANI DEFENSE IN EMBEZZLEMENT TRIAL

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Blocking the effort of Princes Serge and David Mdivani to introduce testimony that they had offered to repay losses to investors in their oil company, the prosecutors today scored a victory in the trial in which the two are defendants. They are charged with embezzling a total of $30,000 from Pacific Shore Oil company funds.

Superior Judge Fletcher Bowron handed down his ruling during cross-examination of Robert Vignola, motion picture producer who purchased $35,000 of the brothers' oil shares.

The cross-examiner's question was construed as a preliminary to the defendants' contention that they acted at all times in good faith and held themselves ready to repay investors for any losses.

Ex-Judge Carlos Hardy testified that investors had been told no salaries were to be paid the oil company officers. The prosecution, however, presented evidence that $1,000 a month salaries were voted to both Serge and David and that $6,000 back payment was made to David from the treasury.

EXPECT TO START BALLOT RECOUNT JOB THIS WEEK

County Judge Jarecki was working yesterday on plans for the recount of all the votes cast in the Chicago election board district in the November, 1932, election as ordered by him last Saturday.

Joseph W. Badenoch of Evanston, who heads the citizens' committee that presented the petition for the recount, and its attorney, Harry E. Kelly, expect to consult the county judge today on arrangements to start the first recount teams to work next Friday.

It is expected that space will be leased near the city hall for the recount job as there is not enough room in the election commissioners' office. About $50,000 is being raised by subscription by the citizens' committee to pay for the recount.

FLEEING KANSAS FELON IS KILLED; THREE RETAKEN

Two Free Out of Seven Who Fled Prison.

Paola, Kas., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Shouting futilely, "Let's fight!" Bob [Big Boy] Brady was slain near here today by a posse that also captured three of the six convicts who fled with him Friday over the Kansas penitentiary walls at Lansing. A posse of 40 officers, National Guardsmen and farmers captured the 3.

Charles Clifton McArthur, 29, was arrested near a police station at Kansas City yesterday made five accounted for and the sixth and seventh still are at large.

Led Former Escape.

One of them is Jim Clark, a lifer, who with Brady led a prison break at the same place last Memorial day. During that break, Kirk Prather, the warden, was taken along as a hostage until the convicts reached the sheltering hills of northeastern Oklahoma. Friday, Clark and a fellow convict, believed to have been Frank Delmar, kidnaped a rural school teacher, Lewis Dresser, in his motor car near Lansing, releasing him near Pawhuska.

The three taken today are said to be Fred Cody, Tommie McMahon, and Benjamin Young. They said they hadn't had a bite to eat since they left the prison and as soon as they got in jail at Paola they ordered a dollar's worth of ice cream and a dollar's worth of apple pie.

"That's great," Warden Lacey Simpson of the Lansing prison said tonight when informed of the captures.

Inquiry Starts Today.

The board of administration plans to visit Lansing tomorrow and conduct an investigation, particularly as to the actions of the tower guards during the Friday break. One of them, Andrew Drennon, who was reported to have failed to fire a shot, is under suspension. Another, Eugene Vadel, whose shotgun was reported dropped outside the prison wall, has not reported to work since the break.

Brady and Clark previously had escaped from the Oklahoma state penitentiary.

JAILED FOR HURLING BRICK.

George Graham, 46 years old, 1441 West Madison street, was taken to the Bridewell yesterday when he was unable to pay a fine of $50 and costs imposed by Judge Leon Edelman in the Des Plaines street court on a charge that he threw a brick through the window of the bungalow of Joseph Mason at 134 South Leavitt street. Graham declared his wife was living with Mason, but was told this was no excuse.

$1,000,000 STORY IS RULED OUT OF H. O. STONE TRIAL

A point was won by the defense yesterday in the trial of five former officials of H. O. Stone and company on charges of using the mails to defraud. Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan ruled out a "$1,000,000 conversation" related in testimony Saturday by Charles H. Binney, a vice president of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company.

The conversation, according to Mr. Binney, was between Charles P. Packer Jr., former treasurer of the defunct real estate company, and Henry F. Norcott, former president, both of them defendants. Binney testified that Norcott told Packer in 1928 that he was worth $1,000,000 and that he would put his entire fortune in the company if necessary. In 1930, when the firm was in difficulties, Norcott refused to make good his promise, Binney testified.. Judge Sullivan ruled the testimony out after lengthy arguments.

It is the second trial of the five former officials, who were found guilty and given prison sentences or heavy fines in the first trial.

LIQUOR CONTROL CONFEREES FOR BEER BAR SALES

Yield to Gov. Horner on Label Issue.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—In a sudden burst of zeal the joint senate-house conference committee which is patching the liquor control bill tonight adopted five amendments to the 25,000 word measure before enthusiasm waned. Three important matters were left unsettled and will be discussed tomorrow before the legislature convenes to receive the committee's report.

Gov. Horner was believed responsible for tonight's industry. Early in the evening he sent a letter to Chairman R. V. Graham [Dem., Chicago] asking several major revisions in the bill as it then stood.

Results of Session.

The results were these:

1. Recession from the Powers amendment which would have forced distillers to label as "imitation" all whisky not containing 75 per cent of liquor aged four years in oak. Mr. Horner termed this "an unfair handicap on Illinois products," and the farmer vote gave a hearty second. So it was stricken, but a plan to make it effective in 1938 is under consideration.

2. Exemption of beer from the anti-bar provision. The governor asked first that bars be completely eliminated from the repeal setup, but said that he would accept a compromise allowing beer to be served across the counter, providing the counters were not more than forty inches in height. The committee let beer in, but kept liquor out, and did not act on the 40 inch proposal.

3. Allowance of a $100 expenditure for brewers' signs in a tavern, with no limitation on how many taverns they could thus decorate.

Alcohol Tax Eliminated.

4. Elimination of the 50 cent tax on denatured alcohol, largely because it was pleaded that motorists would be penalized for purchasing anti-freeze radiator fluid.

5. Virtual agreement that gin should be removed from the "imitation" stigma if the alcohol used is made from grain.

Tomorrow the committee will consider some changes in the local option provision, a cut from $1,000 to $100 in the license fee for importing distributors, and some means of keeping the Powers amendment alive but ineffective until ample supply of domestic whisky can be distilled.

The governor also told Senator Graham that the provision in the bill classifying bottled highballs and cocktails with wines of low alcoholic content for taxation purposes should be changed. He regarded it, he said, "as an attempt to favor one enterprise without regard for the public good."

Sees Victory for Bill.

"These suggestions," he added, "cover the important objections to the bill as it now appears to me. Any law enacted will not be perfect in every respect; there are too many divergent views in the legislature to hope for that, but if corrections are made in the provisions to which I have referred, the bill should receive the requisite two-thirds vote in each house of the general assembly. It will be worthy of trial until experience suggests other improvements.

"The future of the liquor question rests with education in its broad sense. The old abuses of the liquor business will return unless positive and definite state-wide laws on the subject are promptly enacted. If the liquor trade is to be recognized as legitimate, it must be made so. If, by carelessness or otherwise, we permit it to retrograde as it did prior to national prohibition, it is only a question of time when it will again be prohibited—the good with the bad."

STATE LEGISLATOR IS ON STRIKE, SHE TELLS MINISTERS

Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill, state representative, of Downers Grove, declared yesterday before Chicago Methodist ministers that she has gone on a strike as a member of the legislature. The ministers, assembled in their regular weekly meeting at the Chicago Temple, were told by Mrs. O'Neill that she will not go to Springfield again until Gov. Horner calls a concurrent special session of the legislature empowered to consider other subjects than liquor control.

"The present session has been costing the taxpayers $500 every day since it met Nov. 22, and yet is no closer to agreement on liquor control than it was then," said Mrs. O'Neill. "The taxpayers can't help themselves. I am asking the governor to call a concurrent session at which school relief, taxes and 133 other pressing subjects can be considered. I don't intend to go back to the liquor session to help keep the stage set for the distillers and brewers."

VEREE TEASDALE, ADOLPHE MENJOU PLAN TO BE WED

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Confirmation of the formal engagement of Veree Teasdale, exotic appearing actress, and Adolphe Menjou, the well dressed man of the films, was made today by Miss Teasdale, who said, "Of course, while Mr. Menjou and I are engaged, every one who is familiar with the California divorce laws knows that we cannot be married until after the expiration of the one year period of his interlocutory divorce from Kathryn Crawford."

The Menjou-Crawford divorce becomes final on Aug. 5, 1934.

Miss Teasdale, who is a niece of the poet Sara Teasdale, signed a new contract with Warner-First National film studio today under which she secured a contract reservation permitting her to go abroad to visit Spain, France, and Italy in the summer. This gave rise to reports she and Menjou would be married abroad.

LIFE THREATENED

[Associated Press Photo.]

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Death threats forced Miss Doris Duke, $50,000,000 tobacco heiress, to seek seclusion today in her country estate at Somerville, N. J. Detective details at strategic points around the estate augmented the private detective guard which accompanies Miss Duke to Broadway night clubs and social functions.

Meanwhile, Police Captain McDermott of the alien squad directed search in New York today for the writer of a threatening letter, believed to be a Slav.

The letter threatened death for Miss Duke unless a fortune reached the writer in a secret manner. There was a report that a second note threatened kidnaping of the girl.

At the great white Duke home on Fifth avenue it was said Miss Duke was paying an accustomed visit to her New Jersey estate.

LOESCH BACKS PERSONAL RIGHTS IN LIQUOR RULE

Says Restrictions Aid Speakeasy.

The state legislature is inevitably inviting the return of the speakeasy and the bootlegger and is further complicating the liquor problem by proposing restrictions on the manner in which drinking shall be done, Frank J. Loesch, president of the Chicago crime commission, declared yesterday. Mr. Loesch, who was a member of the late Wickersham commission, which made a thorough study of the national liquor problem, pointed out that the state legislature has now ended nine weeks of debate on the liquor control bill without taking final action.

"The people are going to drink as they wish and we should recognize this fact," the veteran crusader said. "It is unreasonable for any state authority to dictate how the individual communities should do their drinking.

Infringes on Liberty.

"So far as Chicago is concerned, it is apparent that people here who drink want to do their drinking at bars as well as at tables. It seems to me an unwarranted interference with the rights of an individual to say that he may stand up when he drinks beer and sit down when he drinks his spirituous liquor.

"The state legislature continues to impose all sorts of restrictions on the personal habits of the individual despite the resentment evidenced by the public in defying the enforcement of the 18th amendment and the national prohibition act and by the decisive vote for repeal of the 18th amendment. Certainly men and women should have the right to drink standing at a bar or sitting down and, however, objectionable it may be to many of us, as long as women have equal rights to vote they should have equal rights in drinking.

Note of Warning.

"To attempt regulation of such matters is only failing into the error to which the Volstead act committed itself in interfering with the personal habits of persons who wished to use alcoholic beverages.

"Prohibition drinking at bars merely increases the price of liquor and obligates the drinker to pay a tip. People will patronize speakeasies where it is not only cheaper for them to drink, but where they are allowed to drink in the manner in which they desire, if these unreasonable restrictions are to be imposed."

MAYOR PUSHES PARK PROJECT ON U. S. BLOCK

Mayor Kelly yesterday directed Commissioner of Public Works Hewitt to make a formal request of the government to make a public park out of the block bounded by Harrison, Polk, Clinton, and Canal streets. The block is owned by the government.

"I am preparing a formal request to be submitted to the proper federal officials," said Mr. Hewitt, "and I will see that it reaches them as soon as possible. A park on that site would be an improvement to that neighborhood and an open air space for residents of the district."

The block was purchased by the government from the Marshall Field estate some years ago to be used as the site for a new postoffice. Later, the present site of the new Chicago postoffice was purchased and the old proposed site now is occupied only by the United States' appraisers' stores.

COLUMBIA'S SEX COURSE AUTHOR DISAVOWS BOOK

She Becomes a Catholic and Instruction Ends.

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—The subject of this story is sex. On Saturday the Rev. John F. O'Hara, vice president of Notre Dame university, denounced before a group of Boston Catholics what he called "a course in concubinage" at Columbia university.

Yesterday two Chicago Protestant pastors, the Rev. Dr. John Thompson and the Rev. Dr. Frederick Shannon, lined up squarely behind Father O'Hara in his objections to the course.

Today Prof. John J. Coss, director of the summer school at Columbia, explained that the objectionable course was dropped after one semester because of the hullabaloo that was raised over it.

The Climax a Collapse.

But here's the grand climax:

Since the course was dropped Miss Ruth Reed, from whose work "Modern Marriage," its so-called "concubinage" features were drawn, has been converted to the Catholic faith and has publicly repudiated the book.

Father O'Hara at a luncheon of the Notre Dame club of Boston recalled that in 1931 President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia had lamented the general decline in manners and attributed it to the anti-philosophies and pseudo-psychologies of the times.

"Less than two months after the publication of that lament," Father O'Hara continued, "Columbia announced a new course to be required of all sophomores in a 'freer conception of the sexes unhindered by law or religions.'"

Pastors Talk Sternly.

Said the Rev. Dr. Shannon in his sermon in Orchestra hall, Chicago:

"I consider it a shame and a disgrace that universities should require students to take sex courses."

The Rev. Dr. Thompson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, said the same thing, in effect, and promised to devote more of his next Sunday's sermon to the matter, the Associated Press reported.

Prof. Coss waved all controversy aside.

"Is he digging that old thing up again?" he asked, when told what Father O'Hara had said. "It was not worth bothering about."

Then he explained that the course was dropped after one term in 1932.

It was the same year that Miss Reed, an instructor in a New England girls' college, came to Columbia as a guest speaker before the Newman club, an organization of Catholic students at the school.

Discards Conflicting Theories.

Miss Reed there and then repudiated her book as containing "numerous contradictions and discarded theories," and said that because of her new faith the practices which she had advocated were "unacceptable."

CULT RAPIST IS CALLED SANE; HE ASKS FREEDOM

Circuit Judge William J. Fulton started a hearing in Geneva yesterday on the petition for a writ of habeas corpus on which Guiseppe Maria Abbate, cult leader who was twice convicted of the rape of small girls, is seeking his freedom from Elgin state hospital for the insane.

Abbate testified that he abandoned the barber trade in 1906 and organized his cult after he had a vision. He said that he had made a handsome living from his New Jerusalem church, 2021 De Kalb street.

Dr. H. I. Davis of the University of Illinois medical school, Dr. Anthony G. Whitman, assistant superintendent at the Elgin hospital, and Dr. J. R. Jacobson, in charge of the ward where Abbate was kept, all testified yesterday that they believed him sane.

"A man cannot be held insane because of religious beliefs which have caused him to better his position in life materially," said Dr. Jacobson. "His beliefs may be bizarre, but they are not delusions."

Abbate was convicted of the rape of a 12 year old girl in 1922. Ten years later he was convicted of the rape of a girl of the same age before Judge Harry M. Fisher but was granted a new trial by the Supreme court. He was convicted again, and sentenced to 10 years in prison by Judge Michael Feinberg. A jury then found him insane and he was sent to Elgin. A Cook county deputy was in court yesterday ready to arrest Abbate if he is freed.

Newspaper Office Robbed of $807 in Kansas City

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Three gunmen held up the Kansas City Journal Post and escaped with $807 in cash and $3,155 in checks today. While one of the robbers waited in a motor car outside, two companions entered the business office and forced Miss Rose Kellerman, cashier, to hand over the money.

Piles Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting

Thousands of sufferers from piles have learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with an internal medicine. Neither salves nor cutting remove the cause.

Bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel causes piles. The veins are flabby the bowel walls weak—the parts almost dead. To end Piles an internal medicine must be used to stimulate the circulation, heal and restore the affected parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was the first to discover a real internal Pile remedy. He called his prescription HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for 1,000 patients with the marvelous record of success in 960 cases, and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID tablets from their own druggist with a rigid money back guarantee.

So why waste time on external remedies or worry about an operation when Walgreen's invites every Pile sufferer to try HEM-ROID with guarantee of money back if it does not end their Piles, no matter how stubborn the case?

State Regulation of Milk Industry Asked of Horner

BY PAUL POTTER.

An appeal to Gov. Horner to include the regulation of the milk industry in his special call for the state legislature was made yesterday by State Representative Frank A. McCarthy [Rep., Elgin], member of the state legislature's milk investigation committee.

McCarthy pointed out, in his letter of request to the governor, that a price war between Chicago milk dealers "is imminent if not actually in progress" and that something must be done to protect and stabilize the dairy industry in Illinois.

Dairy farmers, he said, have appealed to him to obtain such aid from the state legislature, possibly along lines adopted in Wisconsin and New York, where state milk commissions are now operating.

More Retail Price Cuts.

Meanwhile further reductions in retail milk prices were being made by several milk companies seeking to hold their customers against cutrate competitors. A few of the smaller dairies employing union labor yesterday reduced the price of delivered milk from 10 to 9 cents a quart to meet the new price of 9 cents a quart for cash and carry milk established by the larger dealers in stores last Friday. The cutrate dairies were selling cash and carry milk as low as 2 quarts for 15 cents, with a charge of 4 cents bottle deposit. Some of them indicated they would reduce the price to 4 or 5 cents if the larger companies continued to reduce their prices.

Consumption of both milk and cream was said to have increased since the announcement of lower prices, although the extent could not be determined, as yet, since most companies were reporting changes in customers.

Discount U. S. Interference.

Little likelihood was seen by local dairymen that the federal government would step into the picture following the statement received by Mayor Kelly yesterday from Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. The AAA chief declared that the government was ready to enforce a blanket license on Chicago distributors if the producing farmers would request such action, but that the arbitration committee's price of $1.85 per hundred pounds [3.98 cents a quart] was too high.

At the Pure Milk association offices it was said that an appeal had been made to Wallace to consider the effects of the new 60 cent dollar and recent advances of 2 cents a pound in butter in establishing a new price for milk to farmers in this area, higher than that announced by the AAA during the recent strike.

Milk wagon drivers in Gary, members of the local union there, yesterday refused to deliver milk to stores where it would be sold at less than the prices charged at the doorstep.

CHURCH TO RUN AGAIN SEEKING SIMPSON'S POST

State Representative Ralph E. Church of Evanston announced yesterday his candidacy for the Republican nomination for congress from the tenth congressional district. The incumbent is Congressman James Simpson Jr.

Representative Church, who has been a member of the Illinois legislature for sixteen years, sought the congressional nomination in the primary of April, 1932, and on the original count apparently defeated Mr. Simpson by 73 votes. However, a recount before Judge Thomas J. Lynch resulted in Mr. Simpson's being declared the nominee by 45 votes. He subsequently was elected.

Mr. Church in his announcement yesterday said he is basing his candidacy on his long record at Springfield for independent public service. He promised to use his experience in the cause of good government. He charged that his nomination in 1932 was wrested from him by a decision that disenfranchised 321 citizens who had voted for him.

MINE WORKERS OPEN NATIONAL PARLEY TODAY

1,500 Expected; Johnson May Be Speaker.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Union coal miners from all bituminous and anthracite regions in the United States and Canada were arriving at Indianapolis tonight for the biennial convention of the United Mine Workers of America, opening tomorrow.

The convention will be in session for ten days or longer and union officials estimated 1,500 delegates will attend.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator, may be one of the headline speakers, it was learned tonight. Union officials have invited him and they believe he will accept.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor and former secretary treasurer of the miners' union, and Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, have accepted invitations to speak.

John L. Lewis, international president, said the union would renew its demand for a shorter working day. The present eight hour day under the NRA is unsatisfactory, he said. Since its 1919 convention in Indianapolis the union has been pledged to the six hour day.

While questions as to wage scale and working hours will be studied at the convention, Lewis said these would be considered further at a conference of miners, operators, and officials of the national recovery administration in Washington, Feb. 12.

Statistical information will be presented on operation of the bituminous code, he said, and it may be that certain revisions in the code may be made by mutual agreement.

FARLEY'S CHIEF AID SAYS HE'LL KEEP JOB AS A COMMITTEEMAN

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—(AP)—W. W. Howes, first assistant postmaster general, said today he did not intend to resign as Democratic national committeeman for South Dakota and that President Roosevelt's disapproval of committeemen practicing law before government departments "obviously does not apply to me."

"I see no reason for resigning from the committee," Howes asserted. "Nobody has asked me to. I have no intention of practicing law before government departments."

Senator Bulow [Dem., D. D.] said, "I don't see why Howes should resign as national committeeman," and South Dakota's Democratic representatives, Hildebrandt and Werner, expressed the same opinion.

POLICE TOO LATE TO GET LOOT IN BANK BOX CACHE

Police learned yesterday when they visited the Germania Safe Deposit and Trust company, 1533 North Clark street, to recover $11,000 taken Jan 17 in a holdup of the State Bank of Nauvoo, Ill., that a man believed to have been Robert Wilson, a member of the bandit gang, had preceded them by an hour and taken part of the money from a safe deposit box which he had rented.

They recovered $6,200 of the loot in the safety vault, however, and got $800 more from an automobile dealer who sold a car to one of the bandits, captured last Thursday. Wilson, the only member of the gang still at liberty, is believed to have the rest of the money.

The other three robbers, Emil Cortez, who bought the automobile, Lloyd Lorraine and Harry Rosa, have been arrested, confessed and were turned over to authorities of Hancock county. Bank officials recovered the money from the safety vault, where the bandits said they put it, by a replevin action in the Superior court.

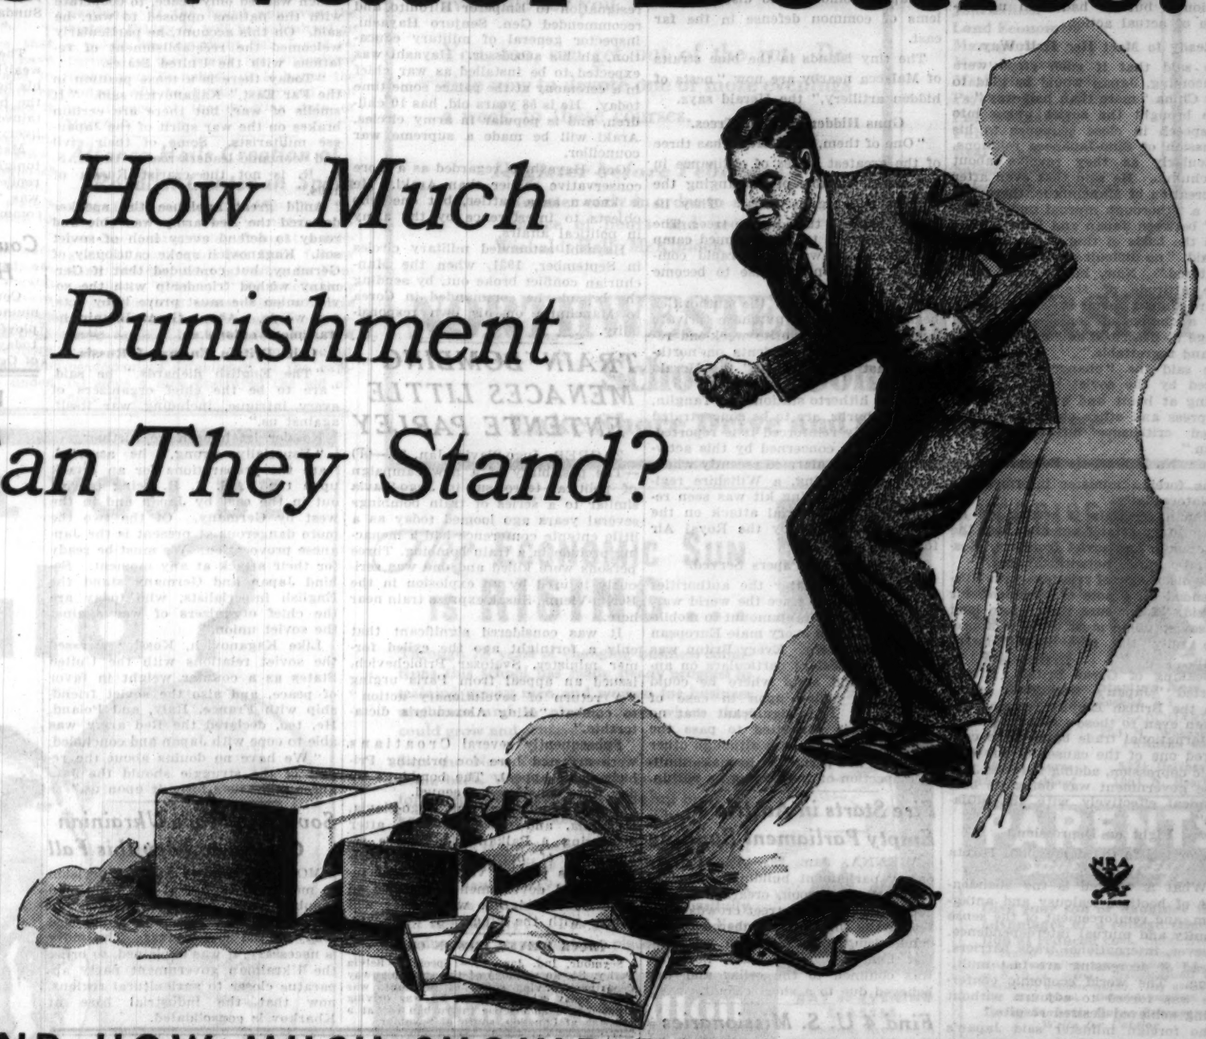
Hot Water Bottles!

How Much Punishment Can They Stand?



—AND HOW MUCH SHOULD THEY COST YOU?

DO YOU know what we do at Walgreen's to test hot water bottles?—And to establish a standard of quality!

We take a certain number, picked at random out of samples submitted, fill them with hot water, put them on the floor, and jump on them.

We give them a treatment about ten times as rough as you'd ever give them at home. This way, we see whether Walgreen's hot water bottles can "take it."

Just as evidence that Walgreen's hot water bottles can take it, you, the public, buy so many that today, due to the quantity purchased, we can afford to sell a hot water bottle for as little as 59 cents that used to cost over 89 cents.

Of course, we carry larger and heavier grades as well, but whether you pay 59 cents or $3.00, you may be sure at Walgreen's you are getting a far better bottle at the price than would be possible without our quantity buying.

Another important point—our hot water bottles and other rubber sundries move out of stock so fast that you never get any stale goods.

Drugs Specially Tested

In a larger sense, this hot water bottle "treatment" typifies what we do with nearly everything we sell in our 482 stores.

For almost every article you buy, from alarm clocks to golf balls, we have some practical test to make sure of your satisfaction.

For drugs used in prescriptions, and products sold over the Walgreen name, we have scientific tests to prove that they are exactly what they should be. We do this to protect the life and well-being of our customers, as well as our own good name.

That's why we believe you'll agree that "Saving at Walgreen's" is only one of a number of good reasons for trading at our stores.

At the Walgreen Laboratories, special tests are applied to drugs to be used in Walgreen prescriptions and to products bearing the Walgreen name.

JAPAN SEEKS NO QUARREL WITH U.S., HIROTA SAYS

Foreign Chief Extends Hand of Friendship.

men principles of preserving the peace in East Asia."

He quoted from a decree issued by the emperor of Japan which said:

"It is our desire to promote mutual confidence between our empire and all other powers and to make known the justice of its cause throughout the world."

Hirota said that relations between Japan and "friendly powers in general" became closer and more cordial following upon the empire's withdrawal from the league.

He referred to the approaching coronation of Henry Pu-yi as emperor of Manchukuo with the words "a decision is about to be made on the establishment of a monarchical régime which has been so eagerly awaited by all her [Manchukuo's] people and which will go far to solidify the foundations of Manchukuo" as a nation.

"This," he said, "is a matter of congratulation not for Manchukuo alone but for the peace of the orient and for the peace of the world."

Demands China's Stabilization.

He described the Japanese government as having a serious responsibility for the maintenance of peace in East Asia and as having made a firm resolve "in that regard."

He said the most important essential to peace in eastern Asia, however, was "the stabilization of China herself."

"Our government," said the foreign minister, "sincerely hopes for the political and economic rehabilitation of China. It hopes that she will be able to unite with Japan in performing the obvious mission of both Japan and China: To contribute, through mutual aid and coöperation, to the peaceful development of their part of the globe."

He said he regretted that thus far the actual situation in China belied such a hope. It had been reported to him that the Chinese government had decided to take steps "looking toward the rectifications of the Sino-Japanese relations" but he had seen no evidence of actual action.

Ready to Meet Her Half Way.

He said that if such steps were forthcoming, Japan would be glad to meet China "more than half way."

He brought the soviet union into his speech in close sequence to his discussion of Sino-Japanese relations, particularly as they revolve about Manchukuo. He said that even after the creation of Manchukuo, there had been a "thorough mutual understanding" between Japan and Russia.

On the basis of this understanding, he said, "no difficult question was encountered." Now, however, he said, "the attitude of the soviet union toward Japan seems to have undergone a change of some sort." This change he described as "most surprising and regrettable."

He said the "change" was symbolized by the soviet union "broadcasting at home and abroad through the press and other channels unwarranted criticisms directed against Japan."

No Militaristic Policy.

The foreign minister informed the legislators flatly:

"Japan certainly is setting up no new military establishments along the Manchukuo and soviet frontiers, Moscow propaganda notwithstanding."

The discussion of relations with Russia ended on a note of optimism, for he said: "I am sure that before long the soviet union must come to appreciate fully the true intentions of Japan."

Speaking of Great Britain, Hirota asserted "Japan's traditional amity with the British Empire remains unshaken even to these times."

International trade barriers he considered one of the causes of the economic depression, adding that the Japanese government was doing its best to "deal effectively with the situation."

Fight on Depression.

Referring to the depression, Hirota said:

"What is wanted is the abandonment of bootless jealousy and antagonism, and reinforcement of the sense of unity and mutual interdependence. However, international trade barriers, instead of decreasing are fast multiplying. The world economic conference was forced to adjourn without having achieved desired results."

The foreign minister said Japan's future was one of hope.

"We should not forget," he said, "that Japan, serving as only a cornerstone for the edifice of the peace of East Asia, bears the entire burden of responsibilities. That eventually this position, in which Japan naturally and actually finds herself, will be rightly understood by the other powers is, I believe, a foregone conclusion."

BRITISH CONVERT SINGAPORE INTO NEW GIBRALTAR

Nearby Isles Nests of Hidden Artillery.

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Great Britain is arming her $250,000,000 naval base at Singapore until it is beginning to rival Gibraltar as a fortress, according to the Daily Herald.

Admirals of the British, Australian, and New Zealand navies will confer at Singapore tomorrow to discuss problems of common defense in the far east.

The tiny islands in the blue straits of Malacca nearby are now "nests of hidden artillery," the Herald says.

Guns Hidden Beneath Trees.

"One of them, Palaubrani, has three of the greatest pieces of ordinance in the world, capable of outranging the biggest naval guns afloat. They lie hidden beneath tufted palm trees. The whole colony is today an armed camp and defenses await only rapid completing of the naval base to become almost impregnable."

"Four months ago the authorities began secretly to purchase private land at Changi, favorite week-end resort of European residents on northeast coast of the island," the Herald asserts.

Troops hitherto stationed at Tanglin, in the suburbs, are to be concentrated and strongly reinforced it is reported.

Europeans, concerned by this activity, were more alarmed recently when, early one morning, a Wiltshire regiment in full fighting kit was seen repulsing a mock aerial attack on the east coast, staged by the Royal Air force.

Mobilization Papers Served.

A few weeks later the authorities for the first time since the world war, served what was tantamount to mobilization papers on every male European of British descent. Every Briton was required to declare particulars on antecedents and state where he could quickly be called upon in case of emergency. It is significant that no Japanese are permitted to pass the gates of the naval base although other nationals are permitted to make limited inspection of work going on within.

Fire Starts in Austria's Empty Parliament Building

VIENNA, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Austria's empty parliament building started to burn this afternoon, creating intense excitement among street crowds who, seeing the smoke, remembered the incendiarism in the German reichstag last February. The blaze, however, was confined to the cellar and was believed due to a short circuit.

THREAT OF WAR WANES IN JAPAN; PEACE NEW AIM

Militaristic Policy Comes to Sudden End.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Jan. 23.—[Tuesday]—The abdication of Lieut. Gen. Sadao Araki from the Japanese war portfolio can almost be regarded as closing the era of military dictatorship which, in the past few months, has been rapidly waning.

It was expected today that with Araki gone the defiant national policy reflected in the war chief's quaint oriental philosophy would give place to practical diplomacy. It is also anticipated that the voice of the foreign office, headed by Koki Hirota, will be heard more and more.

At Odds with Cabinet.

That the cabinet is able to survive the loss of Araki indicates the relative unimportance of the resigned war chief compared to other members of the ministry. It is conceded that if Premier Makoto Saito or Finance Minister Korekiyo Takahashi had dropped out the government undoubtedly would have fallen.

While it was generally agreed that Araki was not forced out, some quarters declare that a divergence of views within the war office made his resignation imperative. Araki tendered his resignation from his sick bed, where he was suffering from pneumonia. Physicians state that his temperature has been normal for the past three weeks and that he has been eating heartily. Araki plans to leave early in February to recuperate at the hot springs in the quake-ridden Izu peninsula.

While Araki's one time importance in the cabinet and to the nation is evaporating, his popularity with the masses is as great as ever. The official residence where he lay ill of pneumonia was swamped with hundreds of gifts, cures, medical advice, and letters daily.

Mikado Gets Resignation.

Although his secretaries are working overtime, 5,000 letters remain unopened.

Premier Saito proceeded to the palace yesterday, submitted Araki's resignation to Emperor Hirohito and recommended Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, inspector general of military education, ah his successor. Hayashi was expected to be installed as war chief in a ceremony at the palace some time today. He is 58 years old, has 10 children, and is popular in army circles. Araki will be made a supreme war councillor.

Gen. Hayashi is regarded as a more conservative soldier than Araki. He is known as a battler, but one who objects to interference by the army in political affairs.

Hayashi astounded military circles in September, 1931, when the Manchurian conflict broke out, by sending the brigade he commanded in Corea to Manchuria on his own responsibility.

TRAIN BOMBING MENACES LITTLE ENTENTE PARLEY

ZAGREB, Jugo-Slavia, Jan. 22.—(AP)—The possibility of a new campaign of political terrorism in Jugo-Slavia similar to a series of train bombings several years ago loomed today as a little entente conference had a menacing prelude in a train bombing. Three persons were killed and one was seriously injured by an explosion in the Berlin-Vienna-Susak express train near here.

It was considered significant that only a fortnight ago the exiled former minister, Svetozar Pribichevich, issued an appeal from Paris urging "A return of revolutionary action" to combat "King Alexander's dictatorship."

Subsequently several Croatians were arrested here for printing Pribichevich's appeal. The bombings today were considered a sequel.

Foreign ministers of Jugo-Slavia, Rumania, and Czechoslovakia, after discussing a Balkan bloc and a resumption of normal relations with Russia, as well as various recent international developments, planned to continue to Belgrade where they will confer with the king.

TRUCK DRIVER DIES IN CRASH.

Seymour, Ind. Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Belvin Polley, 34, an employé of the state highway department, living south of Seymour, was killed today when a truck he was driving crashed into an electric interurban car at a crossing at Langdon, south of Seymour.

JAPAN CLAIMS BULLITT SPEECH SPREAD IDEA OF THE DANGER OF WAR

TOKIO, Jan. 22.—(AP)—A speech by William C. Bullitt, American ambassador to Russia, was cited by a foreign office spokesman today as an example of prominent statesmen spreading the idea of the danger of a "Russo-Japanese war."

(In a speech in Philadelphia Mr. Bullitt asserted that "unfortunately it is impossible to say that there is no chance of war in the world today." However, he cited numerous Russian nonaggression pacts as evidence of the soviet government's desire for peace.)

The spokesman charged that soviet leaders were issuing "provocative statements" which were entirely responsible for the apparently world-wide uneasiness with regard to the prospects of a far eastern clash."

RED CHIEFTAINS WARN RUSSIA OF DANGER OF WAR

Britain Is Accused of Organizing Plot.

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

MOSCOW, Jan. 22.—Grave warnings of the danger of war were made public here today in speeches by two members of the communist political bureau. One speech was by L. M. Kaganovich, addressing a conference of the communist party of the province and city of Moscow. The other was by I. V. Kossior, who spoke before the communist party congress of the Ukraine.

Both men, especially Kossior, emphasized and amplified the more reserved statement made by Dictator Josef Stalin a month ago.

Analyzing the foreign situation, Kaganovich said a salient feature was the failure and virtual abandonment of pacifist talk or efforts at disarmament. On the other hand, he found "feverish preparation for war."

Insist Russia Wants Peace.

There were, he said, two groups of capitalist powers—those who had gained by the world war and wanted to keep what they had got and therefore opposed war, and those who wished to recover what they had lost or wished to get something more and, therefore, wanted war.

It was the policy of the soviet union, which wanted only peace, to coöperate with the nations opposed to war, he said. On this account, he particularly welcomed the reëstablishment of relations with the United States.

"Today there is a tense position in the Far East," Kaganovich said. "It smells of war, but there are certain brakes on the war spirit of the Japanese militarists. Some of their civil and economic leaders realize the U. S. S. R. is not the czarist Russia of 1904."

Amid great applause the speaker declared the Red army was able and ready to defend every inch of soviet soil. Kaganovich spoke cautiously of Germany, but concluded that if Germany wished friendship with the soviet union she must prove it by acts, not words. About Great Britain he was more outspoken.

Calls Britain Enemy of Russia.

"The English diehards," he said, "are to be the chief organizers of every intrigue, including war itself, against us."

Kossior let himself go further:

"Especially strong," he asserted, "are the preparations for an attack upon the U. S. S. R. being carried out in the east by Japan and in the west by Germany. Of the two the more dangerous at present is the Japanese provocation. We must be ready for their attack at any moment. Behind Japan and Germany stand the English imperialists, who today are the chief organizers of war against the soviet union."

Like Kaganovich, Kossior stressed the soviet relations with the United States as a counter weight in favor of peace, and also the soviet friendship with France, Italy, and Poland. He, too, declared the Red army was able to cope with Japan and concluded.

"We have no doubts about the result of the struggle should the Japanese militarists force it upon us."

Soviets to Move Ukrainian Capital to Kiev this Fall

MOSCOW, Jan. 22.—(AP)—A decision to move the capital of the Ukrainian republic from Kharkov to Kiev in autumn of this year was announced today in the soviet press. The move is necessary, it was explained, to bring the Ukrainian government party apparatus closer to agricultural regions, now that the industrial base at Kharkov is consolidated.

GUN FIGHT NEAR HOME OF BREMER UPSETS DISTRICT

Contact with Kidnapers Is Believed Certain.

BULLETIN.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 22.—(AP)—A heavy police guard in the home of Adolf Bremer, father of Edward Bremer, held captive by a kidnap gang, indicated tonight the $200,000 abduction case was approaching a climax. Friends of the family believed imminent final contact with the gang and the release of the 37 year old president of the Commercial State bank within 36 hours.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Reports of a gun fight in a prominent residential section near the home of Edward G. Bremer, kidnaped St. Paul banker, late tonight brought a new factor into the abduction that has kept this northwest city in a furor more than 135 hours.

Residents of the section several blocks from the home, where a patient watch is being kept in hopes of return of the "snatch" victim, reported to police that occupants of two large sedans had engaged in a gun fight on the street there.

Some of the reported witnesses declared that they had seen the flash of gun fire. Squad cars rushed to the vicinity reported, however, that they were unable to find any trace of the cars, and dismissed the matter.

Blame Outside "Muscling."

The statements of those who reported the supposed gun fight was taken by some to indicate that possibly an outside mob was attempting to muscle in on the $200,000 ransom demanded for the return of Bremer.

The reported clash between the two autos followed closely upon developments which indicated almost for a certainty that a contact had been made between the kidnapers and the Bremer family.

Two notes in Bremer's handwriting were contained in a bottle said to have been hurled through the window of the home of the Bremer family physician, Dr. H. T. Nippert, late Sunday night.

Magee Away from Home.

The fact that Walter W. Magee, wealthy contractor, was absent from his home and office today gave rise to the belief that one of the notes contained information regarding the delivery of the $200,000 ransom.

Magee, who returned to his home tonight, when asked about the report replied that as far as he knew there was "nothing doing" and refused to comment further.

County Treasurer McDonough announced yesterday that county employés will be paid a total of $325,000 today, their salaries for the last half of October.

TWO KIDNAPERS OF HACKETT GET LIFE IN PRISON

Jury Returns Verdict in Two Hours.

viction. The other three ballots were on the question of punishment.

The convicting of Swolley, who is 30 years old, and Souder, 31 years of age, breaks up the gang of downstate kidnapers, which was organized by Theodore [Handsome Jack] Klutas, former University of Illinois graduate who turned bootlegger. When the bootlegging profits started to wane the gang turned to kidnaping gamblers and other bootleggers known to have money.

Julius Augustus [Babe] Jones, who was the first gangster to break the tradition of gangland not to testify against his confederates, is to be sentenced on his plea of guilty after the motions for new trials for Swolley and Souder are ruled on. Jones took the witness stand during the trial and admitted that the gang had originally planned to hi-jack a truck load of liquor. Then Hackett happened to ride by on his way to the Navajo Golf club. The gang, remarking that they had obtained $75,000 on a previous occasion from Hackett, dropped the hi-jacking project, Jones said, and went through with the kidnaping.

Held in Jones Home.

Hackett was held captive in Jones' home, then in Aurora, until he agreed to pay the ransom money. This was paid four days later in Sycamore, Ill. Jones later moved to St. Charles, Ill., where he was arrested.

The defendants tried to prove an alibi. Souder said he was in Chicago attending the opening of A Century of Progress. Swolley claimed at the time he was in the office of his attorney, T. J. McCormick. The latter, however, did not testify and corroborate his client.

The closing day of this, the first kidnaping trial in the local state courts since gamblers and bootleggers were made the prey of this new racket, was devoted to arguments.

Prosecutor Coghlan made the closing argument after a group of three defense attorneys had sought to cast doubt on the case because the evidence was collected largely by Pat Roche, former chief investigator for the state's attorney's office, acting in the capacity of a private detective. The former ace investigator for the government did not testify during the trial because of illness. The defense attorneys made much of this fact.

Demands Death Penalty.

"I want no miscarriage of justice in this case," Prosecutor Coghlan said. "These men are kidnapers. They wrecked and ruined the family life of Hackett, even though he is a gambler. Kidnaping is a most despicable crime. The legislature has fixed three punishments for this crime—death in the electric chair, life imprisonment, or a term in the penitentiary of not less than five years. I say, gentlemen, that the penalty of death is the only punishment to fit this crime. It is up to you men to be pioneers in ending this class of crime."

HOLDS UP WOMEN IN SHOP.

A bandit entered the Lerner Dress store, 6340 South Halsted street, yesterday, held up four women employés and several customers, and took $16 from the cash register.

START NEW SEARCH FOR JURY IN TOUHY KIDNAP TRIAL TODAY

Efforts to choose a jury in Judge Michael Feinberg's court to try Roger Touhy and three members of his gang for the kidnaping of John Factor, wealthy speculator, will be resumed this morning. Eight jurors have been chosen and it is hoped to complete the jury today or tomorrow.

A special venire of 100 men has been ordered to appear in court today and another special venire has been ordered for tomorrow. The work of choosing a jury was begun a week ago, but there was a setback when it was discovered that two jurors had concealed facts concerning their criminal associations. Both have been charged with perjury and contempt of court and they will be arraigned on Jan. 31.

First Assistant States Attorney Wilbert Crowley was informed yesterday that efforts are being made by west side friends of the Touhy gang to raise a defense fund. Several beer parties have been given at which the guests have been asked to contribute for the gang, it was reported.

'SISSIFIED' WAX ARMY MODELS STIR ITALY'S IRE

ROME, Jan. 22.—(AP)—"Effeminate" wax models for displaying uniforms in military tailor shops aroused the ire today of Fascist newspapers and officers who demanded that the "sissified" figures be replaced by "more military and less endearing clothes-horses."

One officer, writing in the newspaper Tribuna, said that "Shop windows show officers with pomaded hair, feminine figures, eyebrows and lashes of a Garbo and lovely carmined fingernails."

He declared this "is an insufferable reflection" upon the dignity, austerity, and rugged discipline of the nation's defenders.

WOMAN DIES OF BURNS.

Mrs. Ida Brake, 63 Years old, 1030 North State street, died yesterday in the Henrotin hospital of burns received Saturday when she tossed a kerosene soaked rag in the stove in her home and it flared up, igniting her clothing.

MILLER QUIZZED AGAIN ON MALOY MYSTERY GIFTS

E. D. [Jack] Miller, president of the Exhibitors' Association of Chicago, was before the federal grand jury most of yesterday in a renewed attempt by the government to obtain testimony concerning the income of Thomas Maloy, business agent and "czar" of the turbulent Moving Picture Operators' union.

Miller was threatened with contempt of court by Federal Judge John P. Barnes on charges that he gave unsatisfactory answers when questioned by the grand jury last October. He was specifically asked concerning mysterious gifts which the government contends eventually reached Maloy and therefore have a bearing on his income tax difficulties.

The judge ordered Miller to appear before the grand jury again and reply to questions about payments made by him as representative of a majority of Chicago's larger theaters. At the end of the afternoon session government attorneys refused to say whether Miller had continued his alleged evasive tactics.

MUST LOSE LEG, HANGS SELF.

John Milus, 41 years old, 2236 South Wood street, hanged himself early yesterday in a garage at 1812 West 23d street because a physician had told him leg must be amputated. Milus' other leg was amputated twelve years ago after both were frozen.

THE COLD FACTS ABOUT COLDS!
What a Cold is and What is Required for Relief

Clearing Up a Subject on Which Much Misinformation Has Been Promulgated!

EVERY YEAR colds take a heavy toll in health, time and money. As a result of the prevalence of colds, much misinformation on the subject of colds has been spread about. There are so many "cures" for colds now that one wonders if there is anything good for anything else.

All kinds of self-appointed experts tell you what to do for a cold. Some tell you to soak your feet. Others tell you to fill your head with vapors. Still others tell you to wash your mouth and gargle. Still others advise chest rubs. Between them all you would be doing everything but painting yourself.

The joke of it—or rather the tragedy of it—is that these measures for the most part are like trying to cure dandruff by clipping the hair. They just don't reach the seat of the trouble.

An Internal Infection That May End in Flu!

It is well to remember what a cold is. A cold is an infection produced within the system by a germ, a germ so small that it will pass through the finest filter and hence it is easily spread. A cold, in other words, is an internal infection that may pave the way for other diseases, including flu.

A cold, therefore, plainly calls for internal treatment.

A cold also is something of a definite condition. Relief calls for certain definite effects. How, then, can a preparation that's good for half a dozen things besides colds be equally effective for colds? Yet medicines that are good for neuritis, toothaches, halitosis, dandruff, etc., seven months of the year suddenly blossom out as cold remedies during the winter months! If there is anything that common sense dictates, it is a cold remedy for a cold.

The Four Effects Called For

Obviously, to get rid of a cold you must kill the infection within the system and drive out the poisonous matter it has created.

That calls for a remedy that will do certain definite things.

The remedy called for is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine because it does the four things necessary.

First, it opens the bowels, gently but thoroughly, the first step in expelling a cold.

Second, it combats the cold germs and fever in the system.

Third, it relieves the headache and grippy feeling.

Fourth, it tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

Safe to Take!

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine contains nothing harmful and is absolutely safe to take. For more than forty years it has been the standard cold and grippe tablet of the world, the formula always keeping pace with Modern Medicine.

MRS. BRUNDAGE ASKS NEW QUIZ IN HUSBAND'S DEATH

Spurns Suicide Decision; Tells of Threats.

The widow of Edward J. Brundage, Republican leader and former attorney general of Illinois, who died of a gunshot wound in his Lake Forest home Saturday, yesterday summoned Coroner John L. Taylor of Lake county for an interview and told him she could not believe that her husband committed suicide.

She took this action, Mrs. Brundage explained later, because she and her family had been unable to accept the verdict of the coroner's jury that Mr. Brundage "apparently" ended his own life.

Asks Thorough Inquiry.

"I have the utmost confidence in the authorities," said Mrs. Brundage, the former Germaine Vernier, who is a socially prominent matron of French birth, "but we should never have any peace of mind without a thorough investigation of my husband's death."

Coroner Taylor was sympathetic and assured Mrs. Brundage that he would do everything he could. However, he told her he saw no reason to reopen the inquest.

Yesterday afternoon was the first time that Mrs. Brundage had consented to talk to any one about her husband's death.

Friends of Mrs. Brundage advanced the theory that he killed himself because of financial troubles, but his wife said she could not believe this.

Cites Value of Properties.

"We have been hard pressed for ready cash," she said, "but he could have realized substantial amounts on his holdings. This estate [the Lake Forest place at 700 South Ridge road] is worth, we estimate, at least $150,000. We were offered $100,000 recently. We have two farms near Dixon, and they are worth at least $110,000. The mortgage on this estate is only $30,000 and the mortgages on the farms total only $14,000.

"I believe the mortgage on the home here has just come due, but I am certain Mr. Brundage could have raised enough to make an adequate payment on it. I don't know how much insurance he had, but it once totaled over $100,000.

Tells of "Death Threats."

In addition to her asserted doubts that financial worries caused Mr. Brundage to kill himself, his widow said he recently had expressed his fear of walking home alone from the Sheridan-Elms station of the North Shore line, and that her lawyer, Amos C. Miller, had informed her of reports that Mr. Brundage's life was threatened.

Mrs. Brundage, when asked why her husband should have been threatened, remarked that he was to have been an important witness for the state in the racket conspiracy trial against Ald. Oscar Nelson and other defendants in the cleaning and dyeing, carbonated beverage and linen supply industries.

Hints Murder Possibility.

She mentioned the possibility that some one may have hidden himself in the basement of their home, to lie in wait for Mr. Brundage, and recalled that a basement window was open.

State's Attorney Charles E. Mason of Lake county received a report yesterday from Calvin Goddard of the Northwestern university crime laboratory stating that the bullet taken from Mr. Brundage's body was fired from the revolver found lying near by. This was Mr. Brundage's gun.

A private funeral service for Mr. Brundage was conducted at the home yesterday afternoon by Dr. Herbert W. Prince, pastor of the Church of the Holy Spirit. A Knights Templar service will be held this afternoon in the Oriental Consistory temple, Dearborn street and Walton place.

PROMISES RULING ON UTILITY TAX CASE THIS WEEK

TAX COLLECTIONS.

Real estate tax collections yesterday were $283,360, making a total of $102,287,687 collected since enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act began on April 28, 1933. The day's collections of real estate taxes and the uncollected taxes for four years follow:

	1928.	1929.
Jan. 22 .....$	13,959	$ 38,839
Uncollected ..	15,504,104	41,448,319
	1930.	1931.
Jan. 22 .....$	62,335	$ 168,227
Uncollected ..	65,682,508	64,586,098

The day's collections of 1931 personal property taxes totaled $12,289.

County Judge Jarecki yesterday heard final arguments in the county's suit to collect delinquent 1931 personal property taxes against the Commonwealth Edison company and the Peoples Gas, Light and Coke company. He said he would rule in the cases before Friday.

The county is suing the Edison company for $788,003 and the gas company for $287,739, portions of their 1931 personal property tax bills which they failed to pay on the contention that their assessments were excessive.

The assessments in question are those on intangible personal property, made by the state tax commission. Hayden N. Bell, head of the civil law department of the state's attorney's office charged on behalf of the county during the trial that the tax commission had undervalued the companies' intangibles to the extent that its assessments amounted to legal fraud. This was denied by Attorney Francis X. Busch, representing the companies.

Policeman Suspended; Faces Drinking Charge

Police Commissioner Allman yesterday suspended Patrolman Frederick Ballou of the Chicago Lawn station and ordered charges of intoxication and conduct unbecoming an officer filed against him before the civil service commission. Thomas J. Sheehan, city fire attorney, charged that Ballou stopped Sheehan in his automobile Saturday night at 79th street and Harlem avenue. Sheehan said the policeman, who had been on sick leave, was intoxicated and threatened him with a revolver. Ballou was found early Sunday in a tavern.

FIREMEN'S FUND SECRETARY ASKS PENSIONS STUDY

Urges Elimination of Systems' Abuses.

Lieut. Patrick Kelly, secretary of the Firemen's Annuity and Benefit fund in a statement yesterday urged that the entire public pension field in Chicago be studied by a group of competent men representative of civic organizations with a view to eliminating abuses which have crept into the pension systems at the expense of the public.

He declared there should be a reviewing board made up of impartial members who would pass on the amounts of taxes to be levied by the various pension boards and upon the granting of disability and death benefits.

Actuaries Criticize Systems.

Recently actuaries disclosed that almost all of the ten separate pension systems in Chicago were being operated in a loose financial fashion, piling up reserves far beyond amounts reasonably needed, and dispensing many special benefits criticized as questionable. The pension levies in 1933 totaled $10,000,000. In a few years, it was estimated, taxpayers will be paying $20,000,000 a year in taxes for pension purposes because of tax rate increases already obtained.

It has been declared that many of the awards which have been made and are still being made by pension boards have been the result of political pressure and expediency. Pension board trustees frequently are public employés themselves who are inclined toward generosity in the treatment of their fellow workers in disability and death benefits arising out of circumstances not involved in the line of duty.

Hit or Miss Fashion.

"Our pension systems grew in a hit or miss fashion without proper study or intelligent planning by the public, the legislators, or the employés concerned," said Lieut. Kelly. Actuaries were consulted and gave advice governed by pure mathematics, generally ignoring the human equation. Representatives of employés have been inclined to ignore mathematics. Good natured Mr. Public shrugged his shoulders and paid the bill when he had the price. Lately he has been a little short of ready money and is mild? suggesting that he be given a break.

The present criticism of the reserve features of our local pension systems comes from those who insisted on those features during the last twenty years. If it is conceded that the present economic trend makes necessary certain readjustments of the pension systems, then a group to study the entire field with a view to readjustment should be appointed.

"This impartial body should determine what benefits accrue to the public from maintenance of the separate funds, overhaul the statutory provisions of each fund and point out its inconsistencies and abuses, and consider whether the retirement and disability provisions are in harmony with the present trend of social economy.

"It should also work out a plan determining the amount of reserve which should be maintained for the meeting of current liabilities during periods of depression. A plan should be devised by which the actions of the various retirement boards would be subject to some agency responsible to the taxpayers."

Lieut. Kelly pointed out that the pension boards are responsible to no official or officials who could be held accountable for abuses in the handling of the pension funds. The reserves of these funds total almost $80,000,000 for the pension systems of the county, city, policemen, firemen, park employés, park policemen, sanitary district and school teachers.

LEADERS INDORSE HOUSE PROBE OF PRISON PRIVILEGE

All Illinoisians Back Move of Rep. Simpson.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Prompt support from the Illinois delegation and influential members of the house judiciary committee today greeted the request of Representative James Simpson Jr. [Rep., Ill.] for a congressional investigation into the reported ability of powerful gang leaders to secure favored treatment in federal prisons.

Introduced today, Mr. Simpson's resolution authorizing the inquiry was referred at once to the committee on rules. It is expected to be re-referred to the judiciary committee within the next few days.

Chairman Hatton W. Sumners [Dem., Tex.] of the judiciary committee stated definitely that he would grant the young Chicagoan a hearing before the committee at which he can explain in detail the reasons underlying his proposal. Although Mr. Sumners had not yet had an opportunity to study the resolution he declared he was definitely in favor of its aims. It was considered probable that he will lend his support to getting the authorizing legislation through the house.

Substance of Resolution.

The resolution, as offered by Mr. Simpson today, declared:

"Whereas, from time to time, there has appeared in the public press of the country numerous articles to the effect that several well known federal prisoners incarcerated at federal penitentiaries are being accorded special, unwarranted, and unusual privileges and liberties.

"Resolved, That the committee on the judiciary, as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized and directed to investigate and inquire into the said special, unwarranted and unusual privileges and liberties accorded said federal prisoners at federal penitentiaries.

"The committee shall report to the house during the present session of congress the results of its investigation, together with such recommendations for legislation as it deems advisable."

Illinoisians United in Move.

The resolution also provides that the judiciary committee shall have power to subpoena witnesses and to demand the production of whatever books, documents and other papers it may require.

Members of the Illinois delegation, Republicans and Democrats alike, lined up behind the Simpson proposal today with varying degrees of enthusiasm. A partial poll of the state's twenty-seven representatives failed to disclose one in opposition.

Mr. Simpson's demand for the congressional inquiry was prompted, according to reports by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S disclosure of special favors accorded "Terry Druggan, notorious Chicago outlaw, at Leavenworth penitentiary last summer, and by the more recent parole of William Donovan, Illinois mail bandit, while he was under indictment for perjury.

COUNTY BUDGET LIGHTLY SHAVED; READY FOR DEBUT

Expect New Estimate to Dress It Up.

The county board sitting as a finance committee yesterday virtually completed its 1934 budget. The commissioners shaved about $411,000 from the total of $19,275,564 requested by department heads, leaving the budget at approximately $18,865,000 for 1934. This is almost $1,500,000 in excess of 1933 appropriations which were $17,437,331.

Of the increase $1,228,000 is due to the primary election of April, the judicial election of June and the November election. To meet this there is, by law, an increase of 4 cents in the property tax levy.

$229,000 Increase.

Excluding the election expenses, the increase in the 1934 budget is about $229,000 more than the 1933 expenditures. The bulk of this increase is due to an appropriation of $134,000 to the treasurer's office for additional help needed if the 15 per cent reduction on the 1931 assessment of small homes of the board of tax appeals is upheld. This sum will not be expended if the cut is invalidated by courts.

The finance committee will vote upon the budget today and it will be submitted to the board for approval Friday.

Before the Friday meeting the financial staff of the board is expected to complete its estimate of revenue for 1934. This is the first time in the history of the county, it is said, that this estimate has not been ready for the committee before the task of budget making began. The staff did prepare a tentative estimate several weeks ago which was about $4,000,000 below the request of department heads.

Estimate Called Too Low.

The preliminary estimate was criticized as much too conservative by representatives of civic organizations. They declared the loss in tax revenue in 1934 due to a 25 per cent cut in 1932 real estate assessments would be made up by delinquent tax penalty collections which are greater than at any time in the history of the county.

Penalty collections go to the county. They are about $400,000 a year. But last year they totaled more than $5,000,000. The preliminary estimate of the finance committee staff had estimated penalty collections only at $1,000,000. Civic groups urged an estimate of $4,500,000.

The revised estimate is being prepared in conformance with these suggestions. If the board approves the budget Friday it will be submitted to a public hearing about Feb. 5 and returned to the board for alterations which may be asked. It is hoped the budget will be finally approved well in advance of the deadline date of March 3.

The new center is the first monarchist headquarters established in the capital since a mob destroyed the old offices in May, 1931.

MICHIGAN GRABS $50,000 SUPPLY OF FRENCH WINE

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 22.—(AP)—William J. Nagel, managing director of the Michigan liquor control commission, today ordered the seizure of one and a half carloads of French wines under the new state law which prohibits possession of such beverages for sale, except by the state. The wines are valued at $50,000.

They have been in the warehouse of G. Viviano, Inc., an importing firm. Nagel said the seizure was ordered on information that the wines were to be trucked to Cleveland. There was no indication what disposition the state intended to make of the shipment.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

INDUSTRIAL DEATH IN ESTATE TAXES.

Walter Harnischfeger, son and executor of the late Henry Harnischfeger, Milwaukee industrialist, complains that the exactions of inheritance taxes amount almost to confiscation. Payments have drained the heirs of cash and if time for settlement were not allowed threatened further hardship. The courts have just interfered to grant the estate additional time for final settlement.

In the period between the appraisal and the date for payment the general market has slumped so it would take several times more collateral now to raise needed cash than at the time of death.

It is a more striking proof that the power to tax is the power to destroy because it is not an extreme case. Although the sum is large it is not a great fortune as some great estates are reckoned and the proximity of relationship saves the heirs from the highest tax penalties.

Harnischfeger built industrial machinery. From his arrival as a German immigrant boy he gave all his life to the growth of the business he and one of his associates founded. His work contributed much to the development of the nation. The sourest fault finder can take no exception to the manner in which his property was accumulated. He had a sense of social responsibility and before death provided a fund of around $450,000 for the protection of his employés.

The estate was appraised at $1,900,000, but the courts decided that gifts of about $2,000,000 to his children during life were in anticipation of death and subject to tax. Beginning at 2 per cent, the state takes as high as 40 per cent of that part of some estates valued at more than $500,000.

The Harnischfeger heirs were required to produce at once in cash something more than $400,000. The Wisconsin law was enacted in 1903 at the beginning of the elder La Follette's second term of governor during the early days of radical domination in Wisconsin. The federal inheritance tax is less destructive only that it permits 80 per cent of the state tax paid to be considered as an offset.

"The confiscatory inheritance tax is a death warrant to success," Mr. Harnischfeger said. "Industries which cannot escape it must die because purchasers cannot be found who will pay an adequate or honest price at a forced sale. The government takes its toll in cash and without delay regardless of price or market. It means that in time speculators and racketeers will come into the final possession of industry."

The conclusion this Wisconsin family has reached is based on its own experiences. Strong as Mr. Harnischfeger's statements are, we do not see that they can be contradicted.

TITLES IN CANADA.

English opinion sustains Mr. Bennett, the Canadian prime minister, in the inclusion of a number of "his majesty's Canadian subjects" in the honors list. In 1919 the Canadian government, upon a vote in the house of commons, petitioned the king that no further titles be conferred upon Canadians. Mr. Bennett reversed that decision and Canadians again appeared in the honors list, with the natural approval of the English.

It is reasonably assumed that the majority of Canadians object now, as they did before, to the decoration of citizens of the dominion with petty titles. It works against major Canadian trends and reasserts a colonial status, unquestionably being approved in England because it does. The London Times, commenting upon the renewed controversy, says that "the influence of the neighboring United States—where to the great disadvantage of the public no honors system exists—was unusually potent in setting an example to be copied." The defense of the honors system is that the various grades of the orders of knighthood can be used as rewards for distinguished public service, that as rewards they are to be preferred to money, and that they perpetuate the name of the good public servant in better fashion than would be possible without them.

That the predominance of Canadian opinion should coincide with the American is more natural than otherwise. The United States abolished titles of nobility because it did not think they were consistent with democratic ambitions or pretensions, because they would introduce an unworthy rather than a worthy motive in public and social life, and furthermore because they were evidences of the bondage which had been thrown off. It is a naïve conception of the British honors list which sees it without reproach and free from the meaner and more sordid motives which sometimes govern human action. It is frequently the case that an Englishman gets in the list for the same reason that an American is sent abroad as an ambassador, not because he had been conspicuously meritorious in public service but because he has been useful to his party.

When the Canadians asked to be left out of the system it was because they felt that their democratic life was different from that of the English and that titles were out of place where men rated upon different and higher qualities. They are right now in feeling that the return of the system would open the way to an insidious form of control of Canadian policies in English interests. Men will sell themselves for the distinction of a petty title with fewer conscientious troubles than would or might attend the sale for a cash price. One contains the possibility of dishonor, the other the pretense of honor. Public service in the United States could have its standards raised, but not by introducing a subserviency based upon social distinctions. A better reward for public service is a fair name, the esteem of good men, and the consciousness of work well done. Most Canadians hold the same idea.

CHICAGO AND THE SOUTHEAST.

The Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville railway, commonly known as the Monon, has filed a voluntary petition of bankruptcy in the federal District court following the denial of a Reconstruction Finance corporation loan which the interstate commerce commission felt that it could not recommend.

If given an opportunity to redraw the railway map of the country there is little doubt that seventy-five out of one hundred economists would provide for a line that would nearly follow the present route of the Monon. A direct artery to enable Chicago to reach the great southeast just naturally seems necessary. As frequently is the case, practice has been violating theory, and the Monon has gone into bankruptcy. With a line too nearly north and south to become a factor in handling the profitable west to east volume of commerce, paralleled by two roads owned by eastern interests, and with no strong passenger connections, it could not survive.

Perhaps part of the blame can be placed with Chicago shippers for their lack of enterprise in developing business connections in the old south. As the officers of the Monon are well aware, there is a splendid opportunity for traffic development in the Carolinas, to Atlanta as the metropolis of the south, and to Florida, but no concerted attempt has been made to wean the inhabitants away from New York, and as a result service demands have continued in that direction. Indeed, until very recent years the necessity of through rates from Chicago to southeastern territory was not considered. Local combination rates were applied to and from Cincinnati. The Ohio river formed a barrier equal to a seaboard.

During the last year the southeast took an outstanding interest in A Century of Progress. It has been said that the ticket sales to Chicago from the city of Nashville outnumbered the population. Chicago should in turn take an interest in the southeast, and it will if as a result of the court proceedings unification with one or both of the owning railroads, the Louisville and Nashville, and Southern, takes place, and these lines inaugurate through freight and passenger service from Chicago depots.

HEROISM IN SERVICE OF OTHERS.

The newspapers are carrying the picture of George W. Dermody of Ogden, Utah. Mr. Dermody distinguished himself recently by saving six lives. He saw an automobile plunge into an icy reservoir. He dived in six times and each time rescued a person—a mother and her five children in all. Only the driver was lost in an accident which might have wiped out the family. The danger to Mr. Dermody must have been great in the icy water handling frantic children and the woman, and general recognition of the heroism and skill required is well deserved.

Many human actions disquiet the observation of them. Advantages are fiercely contended for. Self-preservation and self-interest drive the individual. Avarice or fear masters many men and in the pressure for gain and in the avoidance of trouble unworthy qualities come to the front, but even the pessimist pauses to note the instinctive self-sacrifice with which the normal person will try to go to the aid of another in distress.

The risk may be great and the interest impersonal. The person taking the risk may have nothing to gain, but the higher community of interest animates him. That is expected of the soldier. It is found to be true of the normal individual.

GOOD WORK BY HIGHWAY POLICE.

The county highway policemen who rounded up sixteen young hoodlums accused of stealing and stripping automobiles achieved something of merit and distinction. This work continued will put the highway policemen in a new rating. They have been too often regarded as more a source of annoyance to motorists of good intentions and orderly conduct than a protection to the peaceful driver and the security of the highway. This may have been due partly to the fact that Illinois has had many legislative difficulties thrown in the way of putting a well disciplined and well organized unit of police on the highways. The character of the highway patrol has been uncertain and the problem of creating suitable bodies of men for the work has been made the harder. Gradually a force is being evolved which may give much better protection to the motorist, both in his property and in his security of life.

IT ISN'T HALF THE WORLD'S MONEY.

[Kansas City Star.]

President Roosevelt in his monetary message to congress repeated the statement that silver is used as a basic metal by "probably half the people of the world." That statement repeatedly has been made by the men in congress who have been undertaking for many years to "do something for silver."

The fact is that China is the only nation of any importance that uses silver as a basic money. China has less than a fourth of the world's population, and its people are such an insignificant portion of the total from a commercial point of view that its total foreign trade amounts to less than 1 per cent of the world's total.

In all other countries silver is used as a subsidiary coinage, circulating at a value fixed by governments above the value of the metal. A substantial rise in the price of silver probably would diminish demand for its use as coins, instead of increasing it, in all parts of the world.

Meanwhile the United States is the only country that is in the anomalous position of buying silver from domestic mines at a price 50 per cent above its value in the markets of the world. This is relief to owners of silver mines at the expense of the taxpayers.

WE ARE ALL DELIGHTED now that the administration has definitely announced that the depression will end June 30, 1935. There's nothing like being exact about these things. We are glad to know that the depression will end June 30, 1935, but what o'clock? For, of course, as soon as the depression ends we'll start in on the whoop-la era. If the depression ends at high noon, 12 o'clock, then we'll lose half a day of spending and whooping it up. If it begins in the morning of June 30 right after midnight the saloons will be closed at 1 o'clock and, of course, there's no use in trying to whoop-la with the saloons closed. Let the hour for the ending of the depression be set at 10 o'clock in the forenoon. That will give us a good running start early in the day. But so as to be sure we're all lined up and a-rarin' ter go at 10 o'clock, let the hour be set a few minutes before then, say at five minutes of 10. Very well, the depression will end at five minutes to 10 o'clock a. m. June 30, 1935. Now we know exactly. Or do we?

However, in the last few years we have become a much franker, more outspoken people, and now, even among those quaintly called the socialites, a person whose absence is more desired than his presence is simply told, "Get the hell outten here!" Greece could adopt either of these suggestions or, as Mr. Insull is English, she might follow the English custom and say, "Sorry, old bean, but I'm frightfully busy and all that, and so you had better pop along. IRON FOODS.

PROF. E. B. HART is quoted as saying: "Since the campaign to induce children to drink more milk and use more cereals and greens, there has been an increase in nutritional anemia."

The statement is probably true, although there is no way of either proving or disproving it. It does not follow that the foods named are not good for children. It means that they are not rich in iron and they are not good builders of red blood, and children who fill up on them and fail to eat enough foods richer in iron become pale and anemic in the course of time. The evidence that this is true as to milk is good enough. Babies come into the world with a good stock of stored iron. If they live on milk alone they draw on this stock until it is exhausted. Soon thereafter they become white and bleached out in appearance.

With older children there is a better chance that they will get all the iron they need from the other ingredients of a mixed diet. However, milk is very filling and it satisfies hunger pretty well, and the child whose stomach is distended with milk may decline foods richer in iron.

The yellow of egg is a very good iron food, much better than milk, cream, or butter, and fortunately most children get eggs as well as milk. If a child ate nothing but eggs, Prof. Hart says, he would need to eat fifteen yolks a day in order to get all the iron he needs. The whites contain no iron. But no child lives on eggs alone and part of the iron not supplied by egg yellows is obtained from other foods in the mixed diet.

The deficiency of iron in cereals is referred to by Prof. Hart. This is true of the cereals that have been freed from the outer parts of the grain. A child who lives largely on polished rice will become anemic unless he gets other foods that are rich in iron. But many of the cereals contain much of the outer parts of the grain and are, therefore, rather rich in iron. Brown rice and the cereals that contain a good deal of bran, or to which bran has been added, are more than average good iron foods.

The tendency is to belittle spinach and other greens. Children who refuse and even resent spinach are said by many to be responding to an inner urge that is almost divine in its wisdom. Spinach and the other greens are rich enough in certain vitamins and in chemicals that go to make richness of the blood. The principal objection to them is that they are bulky and a child may fill up on them and not want other foods. In consequence he may not get all the iron he needs.

Prof. Hart does not condemn milk, eggs, and greens. He does tell us that we must not overbalance the diet with them. We need to eat some meat, liver, tripe, bone marrow, and whole grains along with our milk and greens.

From Across the Sea

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HELSINGFORS, Finland. — "Preparedness is the best guarantee for peace. We believe it is cheaper to develop a nation of marksmen in times of peace than to lose half of our population in a war. If Russia did not know that we were so strong it would have attacked us long ago."

Lieut. Col. Olof Heinrichs of the Finnish Home Guard's staff made this frank statement to THE TRIBUNE correspondent when discussing the military expenditures of the Finnish government.

Preparedness is costing Finland between 500 milion and 600 million marks [present rate of exchange 59 Finnish marks for $1] per year, or 15 per cent of the total budget. With approximately 25,000 men in its regular army this nation of 3,000,000 is maintaining a Home Guard organization numbering 100,000 men which can be mobilized within two hours.

The staff of the Home Guard is always on duty in Helsingfors. It has divided Finland into 22 districts, each having a colonel and his staff, and under them are scores of additional officers serving as volunteers without pay. Only 400 officers of the Home Guard are on the government pay roll. Their pay is the same as officers of the same rank in the regular army. The budget of the Home Guards amounts to about 10 per cent of that of the army.

To become a member of the Home Guards is considered an honor in Finland. Each man keeps his gun and uniform at his home. Partly with government support and partly by home subscriptions, the Home Guards have dotted the country with small modern armories which serve as centers for civic activities and training centers for artillery companies, machine gun squads, and pioneer companies.

During the winter the Home Guards organize ski races and jumping contests. In the summer they organize training camps, shooting tournaments, and baseball games.

A PLANNED SOCIETY.

Rockford, Ill., Jan. 14.—If any of your readers or friends would like to see the ultimate of a planned society I would suggest a visit to the Amana society, some twenty miles southwest of Cedar Rapids, Ia. Here they have had community kitchens, community farms, etc., for a half century or more. Here they have had the head men who do all the thinking and planning for the entire population. But even here, after apparently reaching the Utopia of socialistic theory, the régime has finally given way in the last year or so to a system based more or less upon individual merit.

The words "old fashioned" have become hated and scorned because the word "modern" can cover a multitude of sins.

However, the writer feels sure that the average American, broke like himself, would turn with a shudder from planned society as epitomized at Amana and pray God that the old fashioned American system of freedom of individual thought and action be restored to a supposedly free people. N. E. BLISS.

ENFORCING THE GUN LAWS.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—The editorial, "The Right to Bear Arms," appearing in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, again reflects the creditable manner in which your paper is constantly guarding the welfare and safety of the people of the state and country.

The author of this article has handled the very much discussed and very much misunderstood subject in a concise, masterful, and fearless manner.

There is no reason why the peace, liberty, and recreation of over one hundred million law abiding citizens of this great country should be placed in jeopardy simply because a few thousand outlaws and criminals misuse firearms. If the impossible was attainable and they could not procure firearms, they would but resort to other weapons which are unlimited in scope and number.

The last paragraph of your editorial contains the essence, and it is hoped THE TRIBUNE, now that it has started, will use its power and influence to have present laws enforced, convictions secured and penalties carried out against all who make use of firearms in committing an unlawful act.

RALPH L. SCOTT.

BICYCLES AND CANDLELIGHT.

Maywood, Ill., Jan. 15.—I read with interest Col. McCormick's address at Northwestern university in December. His references to Britain at the period he went over there are hardly in accord with my own recollections. He tells of riding a "bone shaker" as the English conception of a bicycle. I never saw one in England, as they were invented by Lallement of the United States, but I saw many bicycle clubs and individuals riding along British highways around 1880 on high bicycles and tricycles. Starley had invented the high wheel over there in 1873. This inventor also brought out the original "safety bicycle"; and Dunlop of Belfast popularized it by inventing the first pneumatic tire in 1888, five years before the Columbian Exposition opened its doors.

As to illuminants, to which reference was also made, the use of "two candles" for reading can only have occurred in some remote rural district. I remember standing on a hill and gazing back toward Birmingham [England] in 1887 and noting the electric arc lights glowing along some of its thoroughfares. Illuminating gas was in service in London when Waterloo was being fought; and when I lived there in the '80s it had become the common illuminant throughout that city.

Comparisons are usually odious, but there are times when they also act as illuminants. I rode on Madison street's two-horse cars ten years after Toronto had adopted an efficient electric street car system. I saw gasoline street lights in common use after 1900 in Chicago districts such as Crawford; and Dungeness, England, used electric arc lights for its lighthouse twenty years before Edison began to market his lighting system in 1882. SUGGESTION FOR THE CITY EDITOR.

Notre Dame, Ind., Jan. 16.—In the issue of Jan. 16 you ran a picture of two women who were at the door of the Criminal court building at 5 a. m. to get seats at the trial of Dr. Alice Wynekoop.

I'd like to suggest a follow-up article for you. I'm sure it would interest many to know the feelings of these two women when they saw their picture as presented. Were they pleased? Did they feel that they had accomplished something? Or did they then resolve to spend some of that valuable time preparing a worth-while breakfast for their respective husbands?

A STRAIN ON THE FAMILY TIE

G. O. P. HARMONY GROUP PLEDGES UNISON ON SLATE

Poll Shows Strength as Insurgents Meet.

Thirty-six members of the Republican county central committee pledged themselves again last night to abide by the harmony agreement signed a few weeks ago for the purpose of eliminating factional differences in the party. They also reaffirmed their confidence in the group of 13 that is preparing a slate for the April 10 primary.

After taking that action the committee recessed until Thursday evening. Meanwhile, the slate making committee, the work of which has been held in abeyance for several days, will proceed with its task. Endeavors will be made to have the full county ticket ready for submission at the Thursday meeting.

Opposed by Barrett Group.

The session of the committee last night had been called because of the dissatisfaction shown by an insurgent group of committeemen, now labeled the Barrett-Crowe-Pacelli faction, with the five tentative candidacies recommended by the slating committee. George F. Barrett, a leader of this group, claimed to have 26 protesting committeemen on his side, but the vote in the county committee was taken as an indication of error in his estimate.

Thirty-eight of the 50 ward committeemen and eight county district leaders attended the session. Those voting represented 406,151 votes out of a total of 612,000, according to Edward F. Moore, secretary of the central committee. Those not voting were Ald. John A. Massen [48th], who had not signed the original harmony agreement, and John T. Dempsey, 33d ward committeeman.

Angle for Deneen Aid.

Both sides are angling for the support of Charles S. Deneen, former United States senator, but before the vote was taken Moore announced that Deneen had told the Barrett-Crowe-Pacelli group that he would negotiate only with the officials of the central committee. Moore, and also Ald. Oscar F. Nelson [46th], expressed strong pleas for harmony.

While the central committee was meeting in the La Salle hotel, the insurgents were in session a few blocks away at the Hotel Sherman. They have selected five candidates for their opposition slate, but tarried last night while waiting for reports from the central committee session which they did not attend.

New Candidates Appear.

Several candidacies, independent of either of the two warring groups, developed yesterday. One was that of Joseph L. Moore, of Champaign, who practices law at Springfield. Petitions are being circulated to place his name on the Republican ballot for state treasurer.

Another was that of Ralph Church, of Evanston, who announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for congress from the 10th congressional district. Church, who served eight consecutive terms in the state general assembly, ran second to James Simpson Jr., in 1932 after a contest that followed the official canvass of the votes.

Howard W. Elmore, lone Republican among the nine sanitary district trustees, announced that he will not be a candidate for reëlection. Elmore, who was a leader in the movement to sell the Illinois waterway to the federal government, said he is retiring because he must devote more time to his business. He declared he would continue his efforts to have the government take over the waterway.

LAW AND ORDER DRIVE LAUNCHED BY LEGION GROUP

A law and order movement sponsored by Police post 207 of the American Legion was inaugurated last night at a banquet meeting of more than 1,500 persons in the Grand ballroom of the Hotel Sherman. Representatives of city, county, state, and federal law enforcing agencies participated.

Among those at the speakers' table were Mayor Kelly, State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, United States Attorney Dwight H. Green, Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan, Circuit Judge Joseph Burke, and Joseph L. Gill, clerk of the Municipal court.

Mayor Kelly praised the movement and asserted that the police department would welcome all the support it could get in its endeavor to make Chicago the freest from crime of any city in the world. He said that Chicago is "getting rid of the real hoodlums" as a result of the activities of the police, judiciary, and other agencies, and that he felt much of the success of A Century of Progress was due to the police department's able and courteous handling of visitors.

Edward A. Hayes, national commander of the Legion, had planned to be present and deliver the principal address, but he telegraphed his regrets, stating that he was unable to leave Washington, D. C., because of pending work on disabled veterans' legislation. His address was read by National Vice Commander Edward Carruth.

REPORT U. S. JURY QUIZ OF COUNTY CWA WORK PENDS

Officials Resent Veiled Implications.

Federal grand jury proceedings based on charges of fraud and political corruption in civil works administration projects in Cook county loomed last night when Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins conferred with Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan in Washington, according to dispatches. The subject of their conference was the result of an investigation of the fraud and corruption charges made by federal agents.

Before the conference Mr. Hopkins predicted that action would be taken in the near future. After he had talked with Mr. Keenan, who has charge of criminal cases, he refused to amplify that statement. At the public works administration, however, it was said that the investigation centered on the sewer project in Harvey, Ill., in southern Cook county.

Complete Report on Harvey.

First Assistant District Attorney Leo J. Hassenauer said last night that the only complete report on alleged irregularities in local CWA projects to reach the district attorney's office is the report on the Harvey project. He said he had not yet been able to study the report for possible prosecution.

Frank D. Chase, director of the CWA in Illinois, suspended action on the $750,000 Harvey sewer project on Jan. 2 because he was dissatisfied with the purchases made by city officials of the town, who were in charge of the project. Subsequent investigation revealed the presence of Arthur Haines, Harvey politician, his two brothers and his son, on the CWA pay roll. Harvey business men protested that they had been unable to bid on materials purchased for the project.

Chase Takes Control.

Upon the completion of his investigation, Mr. Chase took over all purchases for the project, and the operation of a tile manufacturing plant. He turned the operation of the rest of the project back to Mayor Bruggeman, City Engineer Paul G. Robinson and other officials.

Howard O. Hunter, supervisor of the CWA for this district, said last night that he knew of no investigations under way other than the Harvey project. He said that if the investigation is meant to include any of the administrative officials such an investigation would be up to him in his capacity as administrator in Illinois. He has not found it necessary to make such an investigation, he said.

Mr. Chase said last night that, other than the Harvey investigation, he knew of no pending inquiries.

Criticism Resented.

Robert J. Dunham, chairman of the civil works administration for Illinois, last night said he resented the implied criticism in the general charge of fraud and political corruption issued by Mr. Hopkins in Washington.

"An investigation by Washington should be greatly resented by men who are trying to do an honest job," he said. "I am willing to support all local CWA officials against such veiled attacks. If any specific charges are brought I will help the federal prosecution to the limit, but in the meanwhile I do not feel that the representatives of the federal government have to take it upon themselves to be the guardians of the morals of the community. The implication is that the only honest people are those who live in Washington."

A CWA Project

A force of 73 CWA workmen was engaged yesterday in tuckpointing the old Chicago avenue water tower, near north side landmark, and the adjoining city pumping station at Chicago and Michigan avenues. The men will be at work another two months, it was estimated by Commissioner of Public Works Hewitt, working 24 hours a week. The project will cost $35,000.

PWPA ARTISTS QUOTA REDUCED; WAGES CUT 10%

No more artists will be employed on the Public Works Art Project, according to an announcement yesterday from the PWAP headquarters at 135 South La Salle street. Word from Washington stipulated that the present 174 artists now employed in the Chicago region, will constitute the quota, which formerly was 300.

In addition, the wages of those painters and sculptors now on the payroll of the PWAP, have been cut 10 per cent. "Since we still desire only the very best creative works, there is a possibility of some eliminations after the artists hand in their work as usual, Wednesday," declared Mrs. Increase Robinson who is in charge of applications. "If such is the case, we may still accept new applicants, but the quota will remain at 174."

Definite projects in public schools and other tax supported buildings in Chicago have been assigned to 32 artists, according to Mrs. Robinson. Sketches for the proposed decorations are to be handed in within a week to the technical committee under the direction of Edgar Miller. They will then be submitted to the schools for approval before actual work is started.

Hunt Three Dope Addicts After Drug Store Holdup

The police yesterday were seeking three dope addicts as the bandits who seized Emil Ratajik, 10011 South Carpenter street, at an elevated station early in the morning and forced him to accompany them back to the Liggett drug store at 149 North Clark street, of which he is the manager. They compelled him to open the safe, taking $300, and then made him show them where narcotics were kept. Drugs valued at $250 were taken, Ratajik said.

PWA ROAD FUNDS WILL GIVE JOBS TO 500,000 MEN

Federal Chief Describes Year's Program.

BY HAL FOUST.

Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the U. S. bureau of public roads, said that 2,500,000 man months of employment will be created by the $400,000,000 PWA allotment for highways in congressional "easy money" appropriations. He spoke before the opening session of the American Road Builders' association's annual convention, yesterday in the Stevens hotel.

The engineer added that from last July to January 18,000 miles of construction was started, sufficient mileage to cross the continent six times. By next July, he estimated that the average daily employment on the PWA road projects will approximate 280,000 men, with a half million individuals receiving pay envelopes to fill this number of jobs continuously.

Benefits of Projects.

"After August," he continued, "the employment will drop as projects are completed—unless, however, the present congress makes an appropriation for additional road work.

"The unemployment relief from the $400,000,000 appropriation will drop next autumn, but when the depression shall have passed there will remain tangible benefits to traffic that will justify the expenditures. The appropriation has contributed some notable improvements in traffic facilities."

Killing the Goose.

H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways of the District of Columbia and president of the Road Builders' association, declared in an address that the diversion of gasoline tax revenue from highway funds was killing the goose that lays the golden egg. He said motorists do not oppose a reasonable motor fuel excise when the money is used for pavements, but that automobile owners do object to paying this special tax for general government use.

The convention, attended by approximately 20,000 delegates from all parts of the United States, will continue through Thursday. The main speaker today will be Oscar L. Chapman, assistant secretary of the interior and executive secretary of the federal department's board of public works.

A Good Samaritan Comes in Handy for Raymond

Raymond Wade, 31 years old, 117 South Homan avenue, was robbed of $2 and his clothes early yesterday by three men at Jackson boulevard and California avenue. A Good Samaritan with two giggling girl friends saw Wade's plight and drove him home in his car, but Wade was too embarrassed to get the man's name.

ROOSEVELT WILL ASK BILLION FOR CWA, CCC SOON

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—(AP)—President Roosevelt is ready to ask congress for an emergency appropriation of $1,166,000,000 to carry on the Civil Works Administration and the Civilian Conservation corps.

He is standing pat, however, on his plan to taper off the civil works program and wind it up in May.

It is the President's hope that with the coming of summer 4 million men now on the government's emergency payroll will be able to find normal outdoor work.

Nevertheless, there is a growing movement in congress against this sudden conclusion of the civil works program and a strong effort is in prospect to continue it, at least in part, throughout the summer.

ARGENTINA SEEKS TO EXTEND TRADE; LOWERS TARIFFS

Wants to Enter Reciprocity Pact with U. S.

BY HAROLD TATAM.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 22.—That there can be no permanent one way traffic in trade is being reluctantly recognized in South America as well as in other parts of the world. This is the root cause for the alacrity—and in many cases over haste—with which South American governments have recently negotiated "regional trade agreements" and discussed "reciprocity treaties" designed to galvanize their anemic foreign trade. In the case of Argentina, this alacrity resulted in knocking a tier or two off her tariff wall.

Governmental recognition of the fact has occurred several years after most economists of the nation had come to the conclusion that one way trade traffic was doomed.

Warning to Argentina.

In the spacious days of "untrammeled" trade Brazil sold the major part of her coffee to the United States and spent the greater part of the money in Europe. On the other hand, Argentina sold mainly to Great Britain and purchased heavily in the United States. Nobody felt particularly perturbed about the phenomenon. It was believed that such things work out all right in the end. But when the years of depression came, a change came over the spirit of international trade.

Argentina, at least, had fair warning of what was in store. A prophet came to the land in 1929 in the person of Lord D'Abernon. He bluntly informed the Argentine authorities that one way trade tariff with Britain could not continue indefinitely, and suggested that it would be a good idea to remedy the defect at once.

The hint was not taken. The result was that later the Ottawa agreement came as a reminder of the change that was taking place in world economics. An attempt to palliate its effects was made when Argentina signed the Roca agreement with Britain.

Seeks to Extend Markets.

Argentina has subsequently negotiated reciprocity agreements with Chile and Brazil and is endeavoring to do the same with the United States and Japan.

Faced with a virtual embargo on her main products in the United States, France, and Italy, and a diminishing outlet in Great Britain, Argentina has come to the parting of the ways. She must either seek to extend her markets or resign herself to a less prominent place in international trade.

But she sees little likelihood of obtaining new markets except on a reciprocity basis. In this respect she is in a cleft stick. Directly or indirectly, she has encouraged home industries to the point that they are now in a position to put serious obstacles in the path of the negotiations of such treaties.

Other countries facing the same or similar problems talk a great deal about the necessity of lowering trade barriers, but few of them seem to be in a position to carry it out.

Eyes on Roosevelt.

It is, therefore, with more than ordinary interest that Argentina watches President Roosevelt's efforts to revive business in the United States. This nation is watching his efforts not only as an indication of how trade between the two countries may be effected, but also as an indication of the trend likely to be taken in other parts of the world.

A further spur to the prompt negotiation of reciprocity treaties lies in the large wheat surplus. This surplus, under the limitations imposed by the London agreement, will be thrown on the Argentine government's hands this year unless new markets can be found to absorb it.

No illusions exist, however, as to the likelihood of finding a cash in hand customer for it. One way trade traffic is dead.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Bleek's Round

4 YANKS AWAIT PARDON ACTION IN CLAMMY CELLS

Spanish Cabinet May Act Today.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PALMA, Mallorca, Jan. 22.—Four Americans waited in vain today for their release from prison here, which Pito Romero, Spanish foreign minister, promised Claude G. Bowers, United States ambassador, would take place before tonight.

They fought off the intense cold in their cells by wearing sweaters, mufflers and gloves, but friends of young Mrs. Clinton Lockwood fear the effect on her health if she has to endure many days of imprisonment in this clammy, unsanitary jail.

Hope for Cabinet Action.

Supplies of hot food were sent to the prisoners by friends.

The latest hope held out for them is that some action may come out of the meeting of the Spanish cabinet in Madrid tomorrow. In view of the attitude of Mallorcan authorities this is seen as a frail hope, however, and faith is held rather in the Supreme court itself taking a new and more comprehensive attitude.

The four Americans, Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood, Roderick Mead, and Edmund Walter Blodgett, were imprisoned yesterday after the Supreme court last Friday had sentenced them to six months and a day on a charge of assaulting a civil guard last summer.

Fifth American Acquitted.

The men were placed in the provisional prison, while Mrs. Lockwood is in the women's jail next door.

A fifth American who was involved in the case, Rutherford Fullerton, was acquitted by the court. All five served 46 days in the Palma jail last summer, during which time vain efforts were made to ascertain what charges, if any, had been placed against them.

Eventually they were acquitted by a military court, but this decision was overruled by Military Auditor Vidal and was Friday upheld by the Supreme court. Ambassador Bowers has requested that the government pardon the imprisoned Americans.

PLANS PROGRESS FOR NEW RADIO CHAIN; 14 LINKS

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Plans are progressing rapidly for the operation of a third National radio chain, according to John T. Adams, president of the recently formed Federal Broadcasting company.

The company, of which former Gov. Alfred E. Smith is chairman of the board, is promoting a system of 14 major broadcasting stations in cities east of the Mississippi river.

Mr. Adams denied that Edsel Ford, son of the Detroit motor magnate, is furnishing a large part of the money back of the company. The company, he asserted, is being financed chiefly by its board of directors, including John Hay Whitney, Allan A. Ryan Jr., Robert Fair, Paul Nitze, Howard F. Cushing, Glendenin J. Ryan Jr., Walter Mack and James K. Norris. No stock is for sale.

"Some of us felt the need for a third major broadcasting chain," Mr. Adams said, "and we have decided to operate in at least 14 cities east of the Mississippi. At present we do not expect to go farther west."

ASSEMBLYMAN ON WAY TO CAPITAL INJURED IN CRASH

State Representative Albert J. Mancin, 747 South Damen avenue, was injured yesterday when he drove his car off the road near Shirley, Ill., in order to avoid striking a truck. After receiving treatment for leg injuries and a cut on his forehead, Mancin continued to Springfield by train to attend a session of the state house of representatives.

Frank Grockis, 16 years old, 2457 Rice street, was seriously injured when he boarded the rear platform of a truck on his way to Crane High school and slipped, wedging his head between the truck body and a rear wheel. He was taken to the Washington Boulevard hospital.

The unusually mild weather which has brought out more motorists was given yesterday as the principal reason for an increase of 60 per cent in the automobile death toll in Cook county for the first 22 days of 1934. Since Jan. 1 there have been 94 deaths, while in the same period last year there were 58.

There were three deaths yesterday in Cook county as the result of automobile accidents. The victims:

Mrs. Jane Hickey, 70 years old, 4528 West Jackson boulevard. Died in St. Anne's hospital of injuries incurred on New Year's day in a collision between the Checker taxicab in which she was a passenger and another automobile at Quincy street and Laramie avenue.

Adolph Widia, 23 years old, 2124 Thomas street. Died in St. Mary's hospital of injuries received Sunday when the automobile in which he was riding skidded at West Superior and North Rockwell streets and struck an electric light pole. Three others were seriously injured in the accident.

Frank Bensond, 48 years old, 3112 5th avenue, a flagman employed by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Died in St. Luke's hospital of injuries received Aug. 19 when he was struck by an automobile at 136th and Halsted streets, Riverdale.

AUTOS OF TODAY KILL MORE CLEVELANDERS THAN ENEMY IN WAR

Cleveland, O., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Two hundred and sixty-seven Cleveland men were killed in action in the world war.

Eight hundred and forty-one Clevelanders died in that war from all causes. But 2,153 Clevelanders have been killed by automobiles since 1925—eight times as many as were shot down in the world war and almost three times as many as died from any cause during the war.

In the twelve months of 1929 alone automobiles killed more Clevelanders than were killed in action during the entire war—a total of 275. Last year the auto toll was 215.

Four more Clevelanders were killed over the week end, bringing the total auto toll for this year to fourteen as police waged futile battle to curb wild motorists.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

As husbands go, Charles Lingard is a banner husband!

He's good looking, home loving, well-to-do. He adores his pretty wife. And he is s—m—a—r—t!

Now, almost any husband whose other half returned from a jaunt in Europe all keyed up with the notion that she was in love with an English poet—who follows her over by the next boat—would kick up a terrific rumpus. But not this husband!

When he finally gets the lay of the land he goes into a huddle with himself. From the start he has the situation well in hand, and by the time the finale has flitted into view he's not only reinstated as the one love of Mrs. Lingard's life, but he's the best friend of the man who had hoped to displace him.

A feat—what?

The story is amusingly pictured. It opens in Paris where Lucile and her middle aged companion and friend, Emmie Sykes, are doing the town on a romantic, moonlight night in company with the aforementionel English poet and a suave and devoted gentleman of uncertain years who has taken a most tremendous shine to Emmie.

Both women are convinced that in their present associates they have at last found the only perfect mates. . . .

And so to America next day, where Lucile plans to break the news to her husband and Emmie to tell a scornful grown daughter of an imminent foreign step-papa.

The ladies arrive in the old Iowan home town shrouded in subtlety. And—by the next steamer come the Lotharios from abroad.

Ensuing situations are amusing, adeptly handled, and brightly dialogued.

Warner Baxter as Lingard is every inch a man and a gentleman, with a delightful, saving grace of humor. Helen Vinson is delicately pretty and was a good choice as the romantic, perturbed Mrs. Lingard. Catherine Doucet—her technique is so much like that of Laura Hope Crews!—is immense as the small town friend. G. P. Huntley Jr. as Ronald is something of a stick, but I imagine the rôle reads that way.

The piece moves smoothly. Looked at from any angle, "As Husbands Go" is light, bright entertainment.

See you tomorrow.

Mrs. Alma Wertheim, Sister of Morgenthau, to Be Bride

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Mrs. Alma Morgenthau Wertheim, daughter of Henry Morgenthau Sr., former ambassador to Turkey and sister of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, will be married Wednesday to Paul L. Wiener, New York architect. The ceremony is scheduled to take place in the municipal chapel. In applying for a license today Mrs. Wertheim, whose first marriage ended in a Reno divorce four years ago, gave her age as 44. Wiener said he was 38.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

The other day, in a conversation that was friendly up to this point, the head of a beauty salon in one of our stores came right out—with the brutality of a good pal—and said we ought to be ashamed of the way our eyes looked—drooping and bored and nary a trace of come hither in 'em.

By way of alibi we told her what we were on our last birthday, how strenuous those darned holidays had been and what a crool, crool world it was anyway. What could she expect? She expected plenty, but set out to prove it wasn't too much. She gave us our instructions. We trudged homeward carrying a little box of aids to eye beauty, a reformed woman so far as eye care was concerned.

In the middle of the little box is a jar of cream, a cream that's both an emollient and a tonic. Folded neatly about it are six little twin muslin bags filled with a medicated herbal mixture. You use it like this just after you wash your face and say your evening prayers: Pat the cre m in about the eye, massaging those tired lids very gently. Then flick the eyepads in hot water, lay them over the closed eyes and relax for as long as you like.

If your eyes don't take kindly to too hot water put a thin layer of cotton beneath the wet pads over the cream Let the cream and the pads do the work, and take to your day dreams.

And the cream and the pads do some fine work. We tried it and we know. All tired eyed working women ought to try it and stick to it night after night. Prevention, as some one said [or is this original with us?] is better than cure—of eye wrinkles. And all of us, just before the big date, might well take at least twenty minutes out for just this kind of eye beautifying. After all, the gleam in your eyes is terribly important to your beau's good time. And who can gleam like a glamorous gal if her eyes are red and tired?

Want to Try a Daring Hat? Now's the Time

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Looking for new hats! Something flippant, gay, and impudent, something goofy, something flattering, something a bit different from anything you have ever trusted on your head before? Try any of the newest mid-season honeys that will make a heartbreaker out of the shiest of shrinking violets. There are some exciting new arrivals that are electrifying—tiny things that will perch most casually on the airiest tip of your coiffure.

For instance, a small black felt, no bigger than a minute, trimmed with two very perky kelly green wings and a back bandeaux of the same green feathers. It's a delightful revival of the charming scraps of millinery the gay ladies of the 1880s skewered to their pompadours, only you'll anchor it with an obliging bit of elastic.

Another is made of gleaming black fabric that has been crossed with straw—an upturned brim edged with tight curls of black ribbon that look like a parade of snails makes an angelic frame for any golden headed charmer.

If you crave tucks and a bib, swishing taffeta and checks, you'll lose your heart to a dashing duet of small hat and silk bib collar that can be worn tied at the back or on the shiulder. The absurdly small hat is fashioned of navy blue taffeta combined with checked silk in two contrasting shades of blue. The brim rolls directly off the face and up all around the head. The entire hat is stitched in small half inch squares. The bib neck scarf is navy blue on one side and checked silk on the other.

A big hat of black taffeta is another winner. It also is stitched in pattern of leaves and flowers, the crown is shallow, and the brim has been designed by a wizard who knows how to dip and swiri and bend a wide and flattering brim to best advantage. Small felt hats of all colors are going strong for clever checked contrasts—brown with beige and yellow checks used as a bow and inset, black with powder blue, and black with black satin ribbon spattered with white stars.

'Le Coq D'Or' Is an Opera You Dream About

Called Most Amusing Show of Season.

"LE COQ D'OR."

Opera-pantomime in three acts by Rimsky-Korsakoff, presented for the first time in Chicago by the Chicago Grand Opera company at the Civic Opera house, Monday, Jan. 22, 1934.

The mimes, characters and voices follow in order:

Michael Arshansky, King Dodon, Norman Cordon; Turner Lundgren, General Polkan, Wilfred Engelman; Bentley Stone, The Astrologer, Oscar Colcaire-Clifford Balr; Muriel Grodemanze, the Queen of Shemakhan, Lucille Meusel; Jack Abbot-Walter Camryn, the king's sons; the Golden Cock, Mary Kraskowski. Conductor, Paul Kerby.

Preceded by act 1 of "Pagliacci," by Leoncavallo.

THE CAST:
Canio.....Mario Chamlee
Nedda.....Lucia Diano
Tonio.....Carlo Morelli
Beppo.....Giuseppe Cavadore
Silvio.....Frederic Jencks
Conductor.....Gennaro Papi

BY EDWARD MOORE.

This is opera as some of its makers have dreamed of it, a mad, riotous, magical folk tale, where the singers sit on the sidelines, the mimes act without speech, being in every respect as exaggerated as their own scenery and costumes, the orchestra makes its own chuckling, warbling comment, and just about the time that nearly every one is killed off the astrologer comes forward to assure the audience that it did not happen anyway.

It ought to be any one's notion of a good show, and its fantastic incredibility is by no means its least attractive part. It was sung mostly in French, but Conductor Kerby had added some English interpolations to hold the plot together, together with several other changes. In fact, there was a bit of talk around the opera house that the composer's name should really have been Rimsky-Kerbykoff.

The only regret about the piece is that it came in the last week of the season and will not be repeated. It ought to be seen several times, for it is quite the most amusing and entertaining attraction of the season. One can easily enjoy the singing and orchestral score without anything else, but one enjoys them much more with the aid of the prodigious posturing and striding by which the mimes illustrate the plot.

All through the score there are hints of what finally develops into the one well known song of the piece, "Hymn to the Sun," which is sometimes sung by sopranos who are fully capable of its great stretches, and frequently played by violinists whether they are entirely capable or not. But the whole score is pleasing, and the scenes are eye-filling.

Because it is short it had a prelude of the first act of "Pagliacci," an excellent performance in which Conductor Papi was welcomed back after his illness, and in which there were first rate performances by Mr. Chamlee, Mr. Morelli, and Miss Diano. Mr. Chamlee is showing many indications of being the best Canio of his generation and at the end of the performance he was called back more times than could be counted.

Yehudi Menuhin, who in the past has appeared here in the knickerbockers and soft shirt of the boy wonder violinist, came back to the Auditorium last night in long trousers and a double-breasted coat. His playing, one would think from his first few numbers, has progressed to about the same extent.

He began with a newly discovered concerto by Mozart, supposed to have been composed when Mozart was ten years old. It is difficult to believe, for the pattern of the piece was about as complete and the melodies were nearly as delightful as anything Mozart did in his later years. The cadenzas were by Hindemith, who accomplished the feat of taking themes from the piece and weaving them into something startlingly out of character with the rest of the work.

Later the boy played the Paganini concerto, a Bach sonata for unaccompanied violin, and a long group of short pieces with lots of display in them. His tone is something to caress the ear, he still has the technical skill, even more fully developed now, that used to amaze his hearers, and his insight into music, always startling, is becoming more mature. This last point is one that is born in him, that cannot be taught, and it is the convincing sign that he will continue among the great players.

Smart Throng Sees Pantomime Opera Premiere

Society Girls Help Promote Another Season.

BY INDIA MOFFETT.

A full house greeted the first Chicago presentation of "Le Coq d'Or" at the Civic Opera house last night, and there were numerous smart box parties. There was more youth present than usual, for the wise officials of the Chicago Grand Opera company have secured the cooperation of the prettiest and most charming belles in society in taking subscriptions for next season's tickets, thus helping to make certain that we will have a seven weeks' season next year.

Between the first act of "Pagliacci" and the first act of "Le Coq d'Or" these lovely young women paraded up and down the aisles collecting the subscriptions, and although we weren't able to find out last night how successful they were we were told that on Saturday night, the first time the plan was carried out, they took up about 250 signed subscriptions. Miss Jean Hyman, Miss Dorothy Dewes, Miss Isabel Gordon, and her younger sister, Marion; Miss Virginia Ashcraft, Miss Jean Wilhelm, Miss Josephine Templeton, Miss Barbara Bastien, Miss Barbara Eldridge, Miss Laura Thorne, and Miss Jean McArthur were among those who did this work last night, and every night this week there will be similar groups to do this important task.

Undoubtedly among the first to sign the pledge cards were the occupants of the Charles B. Goodspeeds' box on the main floor, who were, beside Mr. and Mrs. Goodspeed, Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. John Paul Welling, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Swift. Quick in following their example were Mr. and Mrs. George Woodruff and their upper box guests, the Clifford T. Caldwells and the Marshall E. Keigs.

Frederick T. Haskell, wearing a magnificent gardenia in his lapel, was host in a box to Mr. and Mrs. Ira Howe of Lafayette, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Eldridge, and Mrs. Nelson L. Barnes. In the same row of boxes was Mrs. Hayden B. Harris, who was hostess to the Horatio B. Hacketts, Mrs. Daniel Burnham, Mrs. Orville J. Taylor, and Huntington Harris.

With Mortimer Newhall in his box were the Robert A. Gardners, the Mason Phelpses and Mrs. Bartholomay Osborne, who wore a striking gown of deep warm red, cut simply and very formally.

The James S. Kempers were hosts to the Kenneth Curtises and Dr. and Mrs. Vernon David in a main floor box. Mrs. Kemper's auburn curls were surmounted by a graceful tiara of crystal links that matched the shoulder straps of her smart white crêpe gown with its black velvet shoulder drops. With Mrs. Edna J. Stillwell in an adjoining box were the Harry L. Lobdells and Herman Waldeck, and with Mrs. Freeman Hinckley in a nearby box were the Rufus Daweses, Herman Gade and his daughter, Miss Alice Gade, and Ogden West.

With Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Ettelson were Mr. and Mrs. Lee J. Straus, Mrs. Edna B. Tabor, and Mrs. Sydney B. Pollak. Members of "The Green Room" had taken four boxes for the evening and among those in this party were the Raymond Redheffers, the Bruce Strongs, Dr. and Mrs. Vernon Herbst, and the Franklin Millers.

Giuseppe Castruccio, the Italian consul general, gave his box to several ladies, among them Miss Clara Lake, Miss Alice Barler, Miss Gertrude McCarthy, Mrs. Walter Kirk, and Mrs. Ralph C. Otis.

Among others seen strolling through the corridors during the intermissions were Miss Miriam Hamilton and her fiancé, Chester Keene, who had box seats, Gardiner and Radford Van Ness and John McWilliams.

Society Folk Swim Fox River to Safety After Ice Collapses

The Jack Finlays and Harney Bassett had no intention of joining the Polar Bears when they started out from Geneva with Mrs. Finlay's sister, Miss Betty Scriven, on Sunday to watch the ski meet at Cary, but by the time they returned to the Finlay's charming old fashioned house in that western village they had taken a swim in the Fox river and become full fledged Polar Bears. They broke through the ice 'n' ev'rything and even though it wasn't intentional and for a time they were a bit worried, after the adventure was over they decided it not such a bad experience.

The foursome had parked their car on the north side of the river and slowly in single file they started to cross the ice to the south shore, where the slide is located. About halfway across Mr. Bassett went in; Mrs. Finlay stretched out her arm to rescue him and in she went. Mr. Finlay had the presence of mind to stretch out flat on the ice and throw his coat to the two who were floundering around in the icy water, and just when it looked as if a rescue would be accomplished, in he went.

Miss Scriven luckily was near enough the shore from which they had started to get back to safety. Mrs. Finlay made for the opposite shore and her husband and Mr. Bassett swam back to the starting place, so when they climbed out of the water Mrs. Finlay was almost as badly off as if she still were in the water, for there was no way for her to rejoin the others without going back a mile or two to Fox River Grove, where the bridge is located.

A kindly woman who lived nearby gave Mrs. Finlay some dry clothes. The other two Polar Bears went to a hospitable little inn in Algonquin and there dried their clothes and eventually reached home.

Wrigley Home

BY ELEANOR PAGE.

Well over half a hundred members of the Service club gathered yesterday afternoon in Mrs. Philip K. Wrigley's drawing room high over Lake Shore drive to signify their choice of officers and directors for the coming club year. During the next few weeks the nominating committee, headed by Mrs. Stanley Zaring, will make its selections from ballots cast yesterday and qualify the new officers and board, who will then be elected at the annual luncheon and meeting which is held each year on the first Monday in February.

The luncheon will be held at the Casino, with Miss Honore White as chairman of arrangements. She and Miss Virginia Ashcraft, who was present at the meeting yesterday, will sail soon after the luncheon day with Miss Ashcraft's parents, the junior Edwin M. Ashcrafts, for a cruise through the Panama canal to California, where they will spend a fortnight before returning to Chicago.

Mrs. John Dern, the club's attractive president, read the numerous reports at the meeting.

A number of members responded to the appeal of Mrs. Frank Hixon, president of the Illinois League of Women Voters, to take a reading course on election laws. This reading can be done at home, under the direction of Mrs. William W. Ramsey, a vice president of the league and chairman of the election committee of the league. Those completing the course will be assigned to work with the league.

At the close of the meeting Mrs. Wrigley, who was most becomingly gowned in black crêpe with crisp white lingerie collar and cuffs and two large purple orchids pinned to her shoulder, led the way from the paneled drawing room to the dining room, where tea was served. Among the members who accepted tea or coffee from Mrs. Dern and Mrs. Charles H. Conrad, who poured at either end of the long table, were Mrs. Gaylord Olmsted, in a pretty wool frock of gray and blue plaid; Mrs. Leslie B. Olmstead, Miss Peggy and Miss Virginia Wiley, Miss Betty Gillies, who has just returned from three weeks spent in Fort Worth, Tex.; Mrs. Orville J. Taylor, Mrs. Paul Walker, Miss Katherine Healy, Miss Charlotte Hubbart, Mrs. Frank Sims and her sister, Miss Caroline McNair, who has postponed the trip she and her father, Frank McNair, are taking until March 1; Mrs. Horton Conrad, Mrs. Albert F. Madlener Jr., Miss Roslyn Smith, in a wool dress of brilliant green; Miss Mary MacCaughey, Miss Gloria Griffiths, and Mrs. Robert M. Hoffman.

Ganna Walska to Appear Twice on Visit Here

Will Be Guest of Mrs. Linn at Opera Intime.

BY JUDITH CASS.

TOMORROW night society will see and hear Mme. Ganna Walska, but tonight it will just see her, for she is to dine with the Howard Linns in the foyer of the grand ballroom of the Palmer house and then be among their guests at a double box party they will give for the third and last performance of opera intime arranged by Mrs. Linn as a benefit for Olivet institute.

This Polish woman, who used to be Mrs. Harold F. McCormick, is a striking looking person with a glamorous background and undoubtedly the lorgnettes of all the women and the eyeglasses of all the men who are dining in the foyer or hearing "Savitri" and "The Secret of Suzanne" later in the ballroom will be focused on her often during the evening.

Mrs. Linn yesterday reported a sold-out house for tonight, so the audience is sure to be as brilliant if not more so than either of the other two that heard operas intimes earlier in the season.

Selling flowers tonight will be eight pretty girls, the Misses Mimi Orr, Patsy Keith, Nancy Morse, Frances Canfield, Jean Hyman, Virginia Thatcher, Fleury Leonard, and Peggy Hixon.

Mrs. Linn and Harold McCormick are among those who have taken seats for Mme. Walska's concert at the Auditorium theater tomorrow night.

Gives Tea Today for Musicians.

Mrs. Thomas Russell Gowenlock, president of the Red, White, and Blue club, will be hostess this afternoon at tea to George Gershwin, James Melton, and Charles Previn, director of the Reisman Symphonic orchestra, who will combine to give a program of rhythm for the benefit of the club Sunday afternono, Feb. 4, at the Auditorium theater.

Invited to meet these musicians are the women who are working to make a success of the benefit and who the year around give wholehearted support to the club on Wade street which "guides bad boys into the path of citizenship."

Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman is honorary chairman of the board, which numbers among its directors Mrs. Orville E. Babcock, Mrs. Kenneth Carpenter, Mrs. Morris L. Johnston, Mrs. George Rasmussen, Mrs. William M. Scudder, Mrs. Loyal Davis, and Miss Mary Glenn. The tea this afternoon is to be at 4:30 o'clock at Mrs. Gowenlock's apartment at 1120 Lake Shore drive.

Cards are out for the opening reception of the 38th annual exhibition by artists of Chicago and vicinity at the Art institute on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 1, from 3 until 5:30 o'clock. Representatives of various art organizations will act as a reception committee. The Municipal Art league and the artists of Chicago are co-hosts with the Art institute for the affair at which there will be music and refreshments.

Mrs. Silas H. Strawn, who returned yesterday with Mr. Strawn from a brief stay in New York, will be in charge of an opening meeting at the Fortnightly tomorrow. It is to be a luncheon and round table discussion with Merle Thorpe of Washington, D. C., as the speaker. Mr. Thorpe, who is the editor of the Nation's Business, will speak on "The State of the Nation."

Theilade to Dance at President's Show.

All of those who missed that dainty little artist of the dance, Nini Theilade, in her recent performance in Orchestra hall will be glad to hear that she has consented to contribute a part to the great stage show that is to feature President Roosevelt's birthday party the evening of Jan. 30 at the Auditorium. A GIRL who went to the McCormick auction Saturday afternoon in Lake Forest tells us about the large disappointed woman she encountered in the room with henna walls that was once the bedroom of Fowler McCormick. She was momentarily resting on the bed and was obviously pretty tired and a little crestfallen.

Disappointed—Horowitz—Saleswomen—Maskmaker.

"Well, I've been over this house from top to bottom and I can't find a ballroom," she said. Then, brightening visibly, she got up and looked out the window. "Maybe they danced on that terrace out there," she added. "I'll bet that's where they danced."

AFTER hearing Horowitz play in recital yesterday afternoon Mr. Stock commented that the great pianist had made one piano sound like two. And in the evening, after hearing Mr. Horowitz and Gitta Gradova play a Mozart sonata written for two pianos at the party given by Dr. Maurice Cottell and his wife, Miss Gradova, for Horowitz and his bride, Mr. Stock enlarged the compliment. They made two pianos sound like one, he said.

* *

MR. HOROWITZ and his bride, the former Wanda Toscanini, confided some details of their romance while they were in town. Exactly sixteen days after he had really met Miss Toscanini, aside from fleeting contacts in her father's house, Horowitz read of his engagement to her in a Stockholm paper. Although the engagement existed, they had not expected to make it public so soon. Seeing the engagement in cold print was something of a shock and the great pianist suddenly realized he hardly knew his bride-to-be. Moreover, he had a full season of concert engagements ahead and was not going to have much time to get better acquainted. He then persuaded Arturo Toscanini to allow his daughter to go on tour with him, chaperoned by her sister and brother-in-law. They toured Sweden and England, and finally were married in Milan, between two concerts, one in Milan and one in Paris. Mr. Toscanini was in Milan at the time. And they haven't yet had time for a honeymoon unless the concert tour in America be considered as one.

WE know that some of Chicago's ex-school teachers [displaced by the recent economy program] are seeking other means of employment and remuneration. But it was with commingled feelings that Emanuel Jacobson bulletins he heard the slogan used by two of them, Frances Alswang and Frances McVey:

"We can't make your children bright but we can make your furniture shine."

The former teachers are selling furniture polish.

WE heard there was a maskmaker working in a studio on the upper boulevard. Remembering the maskmaker in Max Beerbohm's "The Happy Hypocrite"—the one who got down the shining mask worn by Apollo on a visit to this earth, and gave it to wicked Lord George Hell, so that his sinful countenance would not frighten his young love, we stopped in to see him. And found—not a man, but a girl of twenty, working with clay and tissue paper, bits of wool, and copper. Her name is Mary Williams, and her own face is a little like a Benda mask. At the moment she was working on a mask of death, a strange symbolic one, to be used in Mrs. Howard Linn's Opera Intime being held at the Palmer house tonight for the benefit of Olivet institute.

Miss Williams first models in clay the face of which a mask is to be made slightly caricaturing the features. Then she makes the mask on the sculptured countenance, starting out with a foundation of tissue paper. A mask of Hitler near by has wool for hair and tiny strands of copper for a mustache. A partly sculptured face of a well known Chicagoan lay on the table beside her. A mask of Greta Garbo hung on the wall beside one of Mussolini. The best one Miss Williams has done she thinks is the one of Artist John Groth.

THE WILD BIRD

By OWEN JOHNSON

SYNOPSIS.

Barbara Brawne, aged 22, is completely dominated by an adoring, though jealous father, who is against every modern idea and improvement. Lynwood, their home, is in the prim and proper village of Oxbridge, a place of intellectual sanctity. Barbara seems predestined to join the ranks of the village spinsters. She contemplates rebellion. Gregory Rance, popular novelist, is visiting her cousin, Laurie Chiswick. They are mutually attracted. Barbara overhears Rance asking Laurie about her. He says she is the sort of girl he'd want to marry. Laurie leaves and Barbara makes her presence known to Rance. She asks him to marry her.

INSTALLMENT VIII.

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT.

Barbara took a step towards him and stopped, trembling throughout her body. The thought that life had given her at last this one opportunity; the fear that tomorrow he would go away, swept aside her last inhibitions. "I won't deceive you. From the moment I saw you, there in the crowd, from the moment you touched me, spoke to me, looked at me, my head has been in a whirl. I haven't been able to think of anything else but how strong and vital you are. I came out to escape—to be with you."

"Look here, I'm not going to answer you here in the moonlight," he said with a quick breath. "Say that to me tomorrow in the broad daylight."

"O, tomorrow you'll be frightened and run away."

"No."

"You will, I know you will!"

"No, I won't go away!"

He put his hands on her shoulders.

"Do you know what it would be to link yourself up with a crazy artist like me?"

She began to laugh.

"Do you realize that I'm a rebel, a maverick, that I couldn't honestly tell you whether I would make your life a hell, or—Barbara be serious! Listen, you queer, romantic little creature!" he cried, as she continued to laugh, her whole being suffused with happiness. He shook her by the shoulders, but gently. "You are utterly, absolutely, idiotically crazy!"

She closed her arms suddenly about his neck and drew his lips down to hers. He had a sudden sensation of fear as he stood enveloped by the clutch of her soft, fragile arms as though at last something stronger than his will had him in its grip.

She closed her arms suddenly around his neck.

"At least I have had this!" she cried, wrenching herself free from his grasp.

He heard her running away in the woods, and the sound of a laugh flung back at him, hysterical but triumphant.

Barbara hurried back along the dim path, stumbling, groping, breathless. Then her pace slackened. She stopped and, leaning against a tree, abandoned herself deliciously to her mood. She had no regrets and no fears. Yesterday she would have been aghast at the suggestion that she could throw herself into the arms of a man she had met for the first time. Yesterday she had lived obediently in a conventional world, rigid and proud in her ingrained tradition. Now everything she had done and said seemed to her the most natural thing in the world. All the women believe in love at first sight. A woman who has not experienced it is a woman in danger. Women have a thoroughly unscientific attitude of their own which refuses to apply the test of reason to that unreasoning surrender which, to acquire its highest dramatic value, must appear inevitable and mysterious. In love there is always something supernatural. The man who pleases at first contact has only to dare to convince. With each successive encounter the difficulties increase. When she reflects a woman begins to doubt.

To Barbara the acute emotion she had experienced at first meeting, the trouble to her imagination, the impulse that had sent her out into the night, the strangeness of their encounter, were all part of that necessary quality of the incredible that makes passion instantly comprehensible and convincing. She knew that her instinct had not erred. Without the slightest experience, she felt that she had understood in Rance things of which he himself was ignorant.

Sensitive natures, brought up in isolation accustomed to stand aloof as spectators, acquire a certain psychic quality. She read Rance instantly and with confidence. She knew that whereas he was convinced that he was ruthless, volatile and selfish, that to the one woman he needed he would be gentle and protective. The naturalness of their contact had been so instantaneously felt that she knew it must be shared, and she could afford to smile at the masculine conceit which believed that it could logically control the course of events. Determined to have him, confident that in his brusque strength she would find the liberator that would cut through the inhibitions which imprisoned her, she felt that her intuition had made no error. The daring and unconventionality she had shown were exactly what would impress a man of his imagination. She had not calculated her action, but now as she looked back on him she was filled with a sense of triumph, as though she had discovered her own power.

"He may think he can reason and argue about it," she thought to herself, smiling. "He can't escape any more than I can. No, no, he's caught as I am caught. I know it, I felt it."

She had known that when she had laughed. For the moment, her imagination refused to consider the difficulties ahead. She knew nothing of his life, of possible entanglements that might come between them. The instinct that had swept her to him could make no error, that instinct which had led her to stake all on one unpremeditated gesture. But gradually, through the intoxication of her senses, the figure of her father forced its way and she had a moment of panic. If he ever so much as suspected what had happened! She drew herself hastily up and set out slowly for home, trying to bring some order into the fine disarray of her senses.

"If there was only a way I could slip up to bed," she thought. But no, she would have to face him, and facing him, conceal from him the tumult that was running in her brain.

When she was in the rose garden she heard his voice calling, and halloed back gaily:

"Where are you?"

"Down by the pool."

She came slowly, humming to herself.

"What a glorious night! Everything is bewitched. How can you stay indoors?"

"Humph! Well, are you coming in now?"

"No, indeed."

"Moonstruck like all silly women!"

She gave way to the laughter that was in her, extending her arms and turning on her toes to pretext a reason for her high spirits.

"Moonstruck, moonstruck? Of course I am. I could dance all night."

He noticed, at once, the unusual agitation of her manner and wondered again what was behind it.

"You'd better come in," he said sharply.

"Presently. Go to bed. I'll lock up."

He turned, reluctant and suspicious, and went in, muttering, "I've some papers to run over. I'll be in the library."

She waited until she saw his shadow at the desk, and then slipped quietly up the stairs and hurriedly undressed. When he came up, an hour later, she pretended to be asleep. He moved quietly about the room, opened the windows, arranged the comforter at the foot of the bed and stood looking down at her.

"Barbara, you are not asleep!" he said in a low voice.

But, as she did not reply, he finally turned and went into his room.

"He is already suspicious," she thought. "What an uncanny instinct he has about me."

She had been tempted to answer him and provoke the explanation which she had been postponing for months. She felt ready now to meet any issue. But a moment's reflection deterred her. It was all very well to face her father and ask him point blank if his intentions were to condemn her to a life of isolation, but to open the subject would be certain to lead to the discovery of her real feelings. To let him suspect the truth would be to arouse an instant hatred of Rance.

Humble Carrot May Be Decked Out Tastefully

"Two Mouths to Feed," a booklet containing recipes and suggestions for cooking for two, is on sale at the Public Service Office, 1 South Dearborn street, for 3 cents. By mail, 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address mail requests to Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune.

BY MARY MEADE.

A bit of tonic and makeup now and then is relished by the best of vegetables. And as for those v's which simply seem to lack entirely the personality touch, a dash of imagination and a saving ingredient or two are life savers in giving them allure and appetite appeal.

Just look at carrots, for instance. In most eyes, sad to say, they're not noted for their native charm. But give them a decking of melted butter, some minced onion, a whirl of grated cheese, and watch them respond! Money back if it doesn't soften the heart of the most confirmed carrot hater of your acquaintance. Here are instructions:

BAKED CARROTS AU GRATIN.
3 cups cut carrots, uncooked
12 soda crackers, crumbled
2 teaspoons minced onion
2 tablespoons melted butter
¼ teaspoon pepper
¾ cup grated cheese

Cook the carrots in boiling salted water until tender. Drain them, saving two-thirds cup of the liquid. Mash them well and then stir in the cracker crumbs, onion, butter, and pepper. Turn into a greased dish, pouring the carrot liquor over all. Sprinkle with the cheese and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees F.) for fifteen minutes.

And have you candied them? Every one has added this sweet glaze to orange rind, but here is real competition. It's likewise a confection:

CANDIED CARROTS.
½ pound carrots
1 cup water
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Choose a sunny day for this. Peel the carrots and cut them lengthwise in strips as you might orange peel. Place them with the water and lemon juice over a burner and cook very slowly for ten minutes. Dip out the carrots and add the sugar and enough water to replace that lost in cooking. Boil this sirup together for four minutes, then add the carrots and continue cooking until tender. Remove the strips and place them in a single layer on a plate in the sun. Meanwhile cook the sirup until quite thick. Turn the carrot strips into a sterile glass jar, pour in the sirup, and seal. As these are needed drain them from the sirup, roll them in sugar, and dry before serving. These are really tummy-tickling when minced and used in morning muffins. Try 'em!

And there's also an old Irish recipe that uses carrots starring opposite St. Patrick's favorite potato.

WHIPPED CARROTS AND POTATOES. (Irish Version.)

Peel white potatoes and cut in fourths. Cut scraped carrots in cubes and boil the two vegetables together until tender, using salted water. Drain and mash them, also together, adding enough gravy from pork sausage or a roast of pork to give delicious flavor and a creamy consistency. Beat, reheat, and serve.

Truth Enables Child to Meet Crises Bravely

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

An article in this column on a special subject often brings in a number of interesting letters. Sometimes the letters agree—and frequently the writer will give an experience of her own which illustrates further some generalization we may have made on a particular aspect of child management.

Preparing small children for new experiences which might otherwise frighten or shock them is a subject we have often written of here. The following letter is one which has special interest, because the writer shows how she carried straight through to the finish her plan of preparing her child for a new and unpleasant experience.

"My Dear Mrs. Bevans: My 5 year old daughter was to have an operation. I prepared her in advance for every detail so that there would be no element of surprise or mystery. We were told to be at the hospital at 9, though the operation was not to be until 4:30. I took with me a small blackboard and for a while we drew pictures and read. I suggested a nap in the high white crib as an opportunity to put on the new pajamas bought for the occasion, and the process of getting to bed was painless.

"She waited anxiously for them to bring the promised "costume" [the regulation hospital nightgown, cap, and leggings] and for the "bed on wheels" on which she was to have a ride. She was shown the hypodermic needle and told it would hurt and she might cry if she liked. She gripped my hand tight, but didn't make a sound.

"When the stretcher was brought she said: 'My mother told me a strong man would come and give me a ride,' and went off promising to breathe deeply of the 'sweet air' which would put her to sleep. I had described the operating room, and said the doctor would be in a costume, too, with a white mask, that while she was asleep he would put on the medicine that hurt [I did not mention cutting] and that she would then be brought back to me.

"She behaved like a little soldier when coming out of ether, and later when dressings were changed, and her only reproach was, 'Mother, you didn't tell me the sweet air would make my eyes sting so I wanted to cry.'

"I was pretty proud of what the nurse told me was a most unusual record, and I pass on this experience because I believe it proves that telling the truth to a child is never a mistake. It may be the harder way, but it is so well worth while in the end to establish faith in the child's mind."

MINUTE MYSTERY

By H. A. RIPLEY

[Copyright: 1934: By The Chicago Tribune.]

THE PROFESSOR WONDERS.

"Hell! what a fog," muttered Hale Spence as Dodge, his man servant, took his damp wraps. "Had to walk from the club . . . couldn't get a cab at any price. Got lost twice . . . you couldn't see your hand in front of your face! Get Billings on the phone. Bradwell's . . ."

"Pardon me, sir, you have a visitor. Prof. Fordney . . ."

"Hello, Spence," greeted the criminologist. "I overheard your conversation. As a native Londoner you shouldn't mind this weather!"

Spence's face clearly indicated he was not pleased at having a caller but his: "Won't you join me in a drink?" was cordial enough.

Fifteen minutes later he was aware of the purpose of Fordney's visit. Scotland Yard, suspicious of Spence's connection with a counterfeiting ring, had asked the professor to interview him. Through subtle inquiries he learned far more than his host was aware of.

"The Yard was about to arrest Bradwell as head of the ring, but he was murdered this afternoon," casually remarked Fordney.

"Yes. So I learned on my way home from the club. Saw the headlines of an evening paper as I passed a newsboy about a block from the flat. But let me tell you, professor, the Yard's mistaken! Bradwell conducted a perfectly legitimate business in Tottenham Court road. I've bought several antiques from him."

"Is this one of them?" inquired Fordney, indicating a chair.

"Why, yes it is. Why?"

On his way to the Yard Fordney muttered to himself. "Antiques! Humpf . . . Strange that a smart fellow like Spence should try to get away with such a stupid lie!"

WHAT WAS IT?

[See solution on page 27.]

Perhaps you have a story or problem you would like to submit to Prof. Fordney. If so, send it to him care of this paper. He'll be delighted to receive it.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

BELLE: AN UNPLEASANT ODOR of the hair, even though it is shampooed regularly, is generally associated with an oily scalp. The use of a good drying tonic, and a dark soap, is recommended along with elimination of fats and greasy food.

JEAN: YOU'RE A FOOLISH GIRL to lose sleep over a matter of six surplus pounds. You simply have to curb that craving for sweets and put in some vigorous exercise work each day. In less than three weeks you'll be back to your normal weight.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

"Dear Miss Blake: No matter what else I am doing, I think of a certain person all the time. Am I in love? I am 16. BLONDIE."

You just think you are, but how could you be at 16? A mere case of puppy love, easily curable if you try thinking of something else.

"Dear Miss Blake: How can you tell if a fellow is handing you a line or not when he says nice things to you? BROWN EYES."

If the nice phrases come with other attentions, such as taking you out, convince yourself that he means it. Don't be doubting.

other who has consented to add to the evening's entertainment.

Not many Winnetkans who have young children will be coming to town for the President's birthday party, for the mothers of the pupils of the Horace Mann school, the oldest public school in Winnetka, are giving a benefit for the school that night in the Jane Kuppenheimer Memorial hall of the Skokie school.

Julian Duguid, the author of "Green Hell" and "Tigerman," and his friend, Sacha Siemel, nicknamed "Tigerman" in the Bolivian jungles, will speak at the benefit and will show three short moving pictures showing how "Tigerman" kills jaguars with a lance.

Mrs. Byers Wilcox is chairman of the committee and Mrs. Roy Bard is ticket chairman. Among others working with them are Mrs. Alfred Brittain, Mrs. Albert S. Gardner, Mrs. Gerald Tenney, Mrs. Louis Northrop, Mrs. Rene Traveletti, and Mrs. Donald Brock.

Tea Thursday for Mme. Edith Mason.

Mrs. Bartholomay Osborne has invited the members of her opera box committee, the women directors of the Chicago Grand Opera company, and a few members of the Friends of Opera to tea Thursday afternoon at her residence, 1455 State parkway, to say good-by to Mme. Edith Mason, who is leaving the next day to rejoin her husband, Maestro Giorgio Polacco, and their little daughter, Graziella, at their home in Milan, Italy.

When Herma Clark gives her "Footlight Favorites of the Past" Sunday afternoon at the Drake Mrs. Richard E. Parker will be one of the most interested members of her audience. Mrs. Parker is the daughter of John Dillon, the comedian of Victorian days, whose picture will be one of the story highlights.

The sale of tickets indicates that there will be a large and interesting audience, just as there has been for Miss Clark's programs in former years.

Another in the audience, and also in the story, will be Mrs. H. E. C. Peterson, the mother of Adelaide Love, the poet. Mrs. Peterson was a singer in her youth, appearing on the platform with Edwin Booth, Clara Morris, and Salvini at a benefit given in New York for the Edgar Allan Poe memorial placed in Central park.

Miss Libby Chase Returning from Mexico.

Miss Libby Chase is getting back to Lake Forest today or tomorrow from a quick motor trip to Mexico with her sister, Mrs. Chase Boyden. She has discovered that she can't be away long this winter, for with the weather remaining comparatively mild all of her young equestrians at Misery farm are keeping her busy thinking up new games and stunts and runs.

She has indefinite plans for a holiday in the South American Andes . . . ranch, birchbark canoe, mountains.

Miss Chase's mother, Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, reminded us yesterday that there will be an all day home dressmakers' sale Thursday at the White Elephant Rummage shop on Ohio street that helps support the Children's Memorial hospital. At noon all of the saleswomen [board members], with Mrs. D. Mark Cumming as their chairman, will have a luncheon at the shop served directly from the Woman's Athletic club kitchens.

Mrs. H. G. Boston Returns After Long Absence.

Mrs. Henry G. Boston arrived in Chicago Saturday after an absence of several years. She came from England, where she has two homes, one in London, where she spends most of her time, and one in Liverpool. While here for six weeks she will be visiting her sister, Mrs. Lawrence B. Robbins, in Lake Forest. Mrs. Boston is the former Olive Farwell, and Mrs. Robbins is the former Sarah Farwell.

Mrs. Edward B. Hill [Leslie Farwell] and Mrs. Franklin Corning Kenly [Ruth Farwell] are coming from San Francisco and Medford, Ore., respectively, to see her.

Mrs. Jay Morse Ely and her mother, Mrs. John H. Hamline, left last week for Mrs. Ely's home in Thomasville, Ga., where they will spend the rest of the winter and the early spring.

Col. and Mrs. Harold G. Sperling of Highland Park have moved to the Lake Shore Athletic club where they will remain for the rest of the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth MacKenzie are boarding a train Friday with their son and daughter and daughter-in-law and son-in-law, the Innes MacKenzies and the Horatio R. Rogerses, for a midwinter vacation in California. They will make their headquarters at the Huntington in Pasadena and take motor and week-end trips north and south from there. The senior Mr. and Mrs. MacKenzie will be away at least two months, but the young MacKenzies and Mr. and Mrs. Rogers will be back in three weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan C. Spalding have left Lake Forest to visit Mrs. Austin H. Niblack in Aiken, S. C.

Mr. and Mrs. James W. Rogers left last Friday for a motor trip to Florida. They will be away about two weeks.

Rockefeller McCormick Articles to Be Sold.

Three lots of articles from the effects of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick that were bought at the auction last week by some friends of the Two R's shop will be put on sale at the shop, 421 North State street, this morning As the name indicates, the shop is a rummage and resale one and it is conducted by the woman's division of the Salvation Army. Mrs. Loyal Davis and Mrs. Mark W. Trude will be in charge today, assisted by some of the other board members.

Mrs. Charles K. Corsant, one of those who started the shop and who has been ill since before Christmas, hopes to be able to be there for a little while this afternoon. About forty pieces of decorative china, glass and pottery; several dozen guest towels, some of them monogrammed with handsome E. R. McC.'s, and about 100 volumes of fiction are the articles that came from the town house of the late Mrs. McCormick that will be sold at the shop today.

Proper Washing Is Simple Way to Hand Beauty

Supplement This Care with Use of Good Lotion.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Scarlet finger tips will not outshine the red of red, winter hands. Nothing will tone down the high wind coloring but a good hand lotion, guaranteed to soften and whiten the skin. There are good ones on the market, and there is a good old home remedy—equal parts of glycerin and spirits of camphor—to take the red out of the full blown shade of hand skin.

These are the days when one has to wash the hands in a ritual sort of way. No wiping the towel over hurriedly, but a thorough drying, or the cold will discolor the skin. And speaking of washing hands or face in the cold months, you had better stick to tepid water. Or, if hot is used, consider the job only half done, and that half imperfectly, when not followed with a cold rinse. Yes, use the cold water after the hot, no matter how cold the weather. Better, though, to stick to the tepid when you can. Housewives will get in contact with hot water in their dish washing and other household activities, so their best bet for hand preserving is the use of hand lotion after every such duty performed.

It's just a simple little habit to acquire and a grand one for the hands. Hand lotions are not prohibitive in cost, even in these economical days. If you can't afford anything else, use olive oil. It's harder to work into hands than most of the lotions, but it is good and, I'll add, preserver of the best pair of houseworking hands I ever laid an eye on.

Better get the night-gloves habit, too, if the hands are the kind that embarass with redness in winter. A pair of old kid gloves are good, a size or two larger. Leave your cream on at night, or an extra dab of hand lotion. If you've had nail breaking trouble heretofore this will fix them so there won't always be one mourning digit in the nail family.

The same lubricating plan goes for skin on face, arms, and legs, if you suffer from chap and reddening. Better use a foundation cream under your makeup every time you go outdoors. Use a lipstick with a creamier base than summer called for. The winter dries out the skin, so you have to grease it, more and more, to keep it safe from winter destruction.

Temperament in Films? View the Directors

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—It often becomes a question who shows more temperament in the movies, the high priced actresses such as Greta Garbo, who may merely be tongue-tied by shyness, or those such as Katharine Hepburn, who may be merely desirous of giving people something to talk about, or the male producers, directors, writers and supervisors who take themselves seriously.

Example: Lew Brown, the ex-song writer and New York stager of revue numbers who is now putting on the Fox Follies, voiced a fear that somebody in the employ of George White, working on another revue on the same lot, might steal some of Brown's film Follies fillies' style effects, so Brown ordered all his girls to wear capes over their costumes when not behind the closed doors on his set.

Example: At Paramount it required the sudden visit of Lord Decies of England and his daughter, the Hon. Mayo Beresford, to induce Joe von Sternberg finally to permit Joe's own press agent to step on the barred Von Sternberg set. With Lord Decies and Miss Beresford looking on, the press agents was, after weeks, allowed to look on also while Von sent 75 screen Cossacks riding up a flight of stairs into a Russian castle for a scene in Marlene's "Scarlet Empress" [new title for the Catherine the Great story].

Example: Harry Cohn, producer at Columbia, ripped a photograph of Frank Borzage, director of one of Columbia's recent star films, right off the studio walls last week after Harry and Frank disagreed over something.

If it's temperament that interests readers, however, Sternberg can provide enough to keep any layman listening for a full eight hour shift. This director, who launched his Hollywood career to the accompaniment of hickory shirts, recently purchased four hand tailored velvet coats, double breasted and with buttons 1½ inches wide, to wear as his picture making uniform.

The reason the movie studio bosses indulge Lew Brown and Von Sternberg in such whims, even when expensive, is because both have successful records behind them for profit making productions.

Events on the Stage

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

Musical shows of the revue type, with plenty of scenery and a full complement of chorus girls, have become normal procedure for stage entertainment in the cinema palaces. The titles of bygone Broadway pastimes which used to imitate the "Follies," the "Scandals," etc., by running in series, are being dug up and attached to these four-a-day frolics.

Thus one finds at the Palace theater this week a so-called 1934 edition of "The Greenwich Village Follies," affecting the studio and paint brush atmosphere of its several predecessors of ten and fifteen years ago. The players wear smocks and velvet berets now and then, as, if to prove that the artistic yearnings of Greenwich Village are dear to their hearts, but the twenty-five Chester Hale dancing girls dress and undress in the legitimate revue manner. Among the principals—not a brilliant group—are Chic Yorke, Ross King, Coley Worth, Edith Drake, True Yorke, and Ernest Charles.

"Artists and Models," another show of this sort, will arrive at the Palace next Friday. It marks the revival of a title that the Shuberts used for a number of years during the halcyon period of Broadway revues. Jimmy Savo and Jens and Whalen will be the leading comedians.

A shortened version of the perennial operetta, "The Student Prince," will appear at the Chicago theater next Friday afternoon. This show is touring under Shubert auspices, like all of the preceding "Student Princes." It will have Allan Jones, most graceful and melodious of the numerous singers of the title rôle, at the head of the cast. Gertrude Lang, George Hassell, and Hollis Davenny, familiar figures in the tradition of this fine operetta, also will be among the participants.

"Double Door," a "mystery" play that has been prominent among this season's Broadway hits, will be the next offering of the American Theater society at the Erlanger theater. The company began a tour this week, and the date of its Chicago première has not yet been fixed.

This melodrama, written by Elizabeth McFadden, tells a story that suggests the history of the Wendell family, whose background of mystery and money and eccentric spinsterhood has figured frequently in recent dispatches from New York. The leading role is acted by Mary Morris, and others in the cast are Aleta Freel, Anne Revere, George E. Taylor, Granville Bates, and Ernest Woodward.

A drama called "The Crime at Blossom's," by Mordaunt Shairp, will be staged by the Players' guild in the Chicago Woman's Club theater next Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. Shairp is the author of "The Green Bay Tree," a play that has aroused discussion in New York this season.

Beg your pardon: "The Curtain Rises," at the Cort theater, is not in the last week of its Chicago engagement as stated in last Sunday's TRIBUNE. The run will continue indefinitely.

Menuhin Plays to Throng at Scout Concert

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

When the Girl Scouts were looking for a money making recipe two years ago Mrs. William S. Monroe, one of the best sponsors they've ever had, suggested a musical series. Since then it has been proved repeatedly that Mrs. Monroe knew a good recipe.

Last night, for the fourth time this season, friends of the Girl Scouts filled the golden horseshoe and the main floor seats of the old Auditorium for another concert. They heard the boy prodigy violinist, Yehudi Menuhin, who, incidentally, was celebrating his 17th birthday yesterday.

"Yes, now I can really deny that I am a boy prodigy," he commented to his friend and admirer, Vladimir Horowitz, who, with the new Mrs. Horowitz [Wanda Toscanini], were members of the audience. "Now I am grown up."

According to custom, Mrs. Monroe was occupying her usual center box with Mr. Monroe; their son, Henry Monroe; Mrs. Mitchell D. Follansbee, and Miss Elizabeth Rumsey, completely wrapped in handsome fox. In another part of the house sat Miss Rumsey's pretty younger sister, Miss Jean Rumsey, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Rumsey, with the William E. Clows.

The younger generation was well represented. There was Miss Jessica Hambleton with Durand Smith, Miss Martha Fitts with a good looking beau, Miss Betty Scriven with still another attractive young escort, and Arthur Barnhart with Miss Jane Boyce. Both Miss Scriven and Miss Boyce wore delicate wreaths of flowers in their hair, becoming to their blonde beauty.

Miss Jean Armstrong, with intriguing black and silver sandals that matched her formal gown, hurried to a place on the main floor with her escort just ahead of Miss Barbara Graf, stunning in brown velvet, collared in sable.

Miss Dorothy North's chauffeur checked Miss Olive Leslie's bags as Miss North and her guest arrived. Miss Leslie has just come from Paris.

"A mystery play is what I call it," suggested some one in the party that included the Louis and the Carroll Sudlers and Mr. and Mrs. W. Press Hodgkins, when Menuhin broke a violin string in the first movement of Paganini's Concerto in D major. Trying to remedy it in a hurry, the young artist confronted a locked door as he tried to leave the stage.

Next to the Monroes in the box horseshoe sat Mrs. Arthur L. Farwell, Chicago's scout commissioner, with Mr. Farwell, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Bartlett, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hicks.

Girls Consider Marriage Today Worth Gamble

Depression Has Made Men Afraid to Take Leap.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"Scared" is 25, the girl he wants to marry is 21. He has a trade, which, when worked at, earns enough for a fair living for two. But business in his line isn't promising for a couple of years to come. However, he has a steady job with his dad now, earning $110 a month. That is all the job is worth, he tells. His dad won't pay more. So, there's no bright outlook on work.

Out of bank and investment wreckage the young man survives with $300 in cash and two hundred in a life insurance policy. The girl earns $75 a month. She wants to get married now, claiming their combined salaries would suffice. He doesn't like the idea of his wife working. Besides, if she became sick, or had a baby, they would have to go to in-laws for help. "As much as I want to get married, I would not if I thought I would get into a hole like that. I want to wait until I have a thousand saved. The girl thinks that would take too long."

One thing, learned from the depression period, is woman's stronger gambling spirit toward marriage. Invariably it is the man who hesitates, the woman being willing to take the chance. Perhaps it's just as well that some one has the sense to know that a household cannot be run on love alone, that the in-law ogre is all it is said to be. The domestic fatalities, due to lack of carrying funds and moving in on in-laws, are the truly great tragedies of the depression era.

However, it is not for the health of the country, nor for themselves, that young people's heads bow too low under depression cares. Caution, up to a certain point, is all right, but it is that gambling spirit that spells progress for the country and for the individual. Our recommendation, under the stated circumstances, would be to compromise on another year's wait, the girl saving along with the boy, and then let the wedding bells ring out. A young man who decides that he will never get any more money, never have a better job, is just the sort who needs some strong impetus to bigger accomplishments. Marriage frequently works this charm, if the boy isn't lazy or too troubled with inferiority pangs.

Frances Perkins Sews First NRA Garment Label Into Her Dress

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—A bit of needlework by the country's only woman cabinet member opened a new era in the dress industry here today.

Sweatshops passed from the picture as Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, stitched the first NRA dress label into a gown.

The label symbolizes a thirty-five hour week, a minimum wage for labor and the elimination of child labor. It bars works in tenement houses, basements and unsanitary buildings.

Miss Perkins came from Washington for the ceremony, held the most important event in the needlework industries since last October. Then Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt sewed the NRA label of the coat and suit code into her winter coat.

Heads of women's organizations and industrial reform leaders gathered today at the offices of the dress code authority to see the new label sewn. It was the signal for release of millions of Blue Eagle dress labels, to manufacturers who have complied with the dress code regulations.

Miss Perkins will wear the gown with the first code label while performing her official duties.

Patou's Evening Coats Express a Fly Away Mood

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—That flyaway look which the famous forty are all striving for this season is easy to achieve in Patou's latest evening coat, which is illustrated. The sleeves float out behind when you take even half a step, and the way the back of the coat body is fitted to the waistline and flared below helps to increase this effect. The sleeves are members of the leg o'mutton family, shirred into deep armholes and full and looped at the back, to imitate wings. Below the elbows they're fitted, and they have big cuffs made of looped wool in white. The collar is also made of this wool. The coat is of bright vermilion red velvet.

The dress is the new 1934 cotton evening dress, with a slinky limp line. It is made of cotton crêpe with a rib in it, and has a skirt that is gored and flared at the bottom, though it hangs in soft folds. The blouse consists of two big squares of the material in front and back, attached to wide shoulder straps and held by four small ivory cylinders, two at the top and two at the waistline of the front and the back.

Food Facts worth KNOWING

Many people wonder why it is almost impossible to get the delicious flavor of canned applesauce when it is made at home.

CANNED APPLESAUCE
is a blend of apples of distinctly different flavors

This proper blending of apples assures flavor, consistency, and texture. It makes better applesauce.

Many people who can't digest raw apples, find canned applesauce easy to digest. It contains fruit acids which produce a mildly laxative effect.

There is splendid food value in canned applesauce. It is a zestful breakfast dish. Adds flavor to meats and fowl, when served with them. Makes many delicious, healthful desserts.

Buy a can of Applesauce and try this recipe for luncheon or dinner:

APPLE SNOW
¼ cup Canned Applesauce
3 egg whites
⅛ tsp. lemon juice
(yield 5 or 6 servings)
Beat egg whites until very stiff. Add lemon juice and then fold in the Applesauce very gradually. Pile lightly in glass dish and chill. Serve with custard or cream. May be garnished with Maraschino or Mint cherries or cubes of Currant or Mint Jelly.

RIOTING FLARES AGAIN IN FRANCE ON BOND SCANDAL

Royalists Try to Storm Chamber of Deputies.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 22.—For the third time in as many weeks a Parisian mob led by Royalist students today tried to storm the chamber of deputies to show the government that the public has not forgotten the Stavisky $60,000,000 bond scandal, in which various high officials are alleged to have been involved.

Several Americans, including Clayton Booker, a student from La Crosse, Wis., and John W. Dahlgren of New York were accidentally caught in the riots and arrested by police.

Fighting between students and police raged up and down the Boulevard St. Germain as on the other two occasions, but the scale of the riots was somewhat smaller and less serious damage was done.

Civil Servants Riot, Too.

Lively scenes, however, occurred as the rioters burned benches, broke iron gratings and grills, drove automobiles on the sidewalks and fired off hundreds of small torpedoes.

At the same time several hundred members of the communist civil servants' union staged a riot of their own around the city hall, chiefly to protest against salary cuts but incidentally on account of the Bayonne pawnshop scandal, in connection with which the French public was fleeced by the issuance of fake bonds by Serge Stavisky, the promoter.

A shakeup in the police force and the surete generale [secret police] involving discharge from service, demotion, retirement or rebukes for a handful of fairly big officials, was announced today, but it failed to placate public opinion, which is calling for more and bigger heads.

Two More Duels Loom.

Two more potential duels developed today due to the reaction of a prominent Radical deputy, Andre Hesse, who was Stavisky's lawyer, to attacks on him by members of the Paris bar. When Hesse showed up at the Palais de Justice in the traditional black gown ready to plea a civil case a young lawyer named L'Hermitte indignantly told him to leave the building and not to disgrace the robe.

Hesse smacked him, and a tussle ensued which is expected to have further consequences. Just to show he is in a fighting mood Hesse sent a second to another lawyer who had written a newspaper article denouncing his conduct.

New Scandal Breaks.

Just to make things more unpleasant for Premier Camille Chautemps, who is still in hot water on account of the Stavisky affair, a new bank scandal resembling the Stavisky swindle on a small scale came to light today.

The new "Stavisky," Georges Alexander, operated a "phoney" bank, or money lending bureau for public servants. In addition to gouging them on interest he allegedly misappropriated sums variously estimated at from $3,000,000 to $15,000,000. He has been arrested. An important feature of the case is that he has been under police surveillance since 1930, but apparently this did not cramp his style.

DOCTORS ARRIVE FOR CONFERENCE ON DYSENTERY

Medical experts from various sections of the country arrived in Chicago yesterday for conferences with Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, on the recent epidemic of amebic dysentery, the facts gathered in stamping it out and means to prevent such outbreaks.

Yesterday's activities were limited to visits to various hospitals and laboratories, where case histories were studied, because of the delay of Dr. Charles F. Craig, professor of tropical diseases at Tulane university. He will arrive today and the official conferences will begin. Later in the week the experts are expected to issue a joint statement on the epidemic and manner in which it was brought under control.

The other experts are: Dr. Frank W. O'Connor, Columbia university; Dr. Henry Edmund Meleney, Vanderbilt university; Gen. George W. McCoy, United States public health service; Dr. Thomas Byrd McGath, Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn.; Dr. A. J. Chesley, university of Minnesota, and Abel Wolman, chief engineer of the Maryland state board of health.

Twenty-eight cases of amebic dysentery have been reported in the last three months to health officers of six north shore suburbs. Eighteen cases were found in Evanston, seven in Wilmette, and three in Winnetka.

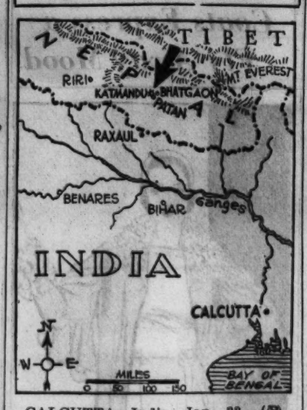
3 Towns Destroyed



CALCUTTA, India, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Delayed reports reaching here today said that three chief towns of Nepal—Patan, Bhatgaon, and Katmandu—were nearly destroyed in the earthquake last week and that several thousand persons may have been killed in that kingdom alone.

A telegram sent Thursday from Raxaul, a frontier town, which arrived today, and a letter received by a Nepal official here provided sketchy information of the tragedy.

Information received at the India office here, meanwhile, showed that the reported deaths in the earthquake in India approximated 1,300. The belief was expressed, contrary to higher estimates earlier, that the total figure may not exceed 1,500.

PRESS CHARGES AGAINST 17 HELD IN AUTO THEFTS

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Automobiles stolen, 60; recovered, 45; stripped, 2 [from police records for the 24 hour period ending at midnight Sunday night].

Speedy grand jury hearing of charges of stealing and receiving stolen cars and parts will be sought today when seventeen youths and men are arraigned before Police Magistrate Joseph Flaherty in Harvey. Assistant State's Attorney Eugene L. Wachowski will ask that all the men be bound over to the grand jury, which last week opened a special investigation of automobile thefts.

Scores of motorists yesterday visited the garage in the village of Posen, which is filled with stolen cars and parts, to identify their property.

Sixteen of the alleged thieves and fences were rounded up over the week-end, including the supposd leader, Stanley Zawisza, 20 years old, 1504 Sherman avenue, Posen. The seventeenth suspect, seized yesterday, was John Czepiel, 22 years old, 444 East 61st street, who was charged with altering motor numbers.

Thieves stole an automobile owned by a policeman last night. He is Russell L. Richards, member of a racket squad, who had parked his machine in a lot adjacent to the police building at 11th and State streets. When he went to get his car he discovered it had disappeared.

Asks More Yankee Aid in International Labor Office

GENEVA, Jan. 22.—(AP)—An increased collaboration between the United States and the international labor office was indicated today in recommendations of Harold B. Butler, director of the office, that several Americans be made members of the organization. Butler urged that the governing body of the international labor conference extend its activities to Latin-American countries.

NAZIS DEAL OUT PUNISHMENT TO FOES, TATTLERS

Police and Catholic Youth Clash in Stuttgart.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 22.—The chief of police of Ulm today informed Catholic authorities that he will not go to church in Ulm "until the church does its duty to the Fatherland." The church failed to hoist the Nazi banner on the 63d anniversary of the creation of the German empire last week.

In Stuttgart clashes occurred between police and Catholic youth associations when the latter, at the close of celebrations in honor of Holy Year, tried to march through the streets bearing their flags and wearing Sam Brown belts over their Catholic Youth outfits. Police declared this a violation of the decree forbidding all uniforms except those of Hitlerite organizations.

Catholic Population Excited.

The strongly Catholic population of the Stuttgart district were intensely stirred during the Holy Year ceremonies, by a vigorous attack on the attempt by Nazi German Christians to capture the nation's youth for propaganda purposes. The attack was made by Prof. Karl Adam of Tuebingen university, an exponent of Catholic dogmatism.

Police and the courts were especially busy today dealing with persons accused of anti-Nazi activities. In Berlin Frieda Zorn, a sales clerk, was sentenced to 15 months in prison because in a letter written to her sister in New York, which was opened by postal supervisers, "she spread tales of atrocities which were untrue."

Else Lucas, a 58 year old teacher, was sentenced to six months in jail for libeling the government. Another woman, Edith Held, 26 years old, got nine months in prison because when speaking to a chance acquaintance on a train she said that prisoners are being maltreated in concentration camps.

Dr. Mueller Gets Setback.

In Krefeld four men were ordered placed in a concentration camp because they tried to collect high commissions on orders for Krefeld cloth makers in connection with the sale of winter coats to storm troopers in the Berlin district.

Meanwhile Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller received a setback in his fight to dominate the Protestant church organization. The ministry of interior ordered all government officials to preserve the strictest neutrality in the dispute. Under this order arrests of rebel pastors and other actions taken by local authorities under a dictatorial decree issued recently by Dr. Mueller were rescinded.

Austria May Ask League to Protect Her from Nazis

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

GENEVA, Jan. 22.—Information here from several sources tonight indicates strongly that Austria will invoke the league of nations covenant if Germany does not soon definitely promise to respect her independence. It is indicated that the council will meet in Vienna instead of Geneva to deal with such an appeal.

100 Tons Dynamite Blows Up; Shakes Brazil Capital

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 22.—The whole city was shaken by the explosion today of 100 tons of dynamite in a private storehouse on Governor's island in the Rio de Janeiro harbor, two miles from the navy air force headquarters. Two watchmen were killed.

'QUIT STALLING!' FRENCH RETORT TO NAZIS ON ARMS

Paris to Ask Action by Disarm Parley.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 22.—"Quit stalling."

This, couched in diplomatic language, will be France's reply to the latest German note on armaments, it was learned tonight.

The decision to disregard the extraordinary, courteous, almost friendly tone of the German memorandum, and call attention to its purely negative substance was made at this morning's cabinet meeting. It was motivated by the conviction that the Germans do not intend to make any concessions, but merely want to draw out the negotiations in order to gain time for military preparations.

The French Answer.

The French answer will be drafted with the greatest possible speed. It will acknowledge the conciliatory wording of the German note, but it will attempt to show also that on every point for negotiation laid down by France, Germany replies with what amounts to a flat refusal. It will show that, on the whole, no progress toward bringing the viewpoints of the two countries together has been achieved since the Germans quit the league of nations.

The French reply will conclude with a virtual ultimatum, informing Germany that if she does not want to offer some real concessions at once, negotiations had better be called off.

Threat Backed Up.

To back up their threat, the French will simultaneously address a message to Arthur Henderson, president of the disarmament conference. They will urge that he convoke the conference immediately to vote through an armaments truce or standstill agreement, since there is no hope of anything more substantial now.

Such an agrement, which France hopes will have British and Italian support, would pledge the powers to maintain the status quo, but would leave France free in case Germany should continue secret rearmament. With this formula the French believe they can escape the responsibility of a breakdown in the efforts to obtain disarmament.

NAZIS TO EXTEND BETTER RACE AIM TO WILD GAME

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 22.—Systematic improvement of the race, which is one of the foremost Nazi aims, will not be reserved for human beings. It will also be extended to German game, according to a new decree on hunting issued by Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, reichsmeister, premier of Prussia, and now master of the hunt.

The edict provides for special new protective measures for the few elk, eagles and bison remaining in Germany as well as other wild birds and game. Districts will be set aside in which deer of poor quality will be repopulated with animals from healthier hunting grounds.

Germany's 140,000 huntsmen themselves were ordered to join official hunting clubs under the supervision of the state.

PEERESS, 70, GETS THREE MONTHS IN PRISON FOR FRAUD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Baroness Strabolgi, 70 year old American born peeress and mother of Lieutenant Commander Joseph Montague Kenworthy, former Labor member of parliament, today was sentenced in Old Bailey to three months' imprisonment on a charge of conspiracy to defraud. Robert Muller, 63 years old, was sentenced to one year. He was tried on the same charge.

Both were accused of attempting to sell to Francis de Moleyns, son of Lord Ventry, fictitious concessions to timber land in Honduras which Muller said he had obtained from the Honduran government.

Lady Strabolgi is the wife of the ninth Baron Strabolgi and the daughter of George Buchanan Cooper of Sacramento, Cal. Her son, Lieutenant Commander Kenworthy, was a member of the admiralty staff during the war and later took up politics. At one time he was in line for the leadership of the Labor party, but was defeated in the election of 1931. Another son is an Anglican clergyman. He offered in court to take care of his mother if she was acquitted.

SHORE-BAILEY AFFAIR SPLITS HOCKEY LEAGUE

Leafs Ask Cash for Loss of Player.

Maj. Frederic McLaughlin, owner of the Blackhawks, and James Norris, Chicago resident who owns the Detroit Red Wings, this afternoon will leave for New York, where they will attend a special meeting of the board of directors of the National Hockey league tomorrow.

ACE BAILEY.

One of the matters up for consideration expected to cause a sharp split among the officials will be the claim of Connie Smythe, manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs, that he is entitled to cash payment for the loss of the services of Ace Bailey, player whose injuries in a game with Boston on Dec. 12 almost proved fatal. Smythe also has registered a claim for hospital and other charges accruing from the accident involving Bailey and Eddie Shore. Shore is now under suspension, but will return to play Jan. 28.

Want to Reduce Squabbling.

The directors also are scheduled to take action designed to reduce the squabbling with referees that has continued this year despite efforts to improve the officiating at games.

Some of the directors are said to be planning to ask a change in the rules governing tie games, with a recommendation for the "sudden death" 20 minute over time periods. Under this plan a game is concluded whenever a team makes a goal in overtime, but with the time of the overtime, so long as the tie prevails, being extended from the present ten minutes to twice as long.

Manager Tom Gorman of the Blackhawks yesterday gave out a formal interview, in which he expressed confidence in his charges, despite their recent propensity for blowing what seemed to many to be comfortable leads. Mr. Gorman's statement, in part, follows:

Tied for Lead, Aren't They?

"I don't think the majority of fans realize what a terrific schedule the Blackhawks went through last week," said Gorman. "They traveled nearly 4,000 miles, played five games in eight days, and played three overtime games. Then they wound up with an overtime struggle against the great Maple Leafs at Toronto and immediately afterwards caught the train to Chicago to tackle the rejuvenated Maroons, who had been resting since Thursday.

"It was the most gruelling schedule ever faced by a hockey team. Many eastern critics prophesied that the Blackhawks woud explode, but here they are today, tied with the Rangers and Detroit for first place and seven points ahead of the Boston Bruins.

"The Blackhawks have only nine more games to play on the road and for the first time I predict that they will reach the championship playoffs."

English Squash Racquet Team Will Play Here

A team composed of outstanding Chicago squash racquets players will meet the Jesters club of London, England, in two matches. The first match is scheduled at the Chicago Athletic association, Jan. 30 and the second will be played at the Racquet club, Dearborn and Schiller streets, the following day.

The Chicago squad will be captained by James Anderson. Other members of the team include Dudley Pope, Joe Janotta, Edgar Hartney, James Douglas and C. Wallace Johnson. The English team is composed of Lieut. H. M. Mellor, G. d'Oyley Sheppard, D. B. Adams, J. A. Gillies, E. Snell, G. O. Jameson, and H. T. Drysdale. The Britons will arrive in Chicago Jan. 28.

Burt Shotton Named Coach by Cincinnati

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Burt Shotton, for eight years manager of the Philadelphia National league baseball club, was appointed coach of the Cincinnati Reds today. The announcement was made by Larry MacPhail, general manager of the Reds.

MacPhail, however, said the selection of Shotton as coach was made by Bob O'Farrell, new Cincinnati manager, who succeeds Donie Bush, resigned Shotton's place at Philadelphia was taken by Jimmy Wilson, former St. Louis catcher.

Shotton Develops Stars.

"My only part in the deal was to inform O'Farrell that I thought Shotton was available," MacPhail said. "I made it clear to Bob that the selection of a coaching staff was entirely up to him, that I cared to have no part in it."

Shotton, in his long tenure at Philadelphia, developed several outstanding players. Among them are Chuck Klein, last season's National league batting champion, who was purchased recently by the Chicago Cubs; Don Hurst, Lefty O'Doul, Virgil Davis, and Ed Schulmerich.

Reds Go in for Farming.

"Shotton will be of great value to our team," O'Farrell said. "He has the ability to develop players and I believe his judgment will aid us in getting out of the second division of the National league."

MacPhail also announced that the Reds will have the Bartlesville club of the Western association as a farm. They also are seeking a farm in the Mid-Atlantic league, he said.

SPEED SKATING STARS DUE TODAY AT OCONOMOWOC

Oconomowoc, Wis., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—A trainload of the nation's best speed skaters, including two newly crowned United States national title holders, is due tomorrow to drill for the North American championships scheduled here Saturday and Sunday.

The Canadian team of eight, four men and four women, are to be on the scene by Thursday. Dorothy Franey and Jimmy Webster, both of St. Paul, Minn., are the 1934 champions who have visions of another sweeping victory in the major title races. In beating Kit Klein of Buffalo, N. Y., for her title last week-end, Miss Franey broke the 220 yard national record in 21 flat.

Eddie Schroeder, who arrived by plane tonight planned a strenuous drill on Lake Fowler tomorrow. He is determined to take the championship to Europe with him when he sails for the international meet at Oslo, Norway, Feb. 17 and 18.

Surveyors Will Measure Course.

Surveyors will measure a six times to the mile track for the stars to practice on for the week. Every dimension will be exactly like the championship course. The suggestion to lay the track for advance training came from Grover Peterson, president of the Wisconsin Skating association, whose son, Bob, will be one of the leading title contenders. Peterson believes this will enable skaters to make record times both days of the meet.

Despite warm weather, the ice on Fowler measured an even foot in thickness. With colder weather promised by the forecaster a fast strip is assured for the seven events Saturday and the five scheduled for Sunday.

Skaters Evenly Matched.

There are at least a dozen skaters, counting the Canadians, who are so evenly matched that the North American championship may be won on mistakes, or breaks. Bill Logan, St. John's, N. B., is ready to go any time, he says; Herb Flack, also a member of the Canadian Olympic team, like Logan, reports plenty of speed; Ed Schroeder of Chicago is in form; Herb Taylor of New York will be a threat; Lamar Ottsen of St. Louis university is in perfect sprint condition; Ed Stundl, youthful Chicagoan, is a strong contender if his racing in the nationals is a criterion; Edwin Wedge, the Detroit All-American, is in trim and a host of other stars are ready for the classic.

ENTERS OSLO MEET

Eddie Schroeder, Chicago ice skating star, yesterday accepted an invitation to compete in the international speed races at Oslo, Norway, Feb. 17 and 18. It will be Schroeder's second visit to Norway.

He will make his final American appearance next Saturday and Sunday in the North American outdoor meet at Oconomowoc, Wis. Schroeder won the two mile championship in record time in the national meet at Minneapolis, Minn., Sunday.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

PRO TENNIS.

CHICAGO'S answer to the question whether it will support professional tennis in paying numbers of spectators again was answered affirmatively Saturday night. A capacity crowd of 5,000 filled Broadway armory for the local billing of the Tilden-Vines-Richards-Barnes national tour. This crowd saw a good show. Prices of admission ranged from $1.10 to $3.30 for box seats.

ELLSWORTH VINES.

It may seem far fetched to mention first the number of spectators and gate receipts, then the play itself in discussing pro tennis. Such treatment, however, is logical. We may assume the caliber of exhibition will be the best and most notable performers can offer. But since the essay frankly is commercial, its permanency for a place on the sports calendar depends on whether or not it is profitable. The reasoning applies equally to pro football, or any other pro athletics.

Such an exhibition as that of Saturday night, held weekly, would not draw equal crowds. Conducted two or three times a year, there is no reason to doubt it would bring forth large numbers of tennis followers and devotees.

In a tour of this type—a series of matches between Tilden and Vines—no one match is of paramount importance. Therefore quality of tennis must appeal to the crowd. There is a rather fine differentiation we attempt to draw. Of course, there must be a contest with each player trying, but our point is that the crowd goes to see tennis rather than to see any one player win.

Those who profess to know their net game said Saturday night there was no apparent "easing" by either Tilden or Vines, except for purposes of strategy, at any point in the match. It appeared that way to us. Tilden is known for his desire to win. He nearly wrecked one tour by downing his opponent too regularly.

If Tilden eventually should start down grade, whether a younger opponent might become "complaisant" in some matches, is for the future to determine. It is nothing to worry about now.

Tilden, with his temperament, is a good showman. Even his frequent differences with linesmen add to the exhibition. His palpable "throwing" of points, at times, is part of his tactics. Even at his best as an amateur he did that. Now, more than ever, he often conserves strength that way.

With game 40-15 against, Tilden nearly always was satisfied to let the game, unless it was a crucial one, go to his opponent rather than battle back to deuce and possibly win it. After breaking through Vines' service and establishing a commanding lead in the fifth set Saturday night, Big Bill tossed away Vines' next service and conserved his strength to put on pressure when he was server. He is a past master of strategy.

That Tilden retains, at 41 years, such great skill is confirmation of his ranking, over a period of years, as the greatest player in American lawn tennis. Admirers of Billy Larned, now dead, may oppose vigorously, however, claim of such primacy.

BADGER GRIDIRON SQUAD ELECTS BENDER CAPTAIN

Madison, Wis., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—John S. Bender, junior guard on the 1933 Wisconsin football team, tonight was elected captain of the 1934 eleven, at the annual grid banquet.

Bender, whose home is at Bluffton, Ind., won his first football letter last fall. He also is a member of the basketball squad, on which he won a letter last season as a guard.

Prof. Andrew T. Weaver, chairman of the university athletic council, was toastmaster at the banquet tonight. Speakers included Coach Spears, Coach Meanwell, Guy Sundt, freshman football coach, Hal Smith, 1930 football captain, and Bender.

126 REPORT FOR GOLDEN GLOVES EXAMINATIONS

BY WILFRID SMITH.
(Entry Blank on Page 19.)

One hundred and twenty-six amateur boxers reported last night at Trafton's gymnasium, 180 West Randolph street, for their physical examinations, the first of the series which will qualify them for the four Chicago sectional Golden Gloves tournaments. A score had failed to bring the written consent of their parents and they will be examined tonight or tomorrow night.

One hundred and one took the examinations. Fifteen were rejected by the physicians, Dr. Thomas Dwyer, Dr. Clarence Plaut and Dr. E. R. Stoehr.

A. A. U. Cards Issued.

All the boys who reported, whether they passed the physical examinations or not, received two tickets to the sectional tournament which they selected. All received copies of general tournament instructions and referees' instructions.

Temporary A. A. U. boxing cards, good for the duration of the Golden Gloves tournament, were issued to novice boxers. The cost of these cards is assumed by THE TRIBUNE. Open division boxers register for one year and may compete in any meet sanctioned by the A. A. U.

Examinations Continue Tonight.

Tonight and tomorrow night the examinations will continue at Trafton's gymnasium. All boys who received letters of instruction to report must appear between 6:30 and 8:30 p. m. A total of more than 1,000 entries have been made to date. Letters for examinations next week will be mailed tomorrow and Thursday.

In all probability entries will be accepted for only ten more days.

A young grocery clerk, Ellis Colangelo, rushed into Trafton's gymnasium last night right at the deadline of 8:30 to be examined by the physicians, making the total number who appeared 126, about 10 per cent more than was expected.

An idea of the rigid examination the Golden Gloves entrants undergo can be obtained from the following illustration. Harry E. Bower, north side welterweight, who has been boxing for several years, was turned down by the physicians. Yet recently he passed a physical and mental test for a position on the Chicago fire department. The doctors told him that he is in good physical condition, but probably not for three fast two minute rounds of boxing.

Yale Board Puts Off Appointment of Gridiron Coach

New York, Jan. 22.—[Special.]—The Yale athletic board postponed tonight's scheduled meeting at which the appointment of a football coach was to be discussed. Malcolm Farmer, graduate manager, announced that the meeting would be held later this week or early next week.

Today's developments pointed toward difficulty in discovering a Yale graduate prepared to take over the coaching. When the meeting was announced, Farmer said that the selection probably would be that of a Yale man.

Bach Signs as Duquesne Head Coach

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Joseph Anthony Bach, more affectionately known by comrades as the Major, today signed a one year contract to succeed Elmer Francis Layden as head football coach of Duquesne university.

Bach was left tackle on the great 1924 Notre Dame eleven, for which Layden was full back.

Alumni Approve Selection.

The new coach, who was not made athletic director, a post Layden also held, has been line coach at Duquesne for five years. His selection was popular with the alumni.

Bach has remained strictly in the background while Layden's teams have been piling up a long string of successes. The forward walls he has built up however, played an important part in the victories.

The darkhaired new coach was 33 years old last Wednesday. He was born in Tower, Minn., and started his athletic career in the grade and high schools of Chisholm, Minn. After attending Carleton college for a time he transferred to Notre Dame in 1922. In 1923 and 1924 he was regular left tackle for the Irish.

Coached at Syracuse.

While completing his course, graduating with a bachelor of science degree in June, 1926, Bach coached at Syracuse, remaining there until he came to Duquesne in 1929. He was married to Mary Louise McGowan in Chicago in 1925.

CULVER HEADS PURPLE ATTACK WITH 17 POINTS

Wildcats Lead, 26-9, in First Half.

Northwestern's basketball team, led by Nelson Culver, who scored 17 points, defeated Ohio State, 42 to 31, at Patten gymnasium last night. The victory gave Northwestern undisputed possession of third place and dropped Ohio into a tie with Indiana for fifth place.

The Wildcats unleashed a long range attack in the first period to acquire a lead of 26 to 9 at half time. Ohio State adopted similar tactics in the second half with almost equal success, and at one time whittled Northwestern's lead to seven points. A purple rally in the closing minutes, however, widened the breach to more comfortable margin.

NELSON CULVER.

Culver who has a reputation for being a long shot artist, was at his best last night. He dropped in seven field goals, five of them in the first half, all from long distances. Three free throws ran his count for the night to 17 points.

Colburn Scores 10 Points.

Second place scoring honors went to Bobby Colburn, stocky little Buckeye forward, who ran wild in the final period to bag six field goals for a total of 12 points. His shots, too, were all from near mid court.

In the first half Northwestern scored on six successive shots, Culver contributed four and Manske and Brewer one each, while in the second half, Ohio dropped in four field goals on four successive shots.

Neither team met with much success in working the ball near the basket for close shots. Northwestern seldom tried, since it was soon seen that the Wildcats were connecting with their long tosses. Ohio waited until the second half before abandoning the short game and began dropping the ball through the hoop from far out.

Fisher Adds to His Lead.

Lyle Fisher, held scoreless in the first half, counted three field goals before going out on fouls midway in the second half. He thus increased in his hold on first place in the Big Ten scoring, his total now being 53 points.

The Wildcats jumped into a five point lead in the early moments of the game on field goals by Brewer and Culver and the latter's free throw. Padlow then counted with a tip in shot for Ohio's first points. Manske scored from the foul line but Ohio kept pace with a field goal by Beitner and a free throw by Conrad.

Then came the deluge in which Northwestern ran up 18 straight points.

Colburn started the Buckeye's second half spurt with two field goals from beyond the foul line. Brewer stopped the rally momentarily with a field goal from the side. Beitner, Laybourne and Whitlinger then scored in succession to bring the count to 28 to 19, the closest Ohio came to overtaking the Wildcats.

Bouts will be fought until only four remain in each of the eight classes. These will compete in the 16 semi-final and 8 final contests tomorrow night.

The addition of Jack Kranz of Gary, Ind., in the heavyweight competition means that others in this division must fight at their best if they hope to win. Kranz was Golden Gloves light heavyweight champion in 1931. The year before that he was selected as an alternate.

Kranz's hardest competition may come from Art Oliver, Chester Bukowski, Rudy Sterbenz, and Tom Kenneally.

Outstanding entrants follow:

When the Illinois Athletic commission receives notification from Henry Rothler, welterweight, that he has repudiated his management contract with Paul Stanger, the document will become void. This followed an opinion from the attorney general, who informed the commission that Rothler's father, Edward, who signed the minor's contract, is a natural and not a legal guardian. The contract has been in dispute for some time.

Upon the renewal of the request of Kay O'Konnor, woman wrestler, to appear in bouts, the state athletic commission yesterday announced that it would seek an opinion from Gov. Henry Horner as to whether women are eligible to compete.

Frank [Spike] McAdams was given a referee's license yesterday.

Packey McFarland, member of the Illinois athletic commission, yesterday attended his first meeting in a month. . . . His co-worker, George Getz, made a formal protest yesterday on the draw decision given after the Solly Dukelsky-Fritz Heinz battle last Monday. Getz contends Dukelsky won easily. . . The proposed card at Cicero stadium Friday has been canceled. . . Pat Kenneally has undergone a nasal operation. . . A wrestling show at Springfield tomorrow was approved yesterday.

The Joe Savoldi-Jim Londos wrestling match at the Chicago Stadium Jan. 31 was sanctioned by the state athletic commission yesterday. . . A show is scheduled at Quincy Feb. 22. . . . Al Woznica and Leo Arminetti, wrestlers, have been suspended until they appear before the commission. . . . John Pacek and Merril Tonn, heavyweights, are paired for a preliminary engagement at Marigold Gardens Monday. . . Jack O'Connell, lightweight, and Hugh Allen, featherweight, are signed for bouts at Rainbo Fronton Friday. . . Raul Dazzo, junior lightweight, will box a suitable opponent at Midway arena Monday.

BY BOB BECKER.

The Illinois department of conservation will carry on its anti-crow campaign until the huge flocks in this state have been materially decreased. Acting Director of Conservation Charles F. Thompson expressed this stand on the crow campaign which is now under way when he was in the city a few days ago. Wardens throughout the state have been asked to report on large flocks in their territories and sportsmen's organizations are being urged to join in an offensive which will exterminate the excess crow population that is a constant menace to song and game birds.

For more than three years THE TRIBUNE has been calling attention to the increase in crows in this state and the effect which these big flocks of egg eaters and nest destroyers have upon our song and game birds. Although there have been spasmodic attacks against the crow flocks in certain parts of the state this is the first time in many years that a concerted effort has been made to carry on a state-wide campaign against the birds.

Asks Aid of Sportsmen.

In discussing various angles of the Illinois crow campaign with us a few days ago, Mr. Thompson said: "I would like to see the sportsmen of this state take up this matter of crow hunting and lend all effort possible to reduce the number of these birds which destroy so many game and song birds. At present we are trying to locate every concentration area of crows with the idea of arranging hunting parties against the flocks. The recent TRIBUNE article asking for information about flocks was very helpful in obtaining information of this type for us.

Our first organized effort downstate bagged 14,000 crows in four hunts. However, the flock near Flora, Ill., from which we took this number of birds is so large that a reduction of 14,000 crows is not noticeable.

Orchardists Welcome Campaign.

Estimates of the size of this flock run from 200,000 up to 1,000,000 birds. The owner of the orchard which is used by the crows as a roosting ground tells us that these birds spread many of the orchard diseases such as scab, scale, etc., and that they eat the young buds from the trees. Therefore, orchard owners downstate have welcomed a campaign to reduce the crow flocks."

We have one big flock of crows located on the north shore, a "crow gang" that is going to be attacked soon by hunters. If readers know of any concentration areas near the Fox river valley or westward, information on them will be welcomed by this department and by Charles F. Thompson, director of conservation, Springfield, Illinois.

Tatanne First Nominee for Derby, May 5

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Announcement that Tatanne, Mrs. J. Zoeller's winner of the Jefferson Derby at New Orleans last Saturday, was the first nomination for the 1934 Kentucky Derby was made tonight at Churchill Downs here. The Derby will be run Saturday, May 5.

Tatanne, a brown filly by St. James-Sardanapale, won 12 of her 24 starts as a 2 year old, and in the Jefferson Derby finished going away, although she had to give weight to all her competitors. She carried 121 pounds, compared to 106 on Southland Duke, which came in second.

While the Zoeller filly's nomination comes as the first harbinger of spring in Kentucky, others whose names are expected to go in before the lists close Feb. 7 include Mrs. J. H. Whitney's colt, Singing Wood, winner of the Belmont futurity as a 2 year old; A. B. Gordon's colt, Sir Thomas, which Singing Wood beat by a nose; the Dixiana stud's filly, Mata Hari, winner of the Breeders' futurity and the Kentucky Jockey club stakes; Bazaar Calvacade, Chicstraw, Far Star, Haddagal, High Glee, and several score others of the 1934 crop of promising 3 year olds.

SWIMMING STARS THREATEN A.A.U. MARKS FRIDAY

One world's record and several Central A. A. U. marks hang in the balance Friday night when the leading men and women swimmers of the central states compete at the Lake Shore Athletic club.

Dorothy Schiller, breast stroke star of the Lake Shore team, is seeking the world's mark in the 100-yard breast stroke event. In a triangular meet at Milwaukee last month, Miss Schiller swam her specialty within three-tenths of a second of the existing women's mark of 125.2 seconds, and according to Coach Stan Brauninger, her chances to eclipse the mark are better now than last month, as she is swimming with more speed.

The Central A. A. U. marks in the speed events are the object of Emma Shemaitis, captain of the L. S. A. C. team, who swam the 100 yard free style in less than 1:05 in the Milwaukee meet and captured the 220 crawl event in close to record time. Her speed is increased, according to Coach Brauninger, by the pressing efforts of Marlys Lapin, Marion Dose, and Jacquelyn Nicholson, also of the Chicago team.

Both the Indianapolis and the Milwaukee Athletic clubs are sending girls' teams to the meet, while the men's competition includes swimmers from the University of Chicago, Northwestern university, Jewish Peoples' institute, Shawnee Country club, and the Lake Shore. Jane Fauntz and Wally Colbath, Olympic divers, will offer exhibitions. The public is invited.

INDIANS BALK AT EVANS' NEW DEAL WAGE CUTS

Cleveland, O., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Billy Evans, general manager of the Cleveland Indians, returned today from a fortnight's absence to find in his mail a number of unsigned contracts—returned by ball players dissatisfied with salary offers.

Refusing to reveal the identity of the holdouts, Evans did say he has yet to receive a signed contract indicating satisfaction with the reduced salary level of 1934.

Evans has not yet abandoned hope of obtaining one or two experienced infielders before the training season opens. One who has been mentioned is Oscar Melillo of the Browns.

McAdams Out to End Kohler String on Mat

Jack McAdams, Georgia heavyweight wrestler, will attempt to halt Fred Kohler's long string of victories when they meet in the windup match of the wrestling program at the Mozart arena, 1536 Clybourn avenue, Thursday night. Kohler has not lost a match in two years.

In the semi-windup Andy Sparks, Gary, Ind., will meet Lou Talaber. There will be three other matches.

Sonnenberg, once claimant of the world's heavyweight title, will meet Ole Oleson, Swedish wrestler, who will display several new holds which he has used with success against other opponents. The semi-windup match will bring together Buckets Goldenberg, Green Bay Packers football player, and Art Miller of Minneapolis.

The semi-windup match of the Chicago Stadium's wrestling match Jan. 31 will bring together Jim McMillen and Everett Marshall of Colorado. Jim Londos faces Joe Savoldi in the windup.

Stadium officials signed McMillen and Marshall with a promise that the winner of the match will meet either Londos or Savoldi later.

PORTER, COUCCI RIDE 2 WINNERS EACH AT MIAMI

Miami, Fla., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Silvio Coucci and the youthful Earl Porter, leading rider of the year, divided honors today at Tropical Park with two victories apiece.

Coucci won the second race with the seven year old gelding, Blue Cloud, and accounted for the fifth with Croon, a consistent three year old filly representing Mrs. K. Jesberger. Both were lightly regarded, Blue Cloud paying $56.90 and Croon, $11.80.

Porter's winning mounts were strongly backed. He won the third race with Haggerson at odds of $5.20 for $2, and the sixth with Waterway, which returned $5.10 straight. The double ran his string of victories for the Florida meeting to 35, all except one of which has been scored since the first of the year.

SENATORS MAY DO 1935 TRAINING IN PUERTO RICO

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—(AP)—The Washington Senators may train in Puerto Rico next year. The suggestion was Secretary Dern's. He put it up to Clark Griffith, owner of the American league club, today.

Griffith said it was too late to change the Senators' training plans this year, but promised to make a survey of the island's facilities before the 1935 training season.

Dern said he wanted to stimulate interest in baseball on the island.

Southern Hunters Report Record Duck Migrations

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—It's been ten or fifteen years since duck hunting states such as Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina, and Texas, have seen such massed flights of wild birds from the north as took place last fall. Delegates to the 20th American game conference that opened today attribute this to early cold snaps in the north.

The main section of the conference devoted the opening day to technical discussions on the breeding, development, and conservation of wild life. The sub-conference of the southern delegates discussed duck hunting.

More ducks and geese than he'd seen in a half a dozen years were reported by E. Le Compte, Maryland game commissioner, but apparently Chesapeake bay was a little north for the birds, for they came early and left the same way. He said less were killed than at any time in the past 20 years.

Burton Smith said that black ducks appeared in great quantities in North Carolina, rabbits decreased, but Bob Whites were four times as plentiful as last year. As far as deer were concerned, he deplored a custom that he said had developed with a situation where in some parts of the state there were 25 does, protected by the law, for every buck deer.

"The boys have formed the habit," he said, "of shooting a doe, reporting the 'accident' to the nearest magistrate, and getting off with a one dollar fine and the doe."

He said that a 50 per cent reduction in the cost of licenses increased the amount of fees for the year to over $90,000, considerably above the average.

Zan Heyward, reporting for South Carolina, said there was an increase of fully one-third in the duck crop this year and he told how, by increasing cover by spreading out scrub oaks, 20 covey of quail had grown in a 200 acre field of broom sage where only two had lived before.

M. O. Harrison, from Florida, told of improved game conditions, but asked for help from other states in gaining legislation against the sale beyond Florida borders of black bass caught by commercial fishermen.

While there were more ducks than ever before in the Panhandle, the kill was only 75 per cent of the 5,000,000 usually taken in Texas each fall, William Tucker reported.

Guy Amsler brought word from Arkansas that black bear are around there again, deer are increasing, but the duck hunting is poor. He suggested that if any one thinks a rabbit is game, come out to Arkansas, where they disdain to hunt them as such. There are no laws protecting them.

Virginia had a great season in water fowl, quail, wild turkey, and ruffed grouse. Max D. Hart, commissioner from that state, thinks it a disgrace for alleged sportsmen, who wouldn't cheat at anything else, to carry automatic shotguns and bag more than their limit.

THE NEXT PUZZLE WILL APPEAR IN TOMORROW'S TRIBUNE

WELL, ATHLETICS STILL POSSESS FOXX, ANYWAY

They Also Have a Nifty Looking Brochure.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Philadelphia Athletics, probably by way of refuting rumors that Connie Mack virtually disbanded his outfit when he sold $250,000 worth of assorted stars at the baseball meeting here last month, are the first out in the American league with the annual fancy brochure roster. The brochure is, indeed, a pretty thing, printed in three colors with elephants, Quakers, and almost everything but first string pitchers.

If Mr. Mack can finish in the first division with the pitching gentleman he lists in his fancy roster he is even a greater manager than he has been acclaimed these many decades.

The chief claim to distinction possessed by the A's pitchers is that three of them admit that they weigh more than 200 pounds and that one of them who claims to weigh 190 probably outweighs each of the admitted 200 pounders.

Boy, Find the Rest of Kline!

The big hurlers, whose weights appear under the imprint of a trumpeting elephant, are Henry R. Winston, 6 feet 4 inches and weight 226, a semi-pro free agent from Raleigh, N. C.; Alton Benton, also 6 feet 4 inches, weight 203, purchased from Oklahoma City; and John Marcum, 5 feet 10 inches, weight 200, who joined the A's late last year after a long term in Louisville.

The behemoth not listed as such is Bob Kline, who went to the A's from Boston in the Lefty Grove transaction. The roster gives Bob's weight. However, in filling out a questionnaire for the editors of "Who's Who in Major League Baseball" a year ago, Robert gave his weight at 230, probably a low estimate. It is probable that the aforementioned big four actually weigh in the neighborhood of a half ton, which is perfectly fitting for a team that uses the elephant for ornamental purposes.

Even the Number Is Bad.

The roster carries the names of thirteen pitchers to supplant such stars and former stars as Lefty Grove, George Earnshaw, Rube Walberg, and Eddie Rommell. No three of the roster figure to contribute a grand total of victories equal to that of Grove in any of his last five years with the A's.

Here are the names, and how do they register with you? Alton Benton, Merritt Cain, Joe Cascarella, Raymond Coombs, William Dietrich, Vernon Kennedy, Bob Kline, E. J. McKeithan, Le Roy Mahaffey, John Marcum, Harry Matuzak, Emil A. Roy, and Henry R. Winston.

And then here are the catchers, and, as had been suspected, without the listing of one Mickey Cochrane: Charles Berry, Frank W. Hayes, and Edward Madjeski.

Then Comes, Last but Best —.

American league opposition can smile out of the other side of the mouth when the nineteenth name on the roster is reached. Here is entry No. 19: "Foxx, James E., Margate City, N. J., 28 years old, 5 feet 11, weight 188." Scoff at the pitchers and catchers if you will, fans, but that Entry No. 19 is an entry as is an entry.

And No. 20 on the list represents about the best there is in young infielders. This one reads: "Higgins, Frank, 919 Clinton street, Dallas, Tex., 24 years old, 6 feet 1, weight 185." At his next sale Connie Mack can get about $50,000 for this one.

And who else do you think still is on the list? No other than that fine old gentleman from Vinton, Ia., Bing Miller. Bing's still listed among the active outfielders, although he's only a few years younger than Connie Mack.

The brochure lists twenty-seven exhibition games for the A's, including the spring city series of five games with the Phillies.

STUHLEY WINS FROM ROSS IN EIGHT ROUNDS

Young Stuhley, Kewanee, Ill., defeated Phil Ross, Chicago middleweight, in the eight round windup bout of the professional boxing show at the Midway arena, 6115 Cottage Grove avenue, last night. Gene Higgins won a five round decision over Scotty Sylvano in the semi-windup. Other results:

Joey Bozak beat Johnny Mirabal [4].
Jimmy Richards beat Sammy Wallace [4].
John Holda beat Jim High, nine minutes [wrestling].

OPPONENTS CAN'T HALT DE PAUL, BUT EXAMS DO TRICK

De Paul university's undefeated basketball team has called a temporary halt in its winning streak while the players take semester examinations.

The Blue Demons will not try for their seventh straight victory until Jan. 29, when they meet North Central at Naperville.

Chicago Next Opponent for Irish Quintet

Notre Dame, Ind., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—The Notre Dame basketball team, with its 22 game winning streak broken at Pittsburgh Saturday night, will go after its 14th consecutive home victory Wednesday in a game with the University of Chicago.

Chicago's impressive 35 to 22 victory over Michigan Saturday, after taking an earlier beating, 34 to 18, at Ann Arbor, led Coach George Keogan to speed up his drill today.

He had no alibi to offer on the defeat by Pittsburgh, saying he believes Notre Dame will play better ball than ever in its remaining 12 games, now that the tension of the long winning streak has been broken. He made no comment on the "jinx" floor at Pittsburgh, which has stopped many of Pitt's opponents who played to better advantage on other floors.

The great improvement shown by Chicago's sophomore team, Minnesota's unexpected strength, and the fine form shown by Ohio State in conference games to date has made the rest of the Notre Dame schedule appear more difficult than previously. Notre Dame also meets Michigan State, Butler, Marquette, Temple, Xavier, Detroit, and Valparaiso. Two games are scheduled against Minnesota.

Keogan will build his defense to stop Bill Harrlow, Chicago forward, who has scored 38 points in four conference games. Gordon Peterson, Maroon center, who stands 6 feet 4 inches, has an inch advantage on Capt. Ed [Moose] Krause of Notre Dame.

MONMOUTH AT BRADLEY

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Back in the Little Nineteen basketball race after defeating Knox Friday night, Bradley will seek two more victories this week, meeting Monmouth at the Peoria armory tomorrow night and Augustana at Rock Island Friday.

Bradley will be able to start the Monmouth game with full strength, as both Bill Getz and Harvey Corbin, important cogs on the offense, have returned to duty. Coach A. J. Robertson wil start Getz and Neve Harms at forward, Corbin at center, and Capt. Lee Handley and Bob Zimmerman at guards.

While Bradley has been losing to Big Ten teams in the early season Monmouth has come through to win five out of seven starts, losing two games by the margin of a field goal. Bobby Woll, for three years a jinx to Tech teams, and Jack Ozburn, high scoring center, are the main threats for the visitors.

Bradley freshmen play the Illinois Military Academy five from Abingdon as a preliminary tomorrow.

NORMAL AT CHARLESTON.

Bloomington, Ill., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Charleston Teachers and State Normal will resume their basketball rivalry at Charleston tomorrow night. Each team has won two games and lost one in the Little Nineteen conference race.

Rolla Rand, at forward for Charleston, has an average of ten points for the three league games.

Either Jake Volc, veteran, or L. Jester, a new man, will get the call at center for Charleston. Ballard will be at the other forward while Tedrick and Burgess will be the guards.

Normal will start Capt. Pim Goff and Dale Davis at forward. Edward Fitzgerald at center, and Herb Adams and Glen Jacquat at guards.

U. S. G. A. DROPS MAINTENANCE OF TURF EXPERIMENT

Experimental turf gardens on A. D. Lasker's estate in Lake Forest and Arlington, Va., conducted by the United States Golf association to aid clubs throughout the country to keep their greens and fairways in perfect condition, have been discontinued, it was learned yesterday.

However, it is believed three organizations may vote on maintaining the experimental work. They are the Western Golf association, Chicago District Golf association and the National association of Greenskeepers.

Lorber Joins North Shore Trio Saturday

Herb Lorber will make his 1934 debut Saturday night in the Metropolitan Indoor Polo league tournament at the 124th Field Artillery arena, Cottage Grove avenue and 52d street.

Recovered from a bad spill he took last September in an outdoor game, Lorber will be in shape to flash the type of play that earned him a five goal indoor rating during the 1933 indoor season.

Lorber will team up with Frank Bering and Jim Hannah, in the hope of carrying the North Shore Polo and Hunt club's colors to victory over the Cleveland Riding club.

The combination of Hannah, Lorber, and Bering brought Chicago the high goal class B title in the 1933 indoor national tournament.

GOLDEN GLOVES ENTRIES POUR IN FOR PEORIA TEAM

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—The out of town representation in the Peoria Golden Gloves tournament this year will be the greatest in the five year history of the meet. As proof of the ever growing popularity of Golden Gloves competition, the Peoria Journal Transcript sport department has received entries from 15 cities and towns in the Peoria area and probably twice that many will have entrants in the tournament when the entries close on Feb. 1.

New champions must be determined in at least five of the eight divisions and with the field thus thrown wide open, entries are pouring in at a record pace. Seventy boys, most of them novices, already have indicated their intention of contesting for the Golden Gloves titles.

The Peoria tournament is to be held at the Majestic theater, Feb. 5, 6 and 12.

State Ruling Costs Prep Coach Job at South Bend

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Earl Kuhny, basketball coach at Central High school, will be forced to resign at the end of the present season by a state board of education ruling which becomes effective next fall. Under the ruling any coach in a major sport must have a physical education license or 15 accredited physical education hours. Coach Kuhny has neither. Authorities were noncommittal on a successor. However, Roy Parmenter, former Purdue basketball star, took up his teaching and coaching duties at Central Junior High school today.

LACROSSE TEAM TO RESUME PLAY ON SOUTH SIDE

Chicago will continue to have a team in the North American Lacrosse league, Mique Malloy, Chicago promoter, said yesterday. Malloy said he had obtained the Chicago franchise and games will be played at the Dexter Park pavilion, 41st and Halsted streets.

Malloy's announcement followed reports yesterday that the Chicago Blue Ribbons had disbanded and that Chicago would no longer be represented in the circuit. The Blue Ribbons played their home games at the Arcadia Gardens, 4444 Broadway.

"I believe south side fans will support lacrosse," Malloy said. "We expect to get together a strong team and will begin play at the Dexter Park pavilion as soon as plans are completed."

MICKEY JOY BEATS STROPPA; DECISION IS BOOED

Mickey Joy, Chicago junior welterweight, scored his thirteenth consecutive victory last night by defeating Johnny Stroppa of Canada in the eight round windup of the weekly show at Marigold Gardens, Grace street and Broadway. The decision was booed by the crowd of 900.

Stroppa suffered a severe cut over his left eye in the opening round. He floored Joy in the second round for a two count. In other bouts Chuck Reed knocked out Roosevelt Haines in the third round; Frankie Keevil beat Jack O'Connell in four rounds; Jimmy Cummings won from Mickey O'Shea in four rounds, and in the four round opening bout Harold Dunnington beat George Schrosbree.

Golden Gloves Boxers Given Examinations

Gloves competition is too tough, despite the fact that a few weeks ago he ordered Charles to quit a job as chauffeur because of the danger of driving an automobile.

Ability to go three rounds with Barney Ross in the featherweight division in the 1929 tournament, which title Ross won, has caused Mike Gilardi, a 22 year old barber, to try for the lightweight crown this year.

Probably the oldest to appear last night was 26 year old Fred Mont, who first took a liking for boxing at a high school in Michigan, more than five years ago. He is a lightweight. He has a boxer tattooed on his left shoulder and he's not sorry.

John Heinen Jr. hopes to follow in the footsteps of his father who was a heavyweight boxer a quarter of a century ago. Junior is a welterweight but he expects to fill out and become a heavyweight title aspirant if his enthusiasm for boxing isn't overcome by his love for football, which he played at De La Salle high school last year.

Sportsmanship cost Harold Hart the North Suburban flyweight championship in 1932 so he plans to get even by winning the 112 pound title at the Stadium, Feb. 27. Hart forfeited his semi-final match to a 16 year old boy because he "didn't want to hurt him," he said.

Stanley Kogut and Augustine Peters were sitting on the stairs of Trafton's gymnasium some time before the clerks were ready to handle the first of the numerous entries at 6:30 o'clock. Kogut was the first boy in the open division to report and Peters the first in the novice class.

JIMMY CLABBY, HERO OF BOXING WARS, IS BURIED

Last Rites at Ridgelawn Cemetery, Hammond.

Jimmy Clabby was buried yesterday afternoon at Ridgelawn cemetery, on the outskirts of Hammond, the town where he opened a career in 1906 which a few years later was to earn him recognition as one of the world's greatest welterweights and middleweight boxers and brought him a fortune of a half million dollars that was dissipated long before he engaged in his last battle 10 years ago.

Relatives and a few hundred friends, headed by Mike Gibbons, former St. Paul boxer, who was one of Clabby's bitterest middleweight rivals, and Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion in 1911, escorted the body through the rain to the burial grounds.

Gibbons Is Grieved.

Gibbons was visibly affected by the death of Clabby, who died of alcoholism and exposure in a little hut at Calumet City last Friday. The former St. Paul Phantom, who is a well to do business man in his home town, admired Clabby's ability as a boxer and despite their gruelling scraps has remained a loyal friend.

Chief mourners were Clabby's widow, Mrs. Phyllis Clabby; three children, James, Patricia and Phyllis; two sisters, Mrs. James Bambrough, Hobart, Ind., and Mrs. Herr an Homan, Hammond; four brothers, John, William, Richard, and Lawrence.

Married in Australia.

Mrs. Clabby became the bride of Jimmy during his visit to Australia in 1917. She had been separated from the former champion for several years. Mrs. Clabby had not given up hope, however, of inspiring Clabby to start things anew.

BADGERS LOSE HORWITZ, STAR BANTAM BOXER

Madison, Wis., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Wisconsin's prospects in boxing received a jolt with the announcement today that Dave Horwitz, all-university bantamweight champion for three years, will be graduated in February.

Horwitz, probably the Badgers' surest point winner, lacked one course for graduation next month. Several other engineering students also needed only this course, so the faculty decided to give it immediately after the midyear examinations. By devoting themselves intensively to this course alone, students will be able to finish it within a few weeks—and before the extramural boxing meets are held.

Horwitz never lost a bout at Wisconsin. Last year he knocked out his St. Thomas college and Northwestern opponents in less than two rounds each.

Coach Johnny Walsh is expected to move Ralph Russell up into the bantamweight class to take Horwitz's place, but this will weaken the flyweight division.

EDITH McCORMICK ACREAGE BOUGHT BY J. M. SIMPSON

Will Build Home on Part of Famous Estate.

BY AL CHASE.

Identity of the recent purchaser of nine acres of the Edith Rockefeller McCormick estate at Lake Forest, which had been closely guarded by brokers and attorneys, was disclosed yesterday. It is John M. Simpson, younger son of James Simpson, chairman of the board of directors of the Commonwealth Edison company. Mr. Simpson paid $75,000 for the nine acres at the northeast corner of the McCormick estate.

MRS. JOHN M. SIMPSON. [Du Bois Photo.]

Mr. Simpson, who last April married Constance Hasler, daughter of Mrs. Edward L. Hasler of Lake Forest, said yesterday that he and his wife expect to build a small, informal type of English house early in the coming spring. The residence will be entirely fireproof and will be situated so that it will overlook the lake. No architect has yet been engaged.

Tract Near Famous Villa.

The tract purchased by Mr. Simpson is at the northeast corner of the McCormick estate and is just north of the famous Villa Turicum and separated from it by a ravine. The property is bounded on the north by Westleigh road, on the east by the lake, on the west by the villa gardens adjacent to the service building, and on the south by the middle line of the ravine, subject to a survey now being made.

Mr. and Mrs. Simpson lived last summer in the Frank Hibbard residence at Shore Acres Golf club, Lake Bluff, which they rented. They are now living in an apartment at 229 Lake Shore drive. If construction on the new Lake Forest residence gets under way as contemplated, they hope to occupy it early in the summer.

Sale to Redeem Judgment.

The sale of the nine acres to Mr. Simpson, who was represented by Albert H. Wetten & Co., was the result of an order entered by Judge John F. O'Connell of the Probate court. This order authorized the Chicago Title and Trust company, executor of the will of Mrs. McCormick, to make the sale and thus be able to redeem all of Mrs. McCormick's estate in Lake Forest from the judgment sale brought about by the American National Bank and Trust company.

The Edith Rockefeller McCormick estate, comprising the fifty-two room Villa Turicum and 206 acres, was sold on Oct. 24 for $51,624 at a sheriff's sale, representing the amount of the judgment obtained by the old Straus National bank against Mrs. McCormick during her lifetime, plus interest to the date of sale.

POTATOES GAIN 5 CENTS; BUTTER AND EGGS STEADY

Potatoes gained 5 cents on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, while butter futures closed unchanged to ¼ cent lower and eggs were unchanged to ⅛ cent higher.

New selling appeared in potatoes on the bulge as the present basis of cash and futures permitting hedging at a profit of the seller.

Eggs opened lower, January dropping under selling by longs, but shorts started buying and the market rallied. Receipts were sharply under last year, while storage withdrawals maintain a fairly heavy rate, in view of the total stocks available.

Butter news was of little interest and the market continued dull.

Sales: Butter, 29 cars; eggs, 42 cars; potatoes, 16 cars. Deliveries: Butter, 1 car. Prices:

RFC Owns 904 Millions of Stock in 40% of U. S. Banks

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—Authorizations for purchases of preferred stocks and capital notes aggregating $904,700,000 in 5,596 banks had been made up to Saturday, Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, said today.

These purchases have been made to strengthen the capital srtucture of national and state banks to make them eligible for membership in the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation and to expand loaning facilities in aid of the recovery program.

The first goal set by the RFC was to make purchases totaling $1,000,000,000, but it is now predicted that this will be exceeded, and may run to $1,350,000,000, the amount set in the federal budget.

Partner in 40 Per Cent of Banks.

Already the government has a partnership in about forty per cent of the going banks of the country, and in a small percentage of cases, a controlling stock interest.

With this task well on its way to completion Mr. Jones announced that even more vigorous attention would be given to the authorization of loans to closed banks so as to permit payments to depositors. Up to date, he said, authorizations for this purpose had totaled $647,000,000 and he predicted that they might reach $1,000,000,000 by June 30. In these transactions the RFC takes over as collateral sound assets of the closed banks, which, however, may take some time to liquidate.

The first step in this program was to concentrate on banks which closed subsequent to Jan. 1, 1933, and it has been decided as the next move to deal with banks which closed after Jan. 30, 1932.

Statement o nDeposit Plan.

C. B. Merriam, a director of the RFC and chairman of its deposit liquidation board, made public today the following instructions to his district chairmen:

"The deposit liquidation board has decided to ask you to complete as rapidly as possible the applications of state banks which closed subsequent to June 30, 1932. It is felt that since the depositors in banks which closed prior to that date have in most cases already received substantial dividends it will be in order to have the applications from the receivers of those banks come directly through the RFC agencies.

"However, applications from receivers of banks closed prior to June 30, 1932, which are being appraised should be sent on to the deposit liquidation board in the regular way."

AUBURN TO PUT OUT A NEW AUTO, CORD ANNOUNCES

The Auburn Automobile company will introduce a new line of automobiles this year under a new name, E. L. Cord, chairman, said in the annual report to stockholders made yesterday. The statement showed a deficit of $2,307,972 on 1933 operations on a consolidated basis as compared with a net loss of $592,000 in the preceding year.

An optimistic note was struck, however, by Chairman Cord in his letter to shareholders. "New developments and the indicated improvement in general business lead the management to believe that the recent trend in the company's sales and earnings will be reversed and that your company will enjoy a successful year," he said.

The company's fiscal year ended Nov. 30. At the year end current assets stood at $8,549,000 and current liabilities of $618,443.

GENERAL MOTORS OVERSEAS SALES IN 1933 RISE 56%

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Overseas car and truck sales of General Motors corporation for the year 1933 amounted to 121,662 units, an increase of 56 per cent over 1932, it was announced today.

Since March, when the upturn began, the company stated, the gains over corresponding months in the previous years became increasingly greater, and during the last quarter of 1933 alone, the volume ran far ahead not only of 1932, but of 1931 and 1930 as well.

REDISTRIBUTION OF WORLD GOLD MARKED IN 1933

England Biggest Gainer, Russia Next.

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

GENEVA, Jan. 22.—Evidence that during 1933 there occurred to a considerable degree that "redistribution of gold" which a number of authorities have long been demanding for the sake of recovery is to be found in the figures giving the monetary gold reserves in the January number of the league of nations monthly bulletin of statistics, out today.

At the end of 1933 the reserves of the block of sterling countries composed of England, Sweden, Portugal, and Greece totaled $1,036,000,000 in gold against $674,000,000 the year before. Of this increase of $414,000,000 the Bank of England got $346,000,000, a rise of 60 per cent.

Changes in Gold Block.

In the same twelve months reserves of the four members of the gold block, France, Switzerland, Holland, and Poland fell from $4,205,000,000 to $3,831,000,000, a decline of $374,000,000, to which France contributed $226,000,000 and Switzerland $91,000,000. Of the other members of the gold block, Italian reserves increased $66,000,000, Belgium $19,000,000.

Those of Germany fell from $209,000,000 to 109,000,000. The United States lost only $33,000,000.

The world's total, excluding Russia, rose only $18,000,000 from $11,633,000,000 to $11,651,000,000.

Russia Is Big Gainer.

Aside from England the great gainer is Russia, whose reserves rose from $349,000,000 in July, 1932, to $416,000,000 in September, 1933. Russia now ranks fifth in gold reserves, following the United States, France, England, and Spain. A dozen of the normally debtor countries in Europe, Latin America and Asia increased their gold reserves during the year.

The value of world trade, according to the bulletin, increased in the third quarter of 1933 compared with the first quarter by 3 per cent in imports and 7 per cent in exports. There is usually a fall in trade during the third quarter.

About 60 banks and banking houses recieved allotments.

CITY MEMBER BANKS GRANT MORE CREDIT; GROSS DEPOSITS GAIN

Moderate expansion in outstanding credit and indicated gross deposits was shown by reserve member banks in principal cities last week. The weekly report, issued yesterday and covering members in 90 cities, showed an increase of 59 millions in all types of credit outstanding and an indicated expansion of 95 millions in gross deposits.

Some 20 millions of the credit expansion was accounted for by additional commercial loans. The previous reports of the member banks in New York and Chicago showed a gain of about the same amount in commercial loans. The aggregate 13 million increase in government bond holdings was also approximately the same as that reported earlier by member banks in the two largest cities.

Collateral loans of the reporting banks contracted 11 millions, while investments, other than government bonds, were up 37 millions. Reserve balances at the federal reserve banks were down 21 millions, but borrowings from the reserve were unchanged at 21 millions.

Following are comparisons of the principal resources and liabilities of member banks in the 90 leading cities as at the close of business Wednesday [in millions of dollars]:

DON'T Be Guilty of Causing WORRY!

Many times, perhaps, your wife or your mother have been worried because you failed to get home at your usual time. Don't let them worry like this again! If you are delayed, call home. No need to keep loved ones in suspense when it is so easy and costs so little to telephone. When you are out of town a daily call home will be a joy and comfort both to yourself and those who await your return. Whether you telephone from across the state or across the continent the moderate cost of your call will be many times repaid by the happiness it will bring.

THE PROVIDENT MUTUAL IN 1933

ASSETS increased during 1933 from $261,387,000 to $268,225,000.

PREMIUMS AND INTEREST received amounted to $47,700,000, as compared with $45,200,000 in 1932.

INSURANCE IN FORCE declined only 4.4% to $954,411,000.

NEW PAID INSURANCE amounted to $71,500,000, a decrease of 25% below the figure for 1932.

NEW PAID ANNUITIES provide for annual payments to annuitants of $1,095,000, an increase of 61% over the new annuities for 1932.

PAYMENTS TO POLICYHOLDERS totaled $35,000,000 as compared with $35,300,000 in 1932.

CASH AND U. S. GOVERNMENT SECURITIES total $15,205,000 as compared with $7,331,000 a year ago.

ACTUAL MARKET QUOTATIONS at the end of the year of all bonds and stocks—other than U. S. Government Securities—were only 9.4% below book values as compared with 12.5% in 1932. It is interesting that thirteen years ago, in 1920, the figure was more than 18%.

GENERAL CONTINGENCY RESERVES stand at $18,308,000, slightly above last year's figure. This is the sum held for the additional protection of our policyholders and is the amount that remains after applying $1,574,000 to write down certain investment values and after making provision for all liabilities including $5,212,000 for policyholders' dividends for the year 1934 and two Special Contingency Reserves amounting to $1,575,000. By making a moderate adjustment for 1934 in policyholders' net costs—which on life and endowment policies had remained unchanged for six years—the Company has been able to adopt the conservative course above outlined and at the same time maintain its General Contingency Reserves at full strength.

U. S. NEEDS MORE WORLD TRADE TO PUSH RECOVERY

Drop in Exports Cuts National Income.

BY REUBEN CAHN.

A high government official, usually credited with knowing what he was talking about, estimated in 1929 that two million American families derived their support from the export trade. By statistical gymnastics a more exact figure can be arrived at, but two million is a fair approximation.

At the time we were selling goods abroad to the value of 5,240 million dollars. Last year our exports totaled 1,650 million dollars. That is a reduction of 68 per cent.

But the drop has been even a little greater than that, for the 1929 dollar was a hundred cent dollar, but now it varies like the price of corn, 60 cents today, maybe 58⅝ cents tomorrow. Comparisons with previous years in terms of dollars are no longer valid. Reference must be made to a common denominator. Expressing our foreign business in French francs, the principal money piece which is the same now as it was five years ago, we arrive at this comparison: American exports in 1929 totaled 133,767 million francs; in 1933, 32,544 million francs. That was a reduction of 76 per cent.

Many Families Lose Income.

Assuming, as seems fair, that the number of persons supported by the export trade has been reduced in the same ratio as our foreign sales, it appears that the bread winners of 1,500,000 families have been deprived of the opportunity of winning bread as a result of the decline in our foreign markets.

The hope of 1,500,000 returning to work is therefore identified with the prospects for reviving foreign trade. That is about one-eighth of the unemployed. Increased exports alone will not terminate the depression, but neither can the depression be expected to end without some increase in our foreign trade.

There are many who minimize the importance of a world market for our goods. They say that whereas England exports 25 per cent of her production and Germany 20 per cent of hers, we sell abroad only 6 per cent of our total output. Let England worry about her foreign sales, say they, but let us concentrate on the 94 per cent we sell at home.

U. S. Has Different Situation.

England, Germany, and other countries of Europe trade heavily with one another. The foreign trade of any one country therefore appears to be a large percentage of its total business. Incidentally it is not England or Germany but Denmark which has the largest per capita foreign trade. With the United States it is different.

Being a producer of both raw materials and finished products; a grower of things found distinctively in the temperate and distinctively in tropical zones; with extensive mining as well as farming, and with an area four-fifths as large as all of Europe, we include in domestic trade much of what European countries classify as foreign trade.

But this does not mean that exports are not important—more important than is indicated by the 6 per cent. The fact is that a vast number of our industries are adjusted to a basis of producing for the world market. A very considerable part of the cost of manufacturing is in fixed charges. Our industries expanded with the expectation of distributing the fixed charges incident to the expansion over a large volume of product, partly to be sold in the United States and partly to be sold abroad.

Who Will Pay Fixed Charges?

In 1929 we exported half of our cotton and motorcycles; one-third of our lubricating oil, kerosene, lard, copper, and typewriters; one-fourth of our farm implements, cash registers, and sewing machines; 18 per cent of our wheat, and 10 per cent of our automobiles, apples, rubber boots, and gasoline. If the foreign market is not to be made available, Americans who buy goods made here must pay not only their own share of the fixed charges but also what was expected to be collected from the foreigners.

The more industrialized a country becomes, the more dependent it is upon world trade. In connection with the improvement of the standard of living in the United States we have become one of the most highly industrialized nations. From foreign countries we need sisal, jute, silk, rubber, tin, platinum, nickel, antimony, and asbestos, because we cannot produce them. We also need wool, manganese, chromite, vanadium, monazite sand, and abrasives, because our production of them is inadequate. But as much and more we need foreign markets for an opportunity to sell a portion of our product, which will bring down the cost of what we consume ourselves and also provide employment for a substantial number of our citizens.

Steel Wages Increase 70%, Survey Shows

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 22.—Labor has been the first beneficiary of the steel code so far, according to a special report on the steel industry which has just been issued by W. S. Tower, executive secretary of the American Iron and Steel institute.

"From last June, the first month for which steel mill employment and pay rolls were compiled in connection with the code, to November, the latest month for which figures are available, the direct outlay for wages, exclusive of salaries, by the steel industry showed an increase per ton of finished steel produced of 70 per cent," says the report.

Output and Wages.

"In June the approximate production of finished rolled steel was 1,870,000 tons and total wages, exclusive of salaries, to mill labor amounted to $24,434,000, or $13 a ton. In November output was approximately 1,110,000 tons of finished rolled steel and wages were $24,838,000, or $22 a ton. Thus, with production down by 40 per cent, wage earners actually were paid $400,000 more in November than in June.

"The second beneficiary of the steel code has been the consumer. Stable markets for steel are not only necessary to support the heavily added wage burden but they are also of distinct benefit to consumers. The chief advantage to users of steel will be the banishment of speculation in prices, secret practices, which have long been prevalent in the steel industry.

"Under the code there is one price basis for all users, as a result of which secret price concessions cannot put one user at a competitive disadvantage with another in the same line.

Holds Fair Profit Necessary.

"The possible benefits of the owners of the steel companies, that is, the security holders, still lie in the future. Very properly, labor and consumers are the first to derive direct benefits, but unless the steel industry is able to earn a fair profit and make a fair return to investors as well as provide a decent living wage for its employés, the recovery effort in the steel industry under the code will not prove a permanent success."

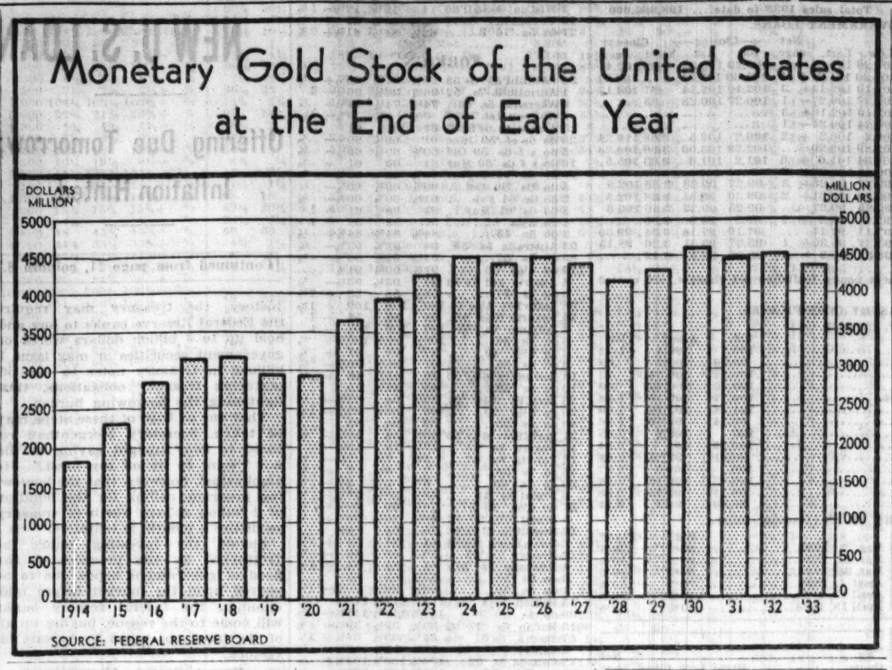
Estimates today by the institute, based on telegraphic and telephonic reports from 98 per cent of the steel mills, indicate an operating rate of 32.5 per cent of production, which was 1.7 per cent less than the 34.2 per cent reported last Monday. A month ago the rate was 31.6 per cent of activity.

GOODYEAR, SEARS ARE ACCUSED OF CHECKING PRICES

Akron, O., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Evidence that Goodyear Tire and Rubber company and Sears, Roebuck & Co. "compared prices" before price changes were made known to Goodyear's own sales organization was introduced today as the federal trade commission began the second week of its hearing on the charge that the Goodyear-Sears trade contract is a violation of the Clayton act.

The price comparison evidence was in the form of a letter from R. S. Wilson, Goodyear vice president and sales manager, to the late J. H. Westrich who was Sears' tire sales manager.

The letter discussed a "Speedway" Goodyear tire and said: "I want you to know that while we are actively going ahead with our own plans within our own organization to get ready to meet Firestone, we are absolutely saying nothing to our field organization about the tire in any manner."



63% of Total Deposits Held by 200 Banks

Sixty-three per cent of the total deposits of commercial banks in the United States were in the hands of 200 large institutions at the end of 1933. Aggregate deposits were $33,000,000,000, of which the 200 largest banks held $20,151,412,000 at the close of the year. A year earlier the 200 largest banks held 58 per cent of the total. These facts were revealed in the annual survey of the American Banker, made public yesterday.

Rank of Chicago Banks.

Five Chicago banks rank among the 50 largest banks in the country, the survey revealed. The five, with their rank among the nation's banks according to size, and their year-end deposit figures follow: Fifth, Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company, $629,944,000; seventh, First National Bank of Chicago, $582,865,000; twenty-first, Northern Trust company, $199,545,000; thirty-third, Harris Trust and Savings bank, $133,893,000; forty-eighth, City National Bank and Trust company, $84,879,000.

Aggregate deposits of the first 100 banks were $17,440,034,000, as compared with $18,314,619,000 a year ago. Capital was $1,163,512,000, as compared with $1,365,615,000 last year.

Ten Largest Institutions.

The ten largest banks in the country as listed by the banking journal with their total deposits at the year-end are:

Chase National, N. Y.	$1,338,699,324
National City, N. Y.	1,117,159,221
Guaranty Trust Co., N. Y.	1,019,582,652
Bank of Am., San Fr.	767,817,646

The Bank of America, the Giannini chain bank on the west coast, rose from fifth to fourth place during the year, passing the Continental Illinois of Chicago.

ROOSEVELT MAKES PERSONAL PROTEST ON GERMAN BOND PLAN

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—[Special.]—Two protests by American Ambassador Dodd in Berlin against the Reichsbank's discriminatory treatment of American holders of a billion dollars' worth of German bonds having been left unanswered, President Roosevelt today took the highly unusual course of calling German Ambassador Luther to the White House to renew the protest in person.

The President definitely asked that American creditors receive the same treatment as the creditors of other nations. This referred to especially favorable treatment given to Swiss and Dutch bondholders. Another point was that Germany's action was taken without consulting her creditors and that German securities depreciated by the German government's own action had been repurchased at sacrifice prices with German funds that would otherwise have been available for the American bondholders.

SEARS AWARDS CONTRACT FOR $1,500,000 STORE

The general contract for the erection of the $1,500,000 Sears, Roebuck & Co. department store at the southeast corner of Halsted and 63d streets was awarded yesterday to the B-W Construction company, of which Joseph H. Beuttas is president. Nimmons, Carr & Wright are the architects.

The north section of the old Becker-Ryan department store is now being demolished by the Goldman Wrecking company. On Feb. 5 the wreckers will start tearing down the south end of the store. On March 1 work will start on the new five story structure, with the expectation of having it ready for business about Nov. 1.

Dollar Turns Down; Market Grows Quiet

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 22.—The foreign exchange market turned comparatively quiet today after its stormy sessions of last week. Saturday's ratios between the principal world currencies showed little change and speculative operations were on the wane because of the dearth of spot news affecting the market.

The gold worth of the dollar was slightly lower as measured by its price against the French franc, the leading gold currency. The franc closed at 6.27½ cents, indicating a gold worth for the dollar of 62.43 cents, a decline slightly more than a third of a cent from last week's final quotation. The British pound sterling was also quiet after its violent fluctuations of last week. The final quotation on the pound here was $5.00¼, up a quarter of a cent over Saturday's last price. The Canadian dollar closed unchanged at 99 cents in American funds.

Mysterious Gold Shipment.

Interest in the financial district was aroused by the "mysterious gold shipment" which is scheduled to arrive here Wednsday. The Cunard line announced that the Mauretania will bring in at that time an unspecified amount of gold. No information concerning the shipment, which is said to amount to $620,000, could be obtained at the federal reserve bank.

The $620,000 figure was guessed at because Samuel Montau & Co., London bullion brokers, reported last week that that amount had been exported from London to the United States in the preceding week.

This followed reports from Paris that private French bankers were shipping small amounts on both the Mauretania and the Europa, though these reports could not be verified.

Test U. S. Gold Price.

The purpose of the shipment was said to be an attempt to test the United States bid price of $34.45 advertised by the treasury. The foreigners are in effect calling the reserve bank to make good its offer to buy gold of foreign origin at that figure.

If it is purchased at the advertised price it will give the shippers a neat profit, inasmuch as the price in London, including a premium of 9 to 11 pence, averages about $1 less than the American price, or $33.25 to $33.45. Today it figured out $33.23 with the pound at $5.

Purchase of $5,000,000 of gold in the open London market, credited to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York as agent for the United States treasury, was taken as indicating the movement of American capital from London to New York evidently is continuing, since use of $5,000,000 a day is required to keep the dollar steady.

RISE IN STOCKS COMES TO HALT; PRICES SEESAW

Gains, Losses About Even for Day.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 22.—Stocks were in a reactionary mood today, with hard-working bulls sitting on the sidelines after last week's exertions and waiting for the list to consolidate its gains.

The foreign trading saw an irregular extension of the advance in utilities, oils, steels, and liquors, but in the last hour a rather heavy tone developed. Selling pressure was mild for the most part, however, and the market had steadied by the time the closing bell sounded.

Reflecting the highly selective trend of trading, the close left a jumble of moderate gains and losses with recessions somewhat in the majority. Trading remained active with a turnover of 2,628,000 shares.

Oil Group Shows Strength.

Oils displayed by far the greatest staying powers, a lengthy list of stocks in that group showing fractional net gains. Stocks of many of the independent companies in the industry shared in the demand, with the Standards and other leaders.

Although the day's news was devoid of any significant change in the business picture, optimism over a spring upturn was undampened. Having anticipated the action, the street did not get excited over house passage of the administration's gold bill and attention was centered on the senate's handling of the measure.

Last week's advance in stocks had led traders to look for the late sell-off as overdue. The opening witnessed a continuation of profit taking selling which started Saturday, but the market continued to show an encouraging absorptive capacity.

Steels Rise, Then React.

Steels and utilities were features of strength, the steels being bolstered by reports of a further pickup in operations. United States Steel, Republic Iron and Steel, National Steel, and other leaders in the group brought new high prices for the movement. They were not spared in the closing selling, however, and posted fractional recession on the day.

Selling up to a new top for the bull drive, American Can came through the day conspicuously for a net advance of 2¼. Other pivotal industrials, however, failed to follow and a majority of them were found in the loss column at the close, including—aside from the steels—Chrysler, Du Pont, General Electric, General Motors, Radio, and Westinghouse.

Rails were firm in the morning, but succumbed to profit taking in the afternoon. Atchison, New York Central, and Pennsylvania were found among the losers on the day.

Utilities, foods, and chemicals likewise worked irregularly lower in the afternoon, after a good morning.

RETAIL FOODS RESUME UPTURN AFTER DECLINE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—Retail food prices began a new trend upward at the turn of the year, according to figures of the bureau of labor statistics announced today. This upswing between Dec. 19 and Jan. 2 marked the end of a steady decline during the previous six weeks.

The rise as of Jan. 2, was six-tenths of 1 per cent, with the index number at 104.5, as compared with 103.9 on Dec. 19. This index, based on the 1923 average as 100, places retail food prices 15½ per cent above the low level reached last April but 2¾ per cent below the high mark for last year—107.4 on Sept. 26.

Study of Prices Indicates Gold Buying Fails

An overdose of inflation is almost inevitable under the administration's present experimental monetary policy, according to Dr. Melvin T. Copeland of the Harvard business school faculty. Dr. Copeland has just concluded a study of prices designed to test the soundness of the theories behind the commodity dollar and the gold purchase program, the results of which were made public yesterday.

The study showed that the commodity dollar idea is not only unworkable in practice but is fraught with danger to the country and that the purchase of gold has not worked out according to the hopes of its proponents. His conclusions are based on a study of prices of thirteen important commodities over the period from 1926 to 1933.

Relationship Not Close.

Study of the price trends of the thirteen commodities shows that the relationship between the price of gold and the prices of the commodities is not sufficiently close or direct to make the managed currency plan feasible in actual practice, Dr. Copeland asserted.

Following the promulgation of the gold buying policy in October, 1933, he said, the prices of commodities did not move in precise harmony with the prices fixed from time to time by the government. The divergencies have been sufficient to call into question the assumptions of the theory.

In the first week in which the plan was effective, Dr. Copeland found, the price of copper, lead, tin, silver, rubber, saw silk, raw cotton, and wheat rose in varying degrees. Zinc remained stationary and in the second week began to decline. Raw wool and butter were unchanged for three weeks. Raw sugar was lower, but rose substantially in the second week. Coffee stayed at a lower level than that reached just before the gold policy went into effect.

Price Movements Vary.

"In view of the fact that in the week ending Dec. 23, for example," Dr. Copeland said, "while the paper price of gold was up 16 per cent, copper was up only 10 per cent, zinc down 6 per cent, tin up 14 per cent, rubber up 24 per cent, silk down 12 per cent, wheat up 4 per cent, and butter down 27 per cent, it is difficult to judge how much immediate effect to ascribe to the plan.

"One may even doubt as to whether the program for devaluing the dollar actually has any immediate effect on the prices of these sensitive commodities. Certainly if there has been any direct effect, that effect has varied radically as between the several commodities."

The conflicting trends might be explained by other factors, but to admit other factors except the gold purchase plan had an influence is to acknowledge that the theory behind the plan is fallacious, in Dr. Copeland's view.

CUT WORK, SPEED REORGANIZATION, IS GRIGSBY ORDER

Receivers of the Grigsby-Grunow company were ordered to restrict operations of the firm yesterday by Federal Judge John P. Barnes. At the same time he instructed bondholders and other interested parties to promote a speedy reorganization plan, warning that otherwise he may order the receivers to shut down the business.

PRESIDENT SETS TERMS OF HUGE NEW U. S. LOAN

Offering Tomorrow; Inflation Hinted.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—Faced with the greatest peace time test of government credit in history, President Roosevelt tonight called in his financial advisers to determine how the government can borrow 10 billion dollars in the next five months.

In a one hour conference with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. and other fiscal officials at the White House tonight, the President decreed that the borrowing of this huge sum, which is necessary to pay the bills of his recovery program between now and June 30, shall start on Wednesday.

Full details as to the loan which the treasury will then attempt to float as the opening gun in the borrowing were decided at the White House tonight, according to Secretary Morgenthau, but will be kept secret until Wednesday morning, when the government loan will be announced formally.

First Loan May Exceed Billion.

Financial circles here believe that the treasury will attempt to sell between a billion and a billion and a half dollars' of its securities on Wednesday. The interest rate, it is reported, will be around 3 per cent, and the maturity date is expected to be some time in 1936.

Those attending the White House conference tonight besides the President and Secretary Morgenthau were: Gov. Eugene R. Black of the federal reserve board; Gov. George L. Harrison of the New York Reserve bank, and two bond experts of the bank; Tom K. Smith and Earle Bailie, fiscal advisers to Secretary Morgenthau.

Besides taking up the immediate financing needs, Secretary Morgenthau laid before his chief a tentative plan for borrowing the whole 10 billions which will be needed before the end of June.

As the President and his treasury head took up this larger problem, the possibility loomed that before the borrowing is over it may force the treasury into some inflationary move such as selling government bonds direct to the federal reserve banks or printing money to retire maturing issues.

Ponder Two Courses.

Although he had previously declared that the treasury would borrow the money through orthodox financing methods, Secretary Morgenthau refused to deny before tonight's conference that the program now sketched involved inflationary aspects.

Admittedly facing the greatest peace time test of government credit in

New York, Jan. 22.—Prices were somewhat irregular in the listed bond market today, but domestic corporation issues averaged slight lower and United States Government long term issues and leading foreign loans unevenly higher. Trading totaled $18,417,000 of which domestic corporation bonds accounted for $14,528,000.

Closing prices for the long term treasury bonds were up 1-32d to 6-32ds point as the financial community speculated on the terms of the new treasury financing which is expected to be announced in a day or two.

Losses Not Severe.

The average losses in the domestic utility, railroad and industrial groups were generally less than many of the fairly long advances scored last week. The principal setbacks for the more active issues did not generally amount to more than a point or two, and some of them gained that amount.

Some of the rail liens that rose fractions to 2 or more points included some issues of Santa Fe, Atlantic Coast Line, Canadian Pacific, St. Paul, Rock Island, Colorado and Southern, Cuban railway, Delaware and Hudson, Denver and Rio Grande, K. C. Southern, M.-K.-T., Morris and Essex, Nickel Plate, Pere Marquette, Union Pacific, and Western Pacific.

Some Carrier Liens Ease.

Among the railway issues that declined were Southern railway, Frisco, Missouri Pacific, Erie, Chicago and North Western, Chesapeake corporation, and Allegheny corporation.

Fluctuations in prices of the leading foreign loans were chiefly confined to narrow limits. Gainers for the day included French government, Dutch East Indies, many of the German and most of the Latin-American loans.

Cudahy Packing.

Investors' Guide: Will you kindly furnish me with such information as is available on Cudahy Packing company?—J. G. T.

Answer: Fairly stable and substantial profits from sale of Old Dutch Cleanser and other side lines helped this leading meat packer to report fairly substantial profits without recourse to nonrecurring income during the last four years.

Packers generally during 1930, 1931, and 1932 saw their profit margin contracting, and what profit there was disappearing from inventory losses as a result of the continued downward trend of meat prices. During the closing months of the 1933 fiscal year meat prices reversed their trend, profit margins widened, and inventory profits took the place of inventory losses. As a result Cudahy's profit in 1933 doubled 1932 earnings, excluding a profit of $389,000 on the sale of treasury stock. This was in the face of a drop in sales of about $9,000,000. Tonnage sales were up about 4 per cent.

Year ended	Sales.	Net income.	Inc. per common share.
Oct. 31.
1933	$124,278,000	$1,814,000	$2.64
1932	133,314,000	906,000	.70
1931	181,482,000	2,010,000	3.06
1930	231,407,000	2,930,000	5.03

On Oct. 28, 1933, current assets, including $5,204,000 cash assets, aggregated $28,067,000 and current liabilities were $7,476,000. Funded debt, of which $11,280,000 will mature Oct. 1, 1937, totaled $17,735,000.

Colorado Utilities.

Investors' Guide: I am considering purchasing a bond of Colorado Utilities corporation, which has been offered to me at a substantial discount. Before purchasing, however, I would like an opinion from you.—E. O. A.

Answer: On March 1, 1933, only 75 per cent of interest due on the first 6s, due 1938, was paid. Nothing was paid on the coupons due Sept. 1, 1933. The bonds are a speculation.

U. S. OWNERSHIP OF RAILS OPPOSED BY LEADERS HERE

Cost Declared Too Great for Taxpayers.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

A number of important Chicago railway executives yesterday took issue with the position of Joseph B. Eastman, federal coördinator of transportation, with respect to ultimate government ownership of the railroads. They insisted that government ownership was not desirable for a number of reasons, including the cost the taxpayers would have to meet, and the political element.

Mr. Eastman, while predicting government operation as the ultimate solution of the railroad problem in his first report to President Roosevelt and congress, said he was not prepared at this time to recommend the adoption of such a course.

In commenting on the Eastman viewpoint the rail executives declined to let their names be used for obvious reasons.

Cost would Be "Terrific."

"I am opposed to Mr. Eastman's views on government ownership," one railroad president said, "the expense to the American taxpayers under government ownership would be terrific.

"Politics would be bound to enter into the operation of the roads and the nation would awake one fine day to find a huge new army which it would have to support through taxation. It is not possible for a politician to lay off voters.

"We have the example of public ownership of a railroad in Canada where the Canadian National is being operated at a large loss which must be met by the taxpayers.

"Public ownership will destroy private initiative. Do we want to sacrifice this attribute which has helped develop this country?"

"Mr. Eastman sees inconsistency in the fact that we have public regulation which brings us close to government operation. If there is inconsistency in the present setup, why not remove some of the government regulations which many of us feel are hampering us."

Means Absentee Management.

Another executive asserts that government ownership of the roads would produce a situation where every city would be only a way station to the "master minds" in charge of operation at Washington.

"One thing that the railroads are trying to do," he said, "is to build up a community of interest between the roads and the city and territories in which they operate. We have found that we can help ourselves by helping the communities in which we are located.

"Government ownership would give us an absentee management which would work to the disadvantage of the various cities. How would a board sitting in Washington take a real interest in the development of a city unless he came from that city. Chicago would find itself a way station under government control."

WHEAT PRICES SAG WHEN LONGS DROP HOLDINGS

Trade Is Awaiting Capital Developments.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Bullish news fell flat as a market influence in grains yesterday and there was a noticeable lack of aggressive buying in wheat from start to finish. Many local traders who were long over the week-end sold their holdings during the day and this kind of selling was largely responsible for an extreme decline of about 1 cent when May touched 89⅛ cents. Final trades were at net losses of ¾ to ⅞ cent.

An excellent class of buying developed in corn, part of which was regarded as having been for distilling account. However, the market closed at a net loss of ¼ cent, with May at 51⅞ to 52 cents. Oats were off ⅜ to ½ cent; May at 38¼ cents. Rye was 1 cent lower, May at 61⅝ cents. Barley dropped 1½ cents, May at 51 cents.

Trade Awaits Developments.

Professional operators are not active at present, awaiting further developments at Washington and in the general situation. A majority of commission houses continue to regard the buying side of wheat with favor, but this view is based to a considerable extent on the prospect of damage to the new winter wheat crop.

An increasing number of reports indicating crop damage in parts of the southwestern winter wheat belt were received yesterday. One well posted Kansas City interest said the condition in the western third of Kansas was probably lower than it was on Dec. 1.

Some easiness has developed in the cash wheat markets in the southwest, with selling demand less active.

Visible Supply Smaller.

As a result of the combination of the limited movement and fair flour sales the visible supply decreased 3,912,000 bushels last week and aggregated 115,381,000 bushels, or about 200,000 bushels in excess of the low level of last June. With that exception the total is the smallest since July, 1930, and the trade looks for a further reduction to be shown in the statement to be issued Jan. 29. A year ago stocks were 155,445,000 bushels.

Winnipeg reported a relatively slow export demand, with sales of 400,000 bushels in all positions. Futures closed 5/8 to 3/4 cent lower in the Canadian market, while Liverpool was ½ to ⅝ cent lower.
